Springs YMCA to Begin Building Plan Study

The Colorado Springs YMCA has begun a two-year study and development program leading up to a campaign for new YMCA facilities, now scheduled for January and February, 1967, according to Judge David Enoch who is president of the YMCA Board of Directors.

The Board entered into a contract in November of 1964 with the Campaign Management Services of the National Board of the YMCA which is to give leadership to the planning and direction of the money-raising phase of the program, according to Enoch.

The next year will be spent in a careful study of the purpose and program of the YMCA to determine what changes should be made for the future, and to determine what facilities are needed to serve the youth and adults of the Pikes Peak Region for the years ahead.

A Planning Committee made up of Board Members, and other leading citizens under the chairmanship of Al Erickson, Assistant Superintendent of School District No. 11, has been appointed, and held its first meeting on Monday evening, January 18 at the Hewlett - Packard plant on Garden of the Gods Road.

There is no question of the need for larger and more modern facilities for the YMCA, as the present building was built in 1901, when the area had fewer than 20,000 people, and when "Y" members were limited to young men, Enoch said. The expansion of service to boys, and later to all members of the family has made the present facilities completely inadequate. However, just what the facilities should be, how much they will cost, and how the funds are to be secured, are matters that need careful study, he said.

Judge Enoch also stated that a Site Committee had been appointed under the chairmanship of Al Cheney, Manager of the local Sears Roebuck store, and that Lee Baker, Byron Church, Bill Smartt and John Wallace

Banks Named Osteopathic Administrator

John L. Banks, 1502 Lorraine St., has been named administrator of the new Eisenhower Osteopathic Hospital here, it was announced Saturday by George A. Vradenburg, board president.

Banks, who has a long history of hospital administration while serving in the Armed Services is a native of San Francisco, California and received his discharge from the regular Army at Ft. Carson in 1956.

When asked why he chose Colorado Springs as a permanent home, Banks said "when Mrs. Banks and I drove through the downtown of the city on our way to the Fort for discharge and looked at the wide streets and the beautiful mountains we made our decision. After ten years we couldn't be more pleased."

He said, "Receiving this position as administrator of this beautiful little hospital is indeed a pleasant surprise. My knowledge of the osteopathic profession and its members was very little until a short time ago but I am rapidly learning that osteopathic doctors are fully qualified physicians in every sense. The care rendered here is complete.

"We are very proud of the nursing staff who are so intent in rendering personal service to each and every patient. That is the beauty of it (the hospital). The institution is small (44 medical, surgical, and obstetrical beds and 19 nursing home beds) and therein lies the secret. Everyone gets the personal care which is so essential to the hospitalized patient whether it be a baby care case, an emergency abdominal operation, or a case of pneumonia or back strain.

"I am proud to be in charge here principally because this is a challenge to me. The terrific odds against the success of this enterprise overwhelmed me. To think that a handful of people (the osteopaths) with the confidence and friendship of their patients and well-wishers could undertake and make succeed this project representing almost three quarters of a million dollars was almost unbelieveable. They went to the general public for help. They were dedicated to the work they had cut out for themselves. They worked extremely hard and are succeeding.

U.S. May Still Enlarge Viet War, Bundy Declares

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. spokesman on Far Eastern policy said Saturday that U.S. withdrawal from South Viet Nam is "unthinkable." He held open the possibility of enlarging the war in response to Communist actions.

Asst. Secretary of State William P. Bundy said that in the past year infiltration of Red guerrilla fighters and supplies from North Viet Nam through Laos and South Viet Nam has "markedly increased."

This infiltration "has included for the first time significant numbers of indigenous North Vietnamese trained in North Viet Nam in regular military units," he said.

Bundy's discussion of Vietnamese problems and U.S. policy for dealing with them was contained in a speech prepared for the Chamber of Commerce in Washington, Mo.

His speech confirmed publicly information disclosed by high officials here Friday night that heavy infiltrations of North Vietnamese troops into South Viet Nam had taken place during 1964. Officials put the number at several thousands.

This appeared to introduce a new element into the conflict, which was already going badly for the United States, primarily because of political dissension in Saigon and the instability of South Vietnamese governments.

In earlier years U.S. officials always claimed that the guerrillas fighting in South Viet Nam were essentially South Vietnamese though some had been trained in the North.

The alternatives to the present course of supporting the Vietnamese government, Bundy said, lie between withdrawal or "neutralization" on the one hand and enlarging the war on the other.

"So long as South Viet Nam is ready to carry on the fight, withdrawal is unthinkable," Bundy said.

Of negotiation, he declared that any course which led to true security and independence for South Viet Nam in accordance with international agreements "would of course be an answer." But he ruled out any negotiations that would let South Viet Nam be taken over by the Communists under or from

AFA SCANDAL

How will the cheating scandal at the Air Force Academy affect the school's athletic teams? Should the Air Force release the names of athletes, especially football players, to the public? Will the forced resignations of approximately 30 football players affect the Falcons gridiron fortunes this fall? Sports Editor Loy Holman comments on these aspects of the scandal in his column "Between the Lines", on page 1-D in today's Gazette Telegraph. Be sure to read it.

Conservatives Plan Attacks On Laborites

A mood of eager belligerence swept over the Conservative party, which until recently looked hesitant and ill at ease in opposition.

"I believe," wrote Iaian Macleod, former Tory Cabinet minister, "in guerrilla raids, in concentrated assaults on weak ministers, in occasional planned setpiece attacks on the Labor party in general and the prime minister in particular."

All this martial metaphor related to parliamentary tactics and to the fact that Prime Min-

Five - Point Tax Plan Urged by State Council

DENVER (AP) — Gov. John A. Love's 60-member Economic Development Council has recommended a five-point tax program aimed at making Colorado a more attractive place for industry.

Donald F. McMahon, the chairman, said the tax legislation is only part of the council's recommendations aimed at overcoming problems of remoteness from raw materials, a limited population and a limited market.

McMahon said he hopes the council can become a permanent organization to work with governors "to make Colorado more attractive to industry year by year."

The tax recommendations include:

A freeport law, already proposed in a House bill, to cut property tax assessments from 30 to 5 per cent on goods held temporarily in Colorado for sale outside the state.

Elimination of sales and use taxes on any new equipment which will create new jobs.

Suspension of property tax assessment on new plants and expansion of existing plants for five years to help new industry during its early years.

A capital investment credit for corporations on state income taxes similar to a provision in the federal income tax.

Tax credits for research that might lead to new products or new jobs.

Richard Olson, general manager of Sundstrand-Denver, and Charles C. Gates Jr., president of Gates Rubber Co., are drafting the tax legislation.

Olson said Colorado has a choice in meeting the increasing money demands for state services by higher and higher taxes against individual and corporations, or a continued broadening of the tax base through expansion of business and industry.

The governor also received three proposals from a subcommittee headed by Thomas Knowles, president of Van Schaack & Co.

They are legislation to permit creation of business development corporations so banks and savings associations could pool money to finance industry; a constitutional amendment to permit the state to guarantee 90 per cent of first mortgage loans for new job-creating industry, and a program to help local development corporations finance new industry by issuing tax

100 Cadets May Be Involved In Cheating Scandal at AFA

By RAY HERST
Gazette Telegraph City Editor

The nation's newest military academy may far surpass its older West Point relative in the scandal field at the rate the current investigation of classroom cheating is proceeding.

Saturday, Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert announced in Washington that as many as 100 cadets may be involved in the cheating expose that has rocked the proud Air Force Academy and the nation.

Zuckert also disclosed that as many as 30 members of the Falcon football team may be involved.

Unlike the West Point scandal, which primarily involved "cribbing" during examinations, the Academy shake-up involves the actual theft of examination papers and materials.

Zuckert said that a ring of 10 or 12 cadets are involved in the theft of the exams which were then apparently offered for sale to other cadets. He termed the ring "a well organized group."

"Some of these cadets have already submitted their resignation for the good of the service," Zuckert said.

Zuckert emphasized that the "overwhelming majority" of the cadets were not involved. Prior to the resignations the cadet wing numbered 2,567.

The civilian chief of the Air Force said he was satisfied "that the investigation of clear evidence of cheating at the Air Force Academy is being handled fairly and expeditiously and that every consideration is being given to the individuals who are being investigated."

The academy said it would not disclose the names of the cadets who have resigned.

To date, a total of 29 cadets have submitted their resignations.

How many will follow, is a matter of speculation. The Air Force Academy information office said Saturday that it might be at least two weeks before the investigation is completed and the complete story known.

One cadet, unidentified, said that the seniors allegedly were told by officials that the investigating committee had a list of 700 cadets and that the investigation would continue until all involved were caught.

Newsmen attempting to talk to cadets found a wall of silence. It was reported that reporters from a major television network were held for a short time by the Air Police at the Academy after they attempted to interview cadets despite warnings not to talk to the young men.

The general impression is that the cadets are running scared. One is reported to have told a newsman, "You never know when you are going to be tapped on the shoulder and find out that you're involved."

No one knows how complete a report of the investigation will be issued. It is Academy policy not to release the names of individuals involved but certain to be noticed will be the athletes missing from the Academy rosters.

The nation's attention will be centered on the athletics as it was during the West Point scandal, but Academy officials have said that several "top-notch" students are involved.

Probe Could Be Bitter Blow for AFA Football

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Ben Martin, head football coach at the Air Force Academy, said Saturday that he could make no statement as to what the cheating scandal revealed at the nation's newest military school would do to the future of his teams.

"I've just heard about the announcement just a few minutes ago," Martin told the Gazette Telegraph. "But I honestly don't know which players may be involved so I couldn't say how this will effect the team."

This was after an announcement was made from Washington, D. C. Saturday by the Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert that more than 100 cadets including about 30 football players were being investigated in regard to the cheating on examinations.

"I have no privileged information," Martin said. "Any news of this will have to come from different sources."

If reports are true that some 30 football players face either court martial or resignation from the Air Force Academy because of implication in the use of illegal exam materials, Martin admitted that it would be a bitter blow to the immediate future of the sport.

A similar incident took place in 1951 at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point in which 43 of Army's varsity football players were removed from the school. It took several years for the Army to revive its football program.

There has been no information released from the only official source handling this affair as to the names of those involved. Col. Richard Haney, director of the Public Informa-

Half of College Students Admit Having Cheated

NEW YORK (AP) — About half the students questioned in a 99-college survey admitted having cheated and "this is probably a conservative estimate," a Columbia University researcher reported Saturday.

The survey findings were reported even as the U.S. Air Force Academy was being jolted by a cheating scandal reminiscent of the 1951 shakeup at the U.S. Military Academy.

So far, with the investigation still continuing on the Colorado campus, 29 Air Force cadets — some athletics and top scholars — have left school. In the earlier West Point scandal, 90 Army cadets were expelled, including 43 varsity football players.

Supported by the federal government, Columbia researcher William J. Bowers questioned 5,422 students at 99 colleges and universities, as well as more than 600 college deans and more than 500 student body presidents.

"Perhaps the most alarming finding of this body concerns the prevalence of academic dishonesty on American college campuses," Bowers said.

Rioters Attack U.S. Library in Viet Nam City

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Anti-government demonstrators burned books Saturday in a U.S. Information Agency library in Hue, 400 miles north of here, smashed all the building's windows and ransacked offices.

Premier Tran Van Huong urged his people "not to be dragged into this monkey business" in a desperate radio appeal to halt the growing violence.

"At this solemn hour, the life of the nation is in the people's hands," he said.

Buddhist-led demonstrators took to the streets for the second straight day in Hue and Saigon and there was a report of a protest march involving several thousand persons in the city of Nha Trang, 200 miles northeast of Saigon. The crowds dispersed by evening but more trouble was expected Sunday.

There was widespread speculation that Communist agents

TOKYO (AP) — At least 20 Japanese seismological stations recorded a distant major earthquake between 9:18 and 9:19 Japanese time Sunday — 7:18 and 7:19 p.m. EST Saturday — the central station here reported.

Earlier, Japan was rocked by a minor unrelated local quake centered in the Tokyo area.

New Billboard Battle Expected In Legislature

DENVER (AP)—Control — or elimination—of billboards along highways threatens to cause another battle in the Colorado Legislature.

This time, advocates of the practice will have a new ally, the President of the United States.

Sen. Floyd Oliver, D-Greeley, said the bill he and nine other senators offered Friday was prepared before President Johnson demanded beautification of the new Interstate Highway System. But the Chief Executive's statements should be a powerful influence for it, he said.

In the past, outdoor advertising in forces have been able to modify anti-billboard measures in the legislature to the point where they have been only partly effective. An industry representative was at the capitol Friday afternoon.

The Senate Transportation Committee ordered Oliver's bill printed Friday, only moments after its introduction. After the legislature began its weekend recess the committee chairman, Sen. Woody Hewett, R-Boulder, said he undoubtedly would schedule a public hearing on the proposal.

Oliver himself said the bill is stronger than those offered in former years. He said it represents the thinking of Colorado garden clubs and of the American Automobile Association.

It would give the state control over billboards along the entire

Sales Tax Bills to Be Introduced

DENVER (AP)—The Republican minority leader in the Colorado House of Representatives says Gov. John A. Love's sales and cigarette tax bills will be introduced Tuesday or Wednesday.

Rep. John Vanderhoof, R-Glenwood Springs, said a bill providing for an increase in the sales tax from two to three per cent with the money going to reduce local school property taxes is ready.

But he said consultation with bonding attorneys is planned for the cigarette tax bill. Money from the cigarette tax would be used for construction of buildings at state institutions. Vanderhoof said there was a question concerning tax anticipation warrants.

By ED COOK
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

A convey of two to eight spacecraft, each weighing 1,000 tons, may be the United States first attempt at placing men and material on the surface of Mars 21 years from now.

Eliot C. Payson, chief of advanced design for the Martin Co., Denver, predicted a possible manned Mars shot in 1986 as guest speaker at a banquet of the American College of Physicians and the Colorado Society of Internal Medicine at the Broadmoor Hotel.

Payson, who supervised the actual down-range launchings of the Titan missile test-firing at Cape Kennedy, said it is perfectly reasonable to believe that an Earth to Mars journey could take place within 20 years and, ideally, 1986, when the two planets will be in the best position for an interplanetary trip.

He said a proper launch window from Earth's atmosphere will occur in 1967, 1971, 1973 and every two years thereafter. But radiation from solar flares, or sunspots, would reach a peak in 1969-71 and 1981 and might prove harmful to astronauts, he said.

The journey across space ideally would follow five years later when radiation has decreased, Payson said.

"A manned trip to Mars is perfectly reasonable within the next 20 years and we will achieve it after we've achieved a trip to the moon," Payson remarked.

The trip, he said, could take a total of 973 days, including a 455-day "lay over" for astronauts on the planet. Payson said spacemen would have to wait that long on Mars until Earth reaches a proper orbital position for a return journey. Scientists have estimated the distance between the two planets at a maximum of 248 million and a minimum of 35 million miles, depending upon paths Earth and Mars orbit through.

Payson said astronauts might use their own body wastes to manufacture food during the interplanetary trip. Waste, he said could be turned into ammonia, hydrogen, carbon dioxide, water and inorganic salts. The salts would be "tossed overboard" and the other products would be placed in photo-electric synthe-

'No Cause for Alarm' Says LBJ About His Cold

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson is in the hospital with a bad, hacking cough and a pain in his chest, but he says this is no cause for alarm.

"I wouldn't hesitate right now to put on my britches and go back to the office if there was something that needed to be done," Johnson told reporters Saturday about his sudden illness.

In a gesture typical of Johnson, he called four newsmen in at noon Saturday for a surprise bedside news conference. They found him hoarse but resplendent in fireman's red pajamas trimmed in black, with a white handkerchief peeping from the breast pocket.

He began to feel bad Friday night, "primarily from the tickling in my throat," the President said. His temperature went up, so at 2:26 a.m. Saturday an ambulance took him from the White House to the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md.

Of the congestion in his throat, the President said:

"I notice it's a little better now."

His throat had been soothed by an old-fashioned cough syrup, "Brown's Mixture," and he is expected to be hospitalized anywhere from three to five days.

Although the President had the best in medical attention — a specialist had been summoned from New York in the middle of the night — he had his own version of what had gone wrong.

"My resistance was awfully low," he said. He had been working long hours on his messages to Congress — his big budget message goes up to Cap-

AFA SCANDAL

How will the cheating scandal at the Air Force Academy affect the school's athletic teams? Should the Air Force release the names of athletes, especially football players, to the public? Will the forced resignations of approximately 30 football players affect the Falcons gridiron fortunes this fall? Sports Editor Loy Holman comments on these aspects of the scandal in his column "Between the Lines", on page 1-D in today's Gazette Telegraph. Be sure to read it.

Conservatives Plan Attacks On Laborites

A mood of eager belligerence swept over the Conservative party, which until recently looked hesitant and ill at ease in opposition.

"I believe," wrote Iaian Macleod, former Tory Cabinet minister, "in guerrilla raids, in concentrated assaults on weak ministers, in occasional planned setpiece attacks on the Labor party in general and the prime minister in particular."

All this martial metaphor related to parliamentary tactics and to the fact that Prime Min-

Five - Point Tax Plan Urged by State Council

DENVER (AP) — Gov. John A. Love's 60-member Economic Development Council has recommended a five-point tax program aimed at making Colorado a more attractive place for industry.

Donald F. McMahon, the chairman, said the tax legislation is only part of the council's recommendations aimed at overcoming problems of remoteness from raw materials, a limited population and a limited market.

McMahon said he hopes the council can become a permanent organization to work with governors "to make Colorado more attractive to industry year by year."

The tax recommendations include:

A freeport law, already proposed in a House bill, to cut property tax assessments from 30 to 5 per cent on goods held temporarily in Colorado for sale outside the state.

Elimination of sales and use taxes on any new equipment which will create new jobs.

Suspension of property tax assessment on new plants and expansion of existing plants for five years to help new industry during its early years.

A capital investment credit for corporations on state income taxes similar to a provision in the federal income tax.

Tax credits for research that might lead to new products or new jobs.

Richard Olson, general manager of Sundstrand-Denver, and Charles C. Gates Jr., president of Gates Rubber Co., are drafting the tax legislation.

Olson said Colorado has a choice in meeting the increasing money demands for state services by higher and higher taxes against individual and corporations, or a continued broadening of the tax base through expansion of business and industry.

The governor also received three proposals from a subcommittee headed by Thomas Knowles, president of Van Schaack & Co.

They are legislation to permit creation of business development corporations so banks and savings associations could pool money to finance industry; a constitutional amendment to permit the state to guarantee 90 per cent of first mortgage loans for new job-creating industry, and a program to help local development corporations finance new industry by issuing tax exempt securities.

By RAY HERST
Gazette Telegraph City Editor

The nation's newest military academy may far surpass its older West Point relative in the scandal field at the rate the current investigation of classroom cheating is proceeding.

Saturday, Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert announced in Washington that as many as 100 cadets may be involved in the cheating expose that has rocked the proud Air Force Academy and the nation.

Zuckert also disclosed that as many as 30 members of the Falcon football team may be involved.

Unlike the West Point scandal, which primarily involved "cribbing" during examinations, the Academy shake-up involves the actual theft of examination papers and materials.

Zuckert said that a ring of 10 or 12 cadets are involved in the theft of the exams which were then apparently offered for sale to other cadets. He termed the ring "a well organized group."

"Some of these cadets have already submitted their resignation for the good of the service," Zuckert said.

Zuckert emphasized that the "overwhelming majority" of the cadets were not involved. Prior to the resignations the cadet wing numbered 2,567.

The civilian chief of the Air Force said he was satisfied "that the investigation of clear evidence of cheating at the Air Force Academy is being handled fairly and expeditiously and that every consideration is being given to the individuals who are being investigated."

The academy said it would not disclose the names of the cadets who have resigned.

To date, a total of 29 cadets have submitted their resignations.

How many will follow, is a matter of speculation. The Air Force Academy information office said Saturday that it might be at least two weeks before the investigation is completed and the complete story known.

One cadet, unidentified, said that the seniors allegedly were told by officials that the investigating committee had a list of 700 cadets and that the investigation would continue until all involved were caught.

Newsmen attempting to talk to cadets found a wall of silence. It was reported that reporters from a major television network were held for a short time by the Air Police at the Academy after they attempted to interview cadets despite warnings not to talk to the young men.

The general impression is that the cadets are running scared. One is reported to have told a newsman, "You never know when you are going to be tapped on the shoulder and find out that you're involved."

No one knows how complete a report of the investigation will be issued. It is Academy policy not to release the names of individuals involved but certain to be noticed will be the athletes missing from the Academy rosters.

The nation's attention will be centered on the athletics as it was during the West Point scandal, but Academy officials have said that several "top-notch" students are involved.

Probe Could Be Bitter Blow for AFA Football

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Ben Martin, head football coach at the Air Force Academy, said Saturday that he could make no statement as to what the cheating scandal revealed at the nation's newest military school would do to the future of his teams.

"I've just heard about the announcement just a few minutes ago," Martin told the Gazette Telegraph. "But I honestly don't know which players may be involved so I couldn't say how this will effect the team."

This was after an announcement was made from Washington, D. C. Saturday by the Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert that more than 100 cadets including about 30 football players were being investigated in regard to the cheating on examinations.

"I have no privileged information," Martin said. "Any news of this will have to come from different sources."

If reports are true that some 30 football players face either court martial or resignation from the Air Force Academy because of implication in the use of illegal exam materials, Martin admitted that it would be a bitter blow to the immediate future of the sport.

A similar incident took place in 1951 at the U. S. Military Academy at West Point in which 43 of Army's varsity football players were removed from the school. It took several years for the Army to revive its football program.

There has been no information released from the only official source handling this affair as to the names of those involved. Col. Richard Haney, director of the Public Informa-

Half of College Students Admit Having Cheated

NEW YORK (AP) — About half the students questioned in a 99-college survey admitted having cheated and "this is probably a conservative estimate," a Columbia University researcher reported Saturday.

The survey findings were reported even as the U.S. Air Force Academy was being jolted by a cheating scandal reminiscent of the 1951 shakeup at the U.S. Military Academy.

So far, with the investigation still continuing on the Colorado campus, 29 Air Force cadets — some athletics and top scholars — have left school. In the earlier West Point scandal, 90 Army cadets were expelled, including 43 varsity football players.

Supported by the federal government, Columbia researcher William J. Bowers questioned 5,422 students at 99 colleges and universities, as well as more than 600 college deans and more than 500 student body presidents.

"Perhaps the most alarming finding of this body concerns the prevalence of academic dishonesty on American college campuses," Bowers said.

Rioters Attack U. S. Library in Viet Nam City

SAIGON, South Viet Nam (AP) — Anti-government demonstrators burned books Saturday in a U.S. Information Agency library in Hue, 400 miles north of here, smashed all the building's windows and ransacked offices.

Premier Tran Van Huong urged his people "not to be dragged into this monkey business" in a desperate radio appeal to halt the growing violence.

"At this solemn hour, the life of the nation is in the people's hands," he said.

Buddhist-led demonstrators took to the streets for the second straight day in Hue and Saigon and there was a report of a protest march involving several thousand persons in the city of Nha Trang, 200 miles northeast of Saigon. The crowds dispersed by evening but more trouble was expected Sunday.

There was widespread speculation that Communist agents

U.S. May Still Enlarge Viet War, Bundy Declares

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top U.S. spokesman on Far Eastern policy said Saturday that U.S. withdrawal from South Viet Nam is "unthinkable." He held open the possibility of enlarging the war in response to Communist actions.

Asst. Secretary of State William P. Bundy said that in the past year infiltration of Red guerrilla fighters and supplies from North Viet Nam through Laos and South Viet Nam has "markedly increased."

This infiltration "has included for the first time significant numbers of indigenous North Vietnamese trained in North Viet Nam in regular military units," he said.

Bundy's discussion of Vietnamese problems and U.S. policy for dealing with them was contained in a speech prepared for the Chamber of Commerce in Washington, Mo.

His speech confirmed publicly information disclosed by high officials here Friday night that heavy infiltrations of North Vietnamese troops into South Viet Nam had taken place during 1964. Officials put the number at several thousands.

This appeared to introduce a new element into the conflict, which was already going badly for the United States, primarily because of political dissension in Saigon and the instability of South Vietnamese governments.

In earlier years U.S. officials always claimed that the guerrillas fighting in South Viet Nam were essentially South Vietnamese though some had been trained in the North.

The alternatives to the present course of supporting the Vietnamese government, Bundy said, lie between withdrawal or "neutralization" on the one hand and enlarging the war on the other.

"So long as South Viet Nam is ready to carry on the fight, withdrawal is unthinkable," Bundy said.

Of negotiation, he declared that any course which led to true security and independence for South Viet Nam in accordance with international agreements "would of course be an answer." But he ruled out any negotiation that would let South Viet Nam be taken over by the Communists sooner or later.

Churchill's Condition Is Worse

LONDON (AP)—Sir Winston Churchill's doctor, Lord Moran, reported that the deterioration of his patient was "more marked" Saturday night.

Strong Quake Reported in Molucca Sea

TOKYO (AP) — At least 20 Japanese seismological stations recorded a distant major earthquake between 9:18 and 9:19 Japanese time Sunday — 7:18 and 7:19 p.m. EST Saturday — the central station here reported.

A station spokesman said reports from these stations indicated the quake was located somewhere in the Molucca Sea between Borneo and New Guinea. He said the quake recorded an intensity of 7.7 on the Richter scale.

Earlier, Japan was rocked by a minor unrelated local quake centered in the Tokyo area.

New Billboard Battle Expected In Legislature

DENVER (AP)—Control — or elimination—of billboards along highways threatens to cause another battle in the Colorado Legislature.

This time, advocates of the practice will have a new ally, the President of the United States.

Sen. Floyd Oliver, D-Greeley, said the bill he and nine other senators offered Friday was prepared before President Johnson demanded beautification of the new Interstate Highway System. But the Chief Executive's statements should be a powerful influence for it, he said.

In the past, outdoor advertising in forces have been able to modify anti-billboard measures in the legislature to the point where they have been only partly effective. An industry representative was at the capitol Friday afternoon.

The Senate Transportation Committee ordered Oliver's bill printed Friday, only moments after its introduction. After the legislature began its weekend recess the committee chairman, Sen. Woody Hewett, R-Boulder, said he undoubtedly would schedule a public hearing on the proposal.

Oliver himself said the bill is stronger than those offered in former years. He said it represents the thinking of Colorado garden clubs and of the American Automobile Association.

It would give the state control over billboards along the entire

Sales Tax Bills to Be Introduced

DENVER (AP)—The Republican minority leader in the Colorado House of Representatives says Gov. John A. Love's sales and cigarette tax bills will be introduced Tuesday or Wednesday.

Rep. John Vanderhoof, R-Glenwood Springs, said a bill providing for an increase in the sales tax from two to three per cent with the money going to reduce local school property taxes is ready.

But he said consultation with bonding attorneys is planned for the cigarette tax bill. Money from the cigarette tax would be used for construction of buildings at state institutions. Vanderhoof said there was a question concerning tax anticipation warrants.

It's Too Cold Even for Winter Frolic

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The Monroe County Park Department Saturday canceled its annual "winter frolics" scheduled this weekend. The reason — too much winter.

"Too much" includes up to 10 inches of snow, high winds and a low temperature of 14 degrees, followed by a forecast of freezing rain.

By ED COOK
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

A convey of two to eight spacecraft, each weighing 1,000 tons, may be the United States first attempt at placing men and material on the surface of Mars 21 years from now.

Eliot C. Payson, chief of advanced design for the Martin Co., Denver, predicted a possible manned Mars shot in 1986 as guest speaker at a banquet of the American College of Physicians and the Colorado Society of Internal Medicine at the Broadmoor Hotel.

Payson, who supervised the actual down-range launchings of the Titan missile test-firing at Cape Kennedy, said it is perfectly reasonable to believe that an Earth to Mars journey could take place within 20 years and, ideally, 1986, when the two planets will be in the best position for an interplanetary trip.

He said a proper launch window from Earth's atmosphere will occur in 1967, 1971, 1973 and every two years thereafter. But radiation from solar flares, or sunspots, would reach a peak in 1969-71 and 1981 and might prove harmful to astronauts, he said. The journey across space ideally would follow five years later when radiation has decreased, Payson said.

"A manned trip to Mars is perfectly reasonable within the next 20 years and we will achieve it after we've achieved a trip to the moon," Payson remarked.

The trip, he said, could take a total of 973 days, including a 455-day "lay over" for astronauts on the planet. Payson said spacemen would have to wait that long on Mars until Earth reaches a proper orbital position for a return journey. Scientists have estimated the distance between the two planets at a maximum of 248 million and a minimum of 35 million miles, depending upon paths Earth and Mars orbit through.

Payson said astronauts might use their own body wastes to manufacture food during the interplanetary trip. Waste, he said could be turned into ammonia, hydrogen, carbon dioxide, water and inorganic salts. The salts would be "tossed overboard" and the other products would be placed in photo-electric synthe-

'No Cause for Alarm' Says LBJ About His Cold

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson is in the hospital with a bad, hacking cough and a pain in his chest, but he says this is no cause for alarm.

"I wouldn't hesitate right now to put on my britches and go back to the office if there was something that needed to be done," Johnson told reporters Saturday about his sudden illness.

In a gesture typical of Johnson, he called four newsmen in at noon Saturday for a surprise bedside news conference. They found him hoarse but resplendent in fireman's red pajamas trimmed in black, with a white handkerchief peeping from the breast pocket.

He began to feel bad Friday night, "primarily from the tickling in my throat," the President said. His temperature went up, so at 2:26 a.m. Saturday an ambulance took him from the White House to the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md.

Of the congestion in his throat, the President said:

"I notice it's a little better now."

His throat had been soothed by an old-fashioned cough syrup, "Brown's Mixture," and he is expected to be hospitalized anywhere from three to five days.

Although the President had the best in medical attention — a specialist had been summoned from New York in the middle of the night — he had his own version of what had gone wrong.

"My resistance was awfully low," he said. He had been working long hours on his messages to Congress — his big budget message goes up to Cap-

Speaker Says Children Should Explore Freely

Dr. Frank Jacobson urged parents to teach children to reason rather than to conform to fixed standards, during the third session in a series on family living Thursday.

Dr. Jacobson is a psychologist on the staff of the Pikes Peak Mental Health Center. The series sponsored by three United Fund Agencies: Mental Health Association, Family Counseling Service and the YWCA meets each Thursday afternoon in the gymnasium of the YWCA.

About 50 mothers attended the lecture and questioned the doctor extensively on his views on discipline.

The lecture mainly covered methods of teaching young people to assume the responsibilities of adulthood and did not cover punishment at any length.

Emphasizing that children learn constantly from a variety of experiences Dr. Jacobson explained that a child who is comfortable with parents or teachers learns much more than one who is anxious.

"The anxiety itself is the focal point of the mind of the enxious person," he said.

"Children know that they are small and incompetent. They want to learn from you and their teachers," he added.

"We do violence with the characteristics of human learning through conformity," Dr. Jacobson stressed. He urged parents to place less emphasis on report cards and grades and to allow children to experience the joy of learning.

"The child who learns in school only for the grades will work later in life only for the pay check," he said.

Suggesting that children be permitted to explore as freely as possible, Dr. Jacobson said, "You can teach more by letting children learn more."

Several mothers questioned him on this point asking if children should be indulged. One mother described a three-year old who demands to be read to when her mother is sewing or insists that her mother get her a glass of water when she knows how to get it herself.

Dr. Jacobson suggested being reasonable with the child. "Tell her that you can't stop right now to read to her and insist that she get her own glass of water."

"Then she gets very mad and has a tantrum," the mother said.

The doctor said that if the child gets mad that is the child's problem because children must learn to accept a reasonable answer from parents even though they may not like it.

He also urged parents not to permit disrespect.

"There is a difference between being polite and showing respect. A person can be very polite in a very disrespectful way. It is not a healthy thing for a child to show disrespect," he added.

It is improper to use the "Star Spangled Banner" in a medley of songs.

PROFILE OF A NON-COM

(This is another in a series of articles portraying noncommissioned officers of the Army Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs. As in other Army outfits, ARADCOM looks to its cadre of NCOs to play an important part in providing experience and leadership vital to fulfillment of the command's mission.)

By S. SGT. VINCE NAYLOR
ARADCOM

Staff Sgt. Kenneth R. Johnson takes pride in his job and feels that it is one of importance. A qualified electronics technician himself, he is maintenance supervisor of the Communications Center of the Army Air Defense Command headquarters' Signal Section.

The main function of the U. S. Army Signal Corps, since its birth in 1860, has been — and remains today — communications.

Without the ability to communicate, a commander becomes a silent figure, unable to direct the course of battle. And especially in this age of electronics and supersonic speeds, with military commands such as the Army Air Defense Command deployed throughout the nation, a commander must be in constant contact with his units. Responsibility for this instant communication within ARADCOM is that of the Communications Center.

Sergeant Johnson supervises a crew of nine men whose job is to keep the communications equipment in working order.

A native of Logan, W. V., the sergeant entered the Army in 1958. After completing basic training at Ft. Jackson, S. C., he attended a 30-week course for electronics communications at the U. S. Army Signal School, Ft. Manmouth, N. J.

Prior to coming to Colorado Springs, his assignments have included duty with the communications centers of Headquarters U. S. Army Communication zone, Orleans, France, and 7th Region, ARADCOM, McChord Air Force Base, Wash.

The sergeant received his promotion to his present grade earlier this month. He and his wife, Mary Lou, live at 1228 Aspen Ave.

Educator Does Not Want Bureau Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Orlo E. Childs, president of the Colorado School of Mines, has removed himself from consideration for appointment as director of the Bureau of Mines.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior John M. Kelly said Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall had wanted Childs to be considered.

Childs said he is just getting his program established at the college and wanted to remain. He is in his second year as president.

Solon Stays Away From Chicken Pox

A few days ago Gebhardt's daughter, Lisa, 3, came down with chicken pox. Gebhardt couldn't remember whether he had ever had the disease in childhood, and his doctor advised him to stay away from home until he found out.

The only problem was that his parents are vacationing in Mexico and the legislator has been unable to reach them to ask if he ever had the disease.

So he's been staying in Denver, and maintaining contact with his home by telephone. The doctor says Lisa's chicken pox could last another week.

Sub-Districting To Be Studied By Democrats

DENVER (AP) — Colorado Democrats plan to name a committee to study the question of legislative sub - districting of large counties and seek a plan that will be satisfactory to both those who favor and oppose it.

Rep. Allen Dines, D-Denver, speaker of the House, said some voiced support for sub-districting in a conference of Democratic legislators and party county chairmen Friday.

In the past, sub-districting — dividing more populous counties into legislative districts with one person elected per district—has generally been favored by Colorado Republicans but opposed by Democrats.

"We agreed to try to devise some type of system that would be acceptable to all of us," said Dines. "The simplest is one that provides for one member per legislative district. But one could go to some system of county option, or of two or three seats per district."

Dines said the Democrats agreed that a State Supreme Court decision last fall wiped out sub-districting in Colorado as unconstitutional. He said he considers it unlikely that the U.S. Supreme Court will accept a request to consider the question.

Dines said there may well be legislation in this session to redistrict the state, something that could be done without getting into the sub-district problem. He said the Supreme Court's decision also wiped out the present ditricting.

Dines said there is also a question of whether an amendment to the state constitution to permit sub-districting should be proposed by the legislature for a vote in 1966. He said it is certain that legislators will be elected without sub-districts in 1966, but an amendment would make possible sub-districting in later elections.

Dines said the Democrats agreed that they didn't like the way the Republicans drew the sub-district lines last year. He said "We feel it was a gerrymander job."

He said the Democrats haven't reached any conclusion as to whether they are satisfied with the present districting. That decision will have to be made before any action on a new districting bill in this session.

Water Problems Subject for Solons

A public briefing on water problems of Colorado will be discussed at a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives at 2 p.m. Feb. 2, Rep. Theodore R. Schubert of District 22 announced recently.

The briefing will be conducted in the House chambers at Denver and will be directed by Lawrence Sparks, director of the Colorado Water Conservation Board.

Rep. Schubert, a member of the Natural Resources Committee, said all interested persons are invited to attend the joint briefing.

STRUCK

LONDON (AP) — A strike of airport technicians has grounded nearly all British European Airways flights out of London.

An airline spokesman said that all but three of the airways' flights had been canceled up until mid-afternoon.

The 1964 pecan crop in the U.S. is estimated at 122.5 million pounds, about 26 per cent below average.

Speaker Says Children Should Explore Freely

Dr. Frank Jacobson urged parents to teach children to reason rather than to conform to fixed standards, during the third session in a series on family living Thursday.

Dr. Jacobson is a psychologist on the staff of the Pikes Peak Mental Health Center. The series sponsored by three United Fund Agencies: Mental Health Association, Family Counseling Service and the YWCA meets each Thursday afternoon in the gymnasium of the YWCA.

About 50 mothers attended the lecture and questioned the doctor extensively on his views on discipline.

The lecture mainly covered methods of teaching young people to assume the responsibilities of adulthood and did not cover punishment at any length.

Emphasizing that children learn constantly from a variety of experiences Dr. Jacobson explained that a child who is comfortable with parents or teachers learns much more than one who is anxious.

"The anxiety itself is the focal point of the mind of the enxious person," he said.

"Children know that they are small and incompetent. They want to learn from you and their teachers," he added.

"We do violence with the characteristics of human learning through conformity," Dr. Jacobson stressed. He urged parents to place less emphasis on report cards and grades and to allow children to experience the joy of learning.

"The child who learns in school only for the grades will work later in life only for the pay check," he said.

Suggesting that children be permitted to explore as freely as possible, Dr. Jacobson said, "You can teach more by letting children learn more."

Several mothers questioned him on this point asking if children should be indulged. One mother described a three-year old who demands to be read to when her mother is sewing or insists that her mother get her a glass of water when she knows how to get it herself.

Dr. Jacobson suggested being reasonable with the child. "Tell her that you can't stop right now to read to her and insist that she get her own glass of water."

"Then she gets very mad and has a tantrum," the mother said.

The doctor said that if the child gets mad that is the child's problem because children must learn to accept a reasonable answer from parents even though they may not like it.

He also urged parents not to permit disrespect.

"There is a difference between being polite and showing respect. A person can be very polite in a very disrespectful way. It is not a healthy thing for a child to show disrespect," he added.

It is improper to use the "Star Spangled Banner" in a medley of songs.

PROFILE OF A NON-COM

(This is another in a series of articles portraying noncommissioned officers of the Army Air Defense Command in Colorado Springs. As in other Army outfits, ARADCOM looks to its cadre of NCOs to play an important part in providing experience and leadership vital to fulfillment of the command's mission.)

By S. SGT. VINCE NAYLOR
ARADCOM

Staff Sgt. Kenneth R. Johnson takes pride in his job and feels that it is one of importance. A qualified electronics technician himself, he is maintenance supervisor of the Communications Center of the Army Air Defense Command headquarters' Signal Section.

The main function of the U. S. Army Signal Corps, since its birth in 1860, has been — and remains today — communications.

Without the ability to communicate, a commander becomes a silent figure, unable to direct the course of battle. And especially in this age of electronics and supersonic speeds, with military commands such as the Army Air Defense Command deployed throughout the nation, a commander must be in constant contact with his units. Responsibility for this instant communication within ARADCOM is that of the Communications Center.

Sergeant Johnson supervises a crew of nine men whose job is to keep the communications equipment in working order.

A native of Logan, W. V., the sergeant entered the Army in 1958. After completing basic training at Ft. Jackson, S. C., he attended a 30-week course for electronics communications at the U. S. Army Signal School, Ft. Manmouth, N. J.

Prior to coming to Colorado Springs, his assignments have included duty with the communications centers of Headquarters U. S. Army Communication zone, Orleans, France, and 7th Region, ARADCOM, McChord Air Force Base, Wash.

The sergeant received his promotion to his present grade earlier this month. He and his wife, Mary Lou, live at 1228 Aspen Ave.

Educator Does Not Want Bureau Post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dr. Orlo E. Childs, president of the Colorado School of Mines, has removed himself from consideration for appointment as director of the Bureau of Mines.

Assistant Secretary of the Interior John M. Kelly said Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall had wanted Childs to be considered.

Childs said he is just getting his program established at the college and wanted to remain. He is in his second year as president.

Solon Stays Away From Chicken Pox

A few days ago Gebhardt's daughter, Lisa, 3, came down with chicken pox. Gebhardt couldn't remember whether he had ever had the disease in childhood, and his doctor advised him to stay away from home until he found out.

The only problem was that his parents are vacationing in Mexico and the legislator has been unable to reach them to ask if he ever had the disease.

So he's been staying in Denver, and maintaining contact with his home by telephone. The doctor says Lisa's chicken pox could last another week.

Sub-Districting To Be Studied By Democrats

DENVER (AP) — Colorado Democrats plan to name a committee to study the question of legislative sub - districting of large counties and seek a plan that will be satisfactory to both those who favor and oppose it.

Rep. Allen Dines, D-Denver, speaker of the House, said some voiced support for sub-districting in a conference of Democratic legislators and party county chairmen Friday.

In the past, sub-districting — dividing more populous counties into legislative districts with one person elected per district—has generally been favored by Colorado Republicans but opposed by Democrats.

"We agreed to try to devise some type of system that would be acceptable to all of us," said Dines. "The simplest is one that provides for one member per legislative district. But one could go to some system of county option, or of two or three seats per district."

Dines said the Democrats agreed that a State Supreme Court decision last fall wiped out sub-districting in Colorado as unconstitutional. He said he considers it unlikely that the U.S. Supreme Court will accept a request to consider the question.

Dines said there may well be legislation in this session to redistrict the state, something that could be done without getting into the sub-district problem. He said the Supreme Court's decision also wiped out the present ditricting.

Dines said there is also a question of whether an amendment to the state constitution to permit sub-districting should be proposed by the legislature for a vote in 1966. He said it is certain that legislators will be elected without sub-districts in 1966, but an amendment would make possible sub-districting in later elections.

Dines said the Democrats agreed that they didn't like the way the Republicans drew the sub-district lines last year. He said "We feel it was a gerrymander job."

He said the Democrats haven't reached any conclusion as to whether they are satisfied with the present districting. That decision will have to be made before any action on a new districting bill in this session.

BY THE HANDFUL — Capt. Glen L. Moore, management and procedures officer, Air Force Academy Base Supply, reaps his awards "by the handful" from Lt. Col. J. C. Eichholz, Deputy Chief of Staff/Materiel. Water Problems Subject for Solons

A public briefing on water problems of Colorado will be discussed at a joint meeting of the Senate and House of Representatives at 2 p.m. Feb. 2, Rep. Theodore R. Schubert of District 22 announced recently.

The briefing will be conducted in the House chambers at Denver and will be directed by Lawrence Sparks, director of the Colorado Water Conservation Board.

Rep. Schubert, a member of the Natural Resources Committee, said all interested persons are invited to attend the joint briefing.

Each coin press in the Philadelphia Mint produces approximately 300 coins a minute, with the potential seven million coins in a 24-hour day, seven days a week. Weighing the coins is so exact that if even one coin is missing from a sack containing 5,000 it can be detected.

WORRY CLINIC

By George W. Crane, M.D., Ph.D.

Rev. Luke poses a challenging question. The Bible says that "Faith without works is dead." But do the "works" of a clergyman involve joining street mobs or leading parades to stampede Congress? Discuss this fertile topic tomorrow in Sunday School class, for it is relevant.

By GEORGE W. CRANE, Ph. D., M. D.

CASE U-490: Rev. Luke, aged 63, asks a challenging question.

"Dr. Crane," he began, "just what is the proper duty of a clergyman?

"I have felt that it was to re-charge the spiritual batteries of my flock.

"For lonely, discouraged, fearful and unhappy folks gather on Sunday to get renewed faith.

"So I have tried to help them tune-in upon the Almighty by an inspiring sermon.

"Meanwhile, I have called on the sick and preached funerals as well as performed weddings and handled thousands of pastoral calls.

"But last year I was criticized by some of the younger members of our ministerial association because I didn't join a parade of agitators for passage of the Civil Rights Bill.

"One young seminary graduate argued that all ministers should parade with signs to help stampede our Congressmen into voting for that bill.

"Well, Dr. Crane, I am certainly in favor of having all taxpaying citizens receive the guaranteed benefits of their taxes, such as access to public roads, parks, protection by the Army, and also to fair employment where taxes pay their wages, as in the Post Office, Civil Service, etc.

"But I did not like the early version of the bill wherein the American citizens were to be deprived of their right to a jury trial.

"And I am not certain that private property and private employers should be denied the right to do as they wish in such matters as renting rooms or in hiring whom they wish.

"Be that as it may, I feel my personal opinion as a clergyman should not be used to coerce the thinking of others.

"Besides, I am not trained in law, and had not read the entire Civil Rights Bill, so I felt it was unwise to sign a petition circulated among our Ministerial Association demanding instant enactment of that bill.

"Several other clergymen in my age bracket took the same stand that I did.

"On the contrary, many of the younger clergymen became ardent advocates, if not actual agitators for Civil Rights.

"So should clergymen become the actual agents of politicians, either pro or con, and join street mobs as marchers who wave banners that try to stampede our legislatures?

"When I try to imagine how Jesus would have acted, I can't quite imagine him encouraging mob action or leading a parade of agitators waving signs.

"Didn't Christ confine himself chiefly to sermonizing and healing?"

This makes an interesting question for debate so discuss it in Sunday School tomorrow.

Should a clergyman become a soap - box sociologist or street corner agitator for social reform?

Or should he encourage general ethical education but leave the mob strategy to laymen?

For example, should a clergyman demand that Congress pass bills that contain "riders" or hidden provisions which former presidents of the American Bar Association term unconstitutional?

Should they agitate for passage of any bill when they haven't read its contents?

Yet hundreds of clergymen did that very thing last year, when I doubt if even ONE of them ever read the Civil Rights Bill. Did you?

(Always write to Dr. Crane in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long stamped, addressed envelope and 20 cents to cover typing and printing costs when you send for one of his booklets.)

By DORA FOSTER

Let's copy the "Meet the Press" radio program and have for ourselves, a "Meet the Passengers."

These Passengers will be those who in the early days of the old Colorado Springs Interurban Street Railway Company's trolleys rode to town every morning over the moor Company's trolleys rode to town every morning over the Broadmoor Canon steet car lines. In recalling them and their associations on the street cars we have no fear that they will be able to answer back, as do the ones who meet the reporters on the "Meet the Press," since we find that the most of them are no longer with us, but are scattered over the country like the autumn leaves that the trees have discarded.

Some of us were passengers because we were attending school down at the Lowell School building on South Nevada; others were attending high school and still others as soon as they alighted from the trolley disappeared into office buildings, while a few of those who joined with us only intermittently were the ladies and gentlemen of Broadmoor.

Boarding the car at the end of the line, near the mouth of the Canons was Harold Hull, one of the owners of the South Cheyenne Seven Falls. Hal never failed to have his books with him since he was a pupil at the high school, always in his blue gray cadet uniform and not much of a talker, even to the conductors who had little to do on the 40 minute run to town, after the fares had been collected and if the trolley stayed on the wires.

The seats in these cozy little cars ran lengthways of the vetween so we all sat facing each hicle, with a narrow aisle beother and saw all that was going on. Let's notice George Farrington, the tall, slender good-looking man who with his wife, Fanny, ran the eating place at the end of the line. Mr. Farrington did not go to town ever day but when he did he complained a lot to the conductor about a crick in his back." He would bend a certain way a little to one side, with his right hand on his hip, (his right hip of course) and say, "It hurts worse when I do this." Conductor red-headed Tom Walker, once asked, "Then why do you do that?" Mr. and Mrs. Farrington seemed to have a little trouble adjusting to each other's daily living and were married and divorced four times, and this was ages before Hollywood was anything more than a front yard for the artist Paul de Longpre.

Sister and I after running to catch the seven-thirty car each morning climbed on board at the top of the hill about a short half mile from the west end of the line. Very few cars waited for us ,since my mother and the old clock on the shelf knew just how long it would take us to make the three minute walk from home.

But just around the north end of Cheyenne Lake, would be two would - be passengers, run ning, always running, to join up with the street car. They were the Attorney Charles Dudley and his companion, Miss Lucretia Allen. He with a long stride that befitted his tall thin form and Miss Allen a very short little lady, always trotting her best to keep from being left on Broadmoor's bleak plain alone. Miss Allen and Mrs. Dudley had been girlhood companions in college and were inseparable, Miss Allen making her home with the Dudley's. A very efficient El Paso County School Superintendent was Miss Allen. She wore suits, collars and ties like a man and a hat that might have come from a men's clothing store, so severely plain it was.

Judge Dudley had the reputation of being the best informed "land lawyer" in the Pikes Peak Region and I believed him a miracle of brains since he could and often did take a knotty problem that had the evening before stumped me at home (after I had reached high school) and with a few swift strokes of his pen or pencil hand me the geometry or the algebra puzzle plainly written out so that I could see the answer to the thing as plain as day.

I know I thanked him promptly, but I have often wondered since if he knew how grateful I was for his help and how much I admired his brilliant mind.

A couple of blocks down the track would often come Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Edsall. He a tall and trifle heavy man and commanding bearing and she a beauty, who just knew she had the finest man for a husband, the finest in the whole wide world. Her dresses were what we might today call a trifle fussy, lace trimmed and of a light blue or lavender hue, and with the cutest little bonnet to match and set up on a well curled head of gray hair. I loved to see them together, he so courtly and so careful ofher and she so happy looking. They had a tall son, Clarence, a young man of 25 or 30 years, whose nose was a bit too prominent to allow him to be as handsome as his father.

Mr. Thomas Edsall was president of the Broadmoor Cheyenne Mountain Country Club during the years from 1893 to 1897 inclusive.

Several years later I was grieved to see the little widow after she had lost her husband. She had lost her sparkle and always came onto the car in a black dress and coat and long widow's veil, looking so sad that I shall never forget her face, even when her son was accompanying her. Their home was just south of and close beside the car line and I often pass it now but not without a thought for the pretty little lady whose life had been made to "Pass under the rod."

Down a short block we might expect to see Mr. Duncan Chisholm pulling himself up onto the platform of the car. He was English all the way through. Short pointed sandy beard, blue eyes of small but keen expression and always in loose fitting gray tweeds. He was not a friendly man and even when his wife and their little daughter Tina were with him he seemed remote.

As we neared the Cheyenne Mountain Country Club, a young man, Will Cobb, often swung on, going to town on errands for the club where he helped to make life pleasant for the ones who played and dined at that popular place.

The Count and Countess James Pourtales, I have spoken of before, but Mrs. Brownell, who would be the next passenger, always came swiftly, not running, not with her dignity, but always hurriedly and dropping onto the seat just inside the door sat, finished lacing up her shoes, buttoning her coat, and adjusting her veil, and seemingly oblivious of all the onlookers who were interested in the proper finish to her toilet. Nothing much was funny about her dressing until she began adjusting her veil, and then it was worth while looking. She made so many grimaces, while that dark veil was being put into place that every one watched her, but by the time we had reached the outskirts of the town she seemed satisfied with the results of her facial efforts and sat quietly ignoring the rest of us.

Down in Ivywild, just after the car had left the Broadmoor hill behind and was turning onto South Nevada avenue, here would come running, Nellie Jones and perhaps her mother or her sister, Ethel. The girls were attending school and did not want to be "tardy." Mrs. W. Bently Jones probably went early to do a bit of shopping. They were often a block or more away when our motorman, Charley Murphy spied them, and taking advantage of a brief chance to rest his feet, would sling open the front door of the car and drop onto the seat just inside.

All three of the Jones's were tall, good looking and wore their home-made clothes with an air, just seeming to be a trifle more elegant than their finances warranted. So one morning while we were all sitting quietly waiting for them to reach the car, Mr. Murphy drawled, "Here comes the ravished end of a long line of noble ancestry."

Alf Landon Faces Tests in Hospital

TAPEKA, Kan. (AP) — Alf M. Landon, the Republican presidential candidate in 1936, will undergo various tests at Stormont Vail Hospital here over the next several days, says his doctor.

Landon, 77, former governor of Kansas, was taken to the hospital Thursday after he became ill at his Topeka home. An assistant said an electrocardiogram did not show any heart damage, and the hospital said today Landon is in satisfactory condition.

Republican Policy Gov. Chafee Urges

NEW YORK (AP) — Republican Gov. John H. Chafee of Rhode Island says the GOP land despite President John- "doesn't mean trimming our sails to benefit any extremist groups," said Chafee, 41, who got a record vote in Rhode Isson's landslide victory.

Broadening the party, he said, must serve the interests of many more groups in the nation if it is to overcome the "complete disaster" of last November's election.

"Our party never would have been in the trouble it is today if we had broad representation in our organizations," Chafee told a $100-a-plate dinner here Thursday night.

City Council Hears Florence Crime Facts

Crime and violence was at a low ebb in Florence during 1964, Chief of Police John Camerlo reported to the Florence city council Monday night.

In making his annual report to the council, Camerlo stated that Florence is a nice town in which to live and a good community to bring up children.

"Our crime rate is one of the lowest in the country and we are mighty pleased to report a minimum of destruction to personal property, and even less to private citizens."

A total of 22 cases of petty larceny with six cases solved; three grand larceny, 30 malicious mischief, 308 traffic summons issued, and a total of $2,659.50 in fines collected.

The department answered 1,565 calls including 790 complaints and patrolled 48,573 miles of city streets and alleyways in the police car.

There were 40 accidents durin the year, 300 dog tags sold, and $10.50 collected for bicycle licenses. The dog tags brought in $995.25.

The petty larceny tab amounted to a total of $250.

Biggest problem of the police department during the year was the breaking of windows, including a rash of broken windows at the now-dismantled McCandless School.

Students in Lisbon Disrupt University Day

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Several hundred students demonstrated today against the arrest of colleagues, preventing the rector of Lisbon University from delivering a speech closing formal ceremonies marking "University Day."

About 300 hecklers sitting in the 3,000-seat university amphitheater began shouting as Rector Paulo Cunha stood to read a speech.

The demonstration reached a peak when several professors, garbed in the traditional black academic gowns, applauded Cunha.

Political police Thursday night announced the arrest of an undisclosed number of students alleged to belong to the outlawed Communist party. Pamphlets distributed at today's meeting set the number at 27. The pamphlets denounced "a systematic plan of repression."

Reports from Coimbra, seat of the country's oldest university, said another student was arrested Tuesday and that anti-police slogans had subsequently appeared on campus walls.

Juvenile court cases per 1,000 children 10-17-year-old have tripled in the last two decades, the Welfare Administration of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare Department reports.

I Remember

By CHARLES S. DUDLEY

C. S. DUDLEY

There was a congregation of ghosts of fire horses at No. 1 Station of the Colorado Springs Fire Department last week, when in cleaning up the basement old logbooks were found. In them are entered the names of horses that were hitched to fire apparatus in the 1890's and 1900's.

These records give the colors of these old firehorses, tell when they received new shoes, and on which hoofs, when their teeth were filed and by whom, when they were sick and what medicine was administered.

There is no man on the Fire Department now who was a member in the days of the firehorses. Chief F. H. Lausch and Assistant Chief H. J. Richter became firemen the same day, in 1929, and Capt. J. L. Southcotte Sr. in 1928. But all apparatus has been motor driven in their time. Capt. R. C. Cross drove the last team of horses the Fire Department had, but he is now retired.

Among the horses whose faithful service for the department are recorded in the old logs are General, of 1899; Clyde, of 1909, which was hurt in a fall; Roy, 1899, Tony, 1897; Ben, 1897; Matt, 1896; Jack, 1896; Gray Jerry, 1894; Sorrel Jerry, also 1894; Tom, 1900; Dave, 1900; Star and Crescent, a team, 1905; Dick, 1901; Roy, 1902; Prince, 1902, and Stub, 1902.

In April of 1907 Fred, a black horse, was traded by the Fire Department to the City Street Department for Roy, a bay horse, and Fred dropped dead two days after the trade.

There used to be much rivalry between the Fire Department and the Street Department over the quality of horses. But pshaw! Street Department horses were hard working plodders and Fire Department horses were the proud motion picture stars of their day.

I do not need to have any old firemen tell me about fire horses. I have seen them in action in my own time as a newspaper reporter. They and their stalls were kept spotlessly clean. The stalls were in the fire stations, off to the side of the parked apparatus. When the alarms would ring the horses were released and, usually of their own accord, they would spring into position, one on each side of the tongue of a fire truck, or in the case of a fire engine three abreast, one between the two tongues. The harness was suspended above them and would quickly be dropped onto them and buckled up.

The driver was usually the fireman who took care of the horses and who took them out of the fire stations between alarms for exercise. The horses used to love to race to the fires. It has been said they could smell a fire. I don't know about that.

The verticle boilers of the old fire engines were always filled with hot water, as when in the fire station they were connected with the heating plant. They were disconnected the last thing before the start of the run and a fire, already laid beneath them, would be lighted. The man who rode on the rear of the fire engine shoveled coal into the firebox from a small supply which was carried.

When the place of the fire was reached the horses were unhitched and led away from the falling sparks from the fire engine stack. If the fire was a bad one, to be long fought, a new supply of coal would be delivered in a wagon. The throb of these fire engines could be heard miles around. They were beautiful things, nickel plated and highly polished.

As fire horses became too old for that proud service they were variously disposed of. Some were pensioned off and turned out to pasture. When they would hear fire engine bells they would run back and forth in the pasture. Some were sold for hard work, as common beasts of burden, after they had served their time as equine aristocrats. And there was more truth than poetry to the stories of their starting to run at the sound of fire bells, perhaps spilling vegetables from a wagon to they were hitched all along the way

Firehorses had a lot of personality and the exploits of some of them have been recorded in unperishable literature. The gasoline driven fire apparatus has no such fame. It seems a shame, Mrs. Catherine Walt, secretary of the Fire Department, said last week, as she looked over the old logbooks. She said she thought it would be nice if each piece of modern motor fire equipment might be named, and perhaps given feminine names, like the hurricanes.

I must not neglect to mention that in one of these old logs I read the report of a "prarie fire" at Bijou Street and Cascade Avenue.

Bids to Be Opened For City Towing Work

Bids will be opened at 2 p.m. Feb. 8 for towing and removal of vehicles for the police department.

Such service is primarily to tow away vehicles which are the responsibility of the police department such as abandoned cars, stolen cars, cars impounded for evidence in crimes, etc.

Bidding does not involve towing away cars from accident scenes, which is handled in another way.

The contract up for bid will be for one year, with one year renewal possibility. Prompt and efficient wrecker services have to be available 24 hours a day, city officials said.

Republican Policy Gov. Chafee Urges

NEW YORK (AP) — Republican Gov. John H. Chafee of Rhode Island says the GOP land despite President John- "doesn't mean trimming our sails to benefit any extremist groups," said Chafee, 41, who got a record vote in Rhode Isson's landslide victory.

Broadening the party, he said, must serve the interests of many more groups in the nation if it is to overcome the "complete disaster" of last November's election.

"Our party never would have been in the trouble it is today if we had broad representation in our organizations," Chafee told a $100-a-plate dinner here Thursday night.

City Council Hears Florence Crime Facts

Crime and violence was at a low ebb in Florence during 1964, Chief of Police John Camerlo reported to the Florence city council Monday night.

In making his annual report to the council, Camerlo stated that Florence is a nice town in which to live and a good community to bring up children.

"Our crime rate is one of the lowest in the country and we are mighty pleased to report a minimum of destruction to personal property, and even less to private citizens."

A total of 22 cases of petty larceny with six cases solved; three grand larceny, 30 malicious mischief, 308 traffic summons issued, and a total of $2,659.50 in fines collected.

The department answered 1,565 calls including 790 complaints and patrolled 48,573 miles of city streets and alleyways in the police car.

There were 40 accidents durin the year, 300 dog tags sold, and $10.50 collected for bicycle licenses. The dog tags brought in $995.25.

The petty larceny tab amounted to a total of $250.

Biggest problem of the police department during the year was the breaking of windows, including a rash of broken windows at the now-dismantled McCandless School.

It was noted that petty larceny dropped from 30 cases in 1963 to 22 in 1964, although more complaints were filed and more calls answered in 1964 than the previous year.

Scouts to Mark 55th Birthday This February

The Nations 6 million Scouts and Scouters will celebrate the 55th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, February 7-14. Many major events have been announced to the Pikes Peak region for a month long celebration of Scoutings birthday.

A total of 8,000 local Scouts and leaders will attend special Scout Sunday religious services on February 7. Scores of churches have invited Packs, Troops, and Posts to be guests of honor to give recognition to the twelfth Scout Law, "A Scout is Reverent."

More than 100 Packs and Troops are arranging parent and son banquets and recognition of the devoted sponsoring organizations who are so enthusiastically sponsoring units through the Pikes Peak Council. 22,000 Scouts and their families are expected to attend the anniversary banquets and Courts of Honor.

The all Council First-Aid-O-Ree will be held February 18 at the City Auditorium at 7 p.m. 20 Troops will compete in a First Aid contest sponsored by the Colorado Springs Fire Department.

Broadmoor International Center will be the scene of the annual Scouters' Recognition dinner on February 13. More than 2,000 Scouters and wives will be recognized at the largest Pot Luck dinner ever held in the Pikes Peak Region. Kerby Grant TV and stage star is the guest of Honor. George Myers Regional Scout Executive with Headquarters in Kansas City will represent the National Council of the Boy Scouts.

Explorer Scout Jeff Bain will represent the Pikes Peak Council in a special presentation to Gov. John Love, February 9th at the State Capitol Building. Simultaneous ceremonies will be held with the Governors of the 50 states and with President Lydon Johnson at the National Capitol. The event is called Scoutings Report to the Nation.

Plans for the annual Scout-O-Rama to be held April 7-10 at the City Auditorium will be announced during Scout Anniversary week. This year's huge Scout-O-Rama will be the largest and most impressive Youth Show ever presented in Colorado Springs. Rotarians of the Pikes Peak region are sponsoring the event. Claire Williams is general chairman.

During Scout Anniversary week, the National Council of the Boy Scouts will announce a greatly increased Scouting program for the next two years, entitled "Break-through program". Col. Howard H. Cloud Jr., president of the Pikes Peak Scout Council, announced that one out of every two boys between the age of 8 and 18 years will be registered in Scouting by 1966.

New Billboard Battle Expected In Legislature

State Highway System — some 8,400 miles of roads—as well as the multi-lane federal Interstate Highway System. Signs would be banned within 660 feet of the right of way of Interstate Highways and the same distance from any historical spot or monument. They also could be barred from scenic areas. Signs violating the law would be declared public nuisances automatically and their destruction would be ordered.

Oliver pointed out that Colorado never has been able to obtain bonus federal funds which the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads offers to states rigidly restricting billboards on principal highways. This bonus amounts to half of one per cent of the grants for the year when the law is effective.

Manitou Springs Cubs To Meet Thursday

Manitou Springs Troop 18, will hold a Cub Scout pack meeting Thursday at Memorial Hall, at 7:30 p.m. Harry Craig, Cubmaster, will be in charge. Several of the boys will receive badges at that time.

Four boys of Den 2, Vance Moulton, Ron and Don Bush and Randy Shipp lead in the flag ceremony at the recent Manitou PTA meeting. Parents of the Cub Scouts are invited to attend the meeting.

were serving on that committee. This Committee is charged with determining where the new facilities should be located so that both inside and outside recreational facilities can be provided and sa that adequate parking will be available for the many who come by automobile from all parts of the region to participate in the program.

According to Enoch, modern YMCA buildings provide facilities for both men and women, meeting rooms for boys and girls clubs, as well as swimming and gymnasium facilities for instructional and recreation program for all ages. Meeting rooms for community groups of all sorts are provided, and in some cities the "Y" building houses other social agencies. He stated that reports from many YMCA's which have been built in the past few years indicate that when new facilities are provided the YMCA usually needs a smaller percentage of operating funds from United Fund or Community Chest, and is able to serve many more people.

Building Funds for YMCA's, according to Judge Enoch, are received by public subscription in the local community, and to raise the amount of money needed depends on generous giving by individuals and corporations, over a period of years, and often memorial gifts make possible portions of these facilities.

'No Cause for Alarm' Says LBJ About His Cold

itol Hill Monday — and he had neither napped nor lunched the last two days.

"It may be a lesson I ought to — ." He didn't finish the sentence, but he obviously meant that he thinks he should be a little more careful in the future.

Although his medical histories never mentioned it, Johnson said he has had pneumonia six or eight times, and that he thinks he has more trouble with colds than most people.

All the Johnsons were outdors for the big inaugural ceremonies Wednesday, and the President didn't wear a topcoat either for his speech or for the five balls he attended that night.

His physicians refused to make any direct connection between the inauguration and the presidential cold, but three out of four of the Johnsons are feeling poorly.

Mrs. Johnson and their daughter Lynda Bird, 20, came down with colds Friday, and had gone to Camp David, Md., so they could keep the President from catching their germs. Johnson figures that's where he got the bug, though.

The other Johnson daughter, Luci Baines, 17, went with her father to the hospital, riding in the same ambulance. And she sat beside him during his impromptu news conference, patting him when he coughed.

Mrs. Johnson and Lynda Bird returned from Camp David Saturday, and after checking in with the President settled down to get medication of their own.

Mrs. Johnson was admitted as a patient, and assigned a room near the President. Lynda Bird returned to the White House where she expects to spend the weekend in bed.

Although Johnson's ailment was diagnosed as minor, any illness of the President is worrisome, especially when he has had a serious heart attack, as Johnson did in 1955.

Conservatives Plan Attacks On Laborites

ister Harold Wilson's Labor party, whose House of Commons margin is now shaved to three votes, could find itself in deep trouble mustering the necessary Votes to stay in office.

This new tilt to the British political scene came with the surprise defeat of Gordon Walker Thursday in a special election at the east London suburb of Leyton.

Stewart until Friday was minister of education and science. Throughout Labor's years of opposition, Stewart concentrated on home affairs.

With crucial international negotiations coming up, government sources suggested that Wilson will, for a time at least, keep a fairly tight personal rein on foreign affairs.

The Labor party, which obviously stunned at the defeat of Gordon Walker in what was supposed to be a solid Labor district, sought to display a confident front.

Laborite officials said Wilson had no intention of calling a national election to try to bolster his parliamentary strength and was determined to push ahead with his program.

Insistence on seeking parliamentary approval of such proposals as steel nationalization would deprive the Laborites of support from the Liberals, whose seven House of Commons members normally back Labor on less contentious measures.

Despite Laborite professions of confidence, their position was precarious. Special elections in just a couple of districts where the balance is delicate could wipe out the Laborite majority.

Former Area Resident Died in California

Word has been received from La Mesa, Calif., of the death at 87 of S. C. Steetle, a former resident of the Pikes Peak Region. For many years he was engaged in the restaurant business in Manitou Springs. Later he was in the Old American Roofing business in Colorado Springs.

He was well known in Masonic and Eastern Star circles, but had retained his home lodge membership in Kansas City, Mo. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle B. Steetle.

Funeral services were held in the Old World Chapel in Cypress View, with entombment in Cypress View Mausoleum.

have infiltrated the Buddhist campaign to oust Huong and were using demonstrations as a cover for attacks on American installations.

The US. consul in Hue, Samuel Thompson, reported that he felt the attack on the USIS building was caused by a group separate from the main body of 3,000 demonstrators.

"The Viet Cong encourage people to demonstrate and sit in the streets," Huong said in his radio address. "They hire hoodlums to demonstrate at the U.S. Embassy among other places They threw stones at the police and at the cultural service of a friendly country.

"They did this with the object of breaking up an international friendship. They did this disguised as monks leading a group of curious persons."

The mob in Hue surged into the agency building, drenched about half the library's books with gasoline and set them afire, officials reported.

Then they sacked the top floor of the building, extensively damaging the offices of the Viet Nam American Association, a private group that sponsors study programs for Vietnamese students. Cost of the damage has not been assessed.

Witnesses said there was no apparent effort by police or troops to quell the attack.

Earlier, about 100 Buddhist monks and nuns presented a letter at the U.S. Consulate, addressed to President Johnson and calling for an end of American support of the Huong government.

In Saigon, a monk plunged a knife into himself but apparently was not seriously injured. The Buddhists have threatened to renew the wave of fire suicides that led to the ouster of the Ngo Dinh Diem government in November 1963.

Paratroopers clashed with about 800 demonstrators at Saigon's Buddhist headquarters and squads patrolled potential trouble spots in the wake of Friday's unrest. A mob of youths inside the headquarters compound tried to take to the streets but the paratroopers pushed them back, hurling about 20 tear gas grenades at them.

Five monks inside the compound went into the fourth day of a protest hunger strike.

About one-fourth of Saigon's markets remained closed and 20 city blocks were cluttered with barbed wire, halting traffic in many places.

It may be some of these students, who in most colleges and universities aid instructors in various chores, who acquired the examination papers in the first place.

The length of time the cheating has been going on has not been disclosed, but one report is that it may have been happening for more than a year.

The actual investigation of the cheating began on Monday.

Academy officials said that the expose of the scandal came about through the Academy's honor system which is supposed to halt something as widespread as this before it begins.

The honor code binds the young officers-to-be to a promise that "we will not lie, cheat or steal, nor tolerate among us anyone who does." Elected members of the Cadet Wing police the system and make known any violations.

None of the Academy's announcements have indicated whether the students themselves exposed the cheating or if the initial reports came from some other source.

"We still don't know how much further we've got to go," Col. Richard Haney, academy information officer said.

Haney said that "one part" of the investigation still stood in the way of a full report on the cheating. He did not elaborate.

Other reports filtering from tight - lipped officials indicate that a cross-section of cadets are involved and that the scandal is not limited to one squadron or one particular grouo of cadets.

The Air Force has prom sed a full disclosure of findings in "two or three weeks."

William Klien Recognized Here For Top Output

William Klein, 641 Sequoia, received special recognition here Saturday night during the annual victory banquet of the Aid Association for Lutherans.

Klein received a plaque for selling over $1 million in life insurance for the organization during the past year. The Aid Association for Lutherans is the world's largest fraternal life insurance organization.

Klein was one of 74 "million-dollar agents" honored throughout the nation. He is with the Art Schmidt Agency, Denver, which received recognition from their home office as the leading agency in the country. The Schmidt Agency last year sold nearly $11 million in life insurance, a new record for an agency of this company.

"We have over 900,000 accounts," G. V. Krampien, senior vice president and agency director for the company said. "We are 31st in size of over 1,800 life insurance companies in this country and Canada. Yet we can serve only Lutherans which make up only about two per cent of the population.

"This has been a record-breaking year for us in many ways. This is the first time an agency in the midwest has won the leading agency award." The Schmidt Agency included Colorado, New Mexico and western Kansas.

Andrew Marshall Enters Race for Council Seat

as chairmen of the Planning Commission."

Marshall is treasurer and general management of the union Land and Grazing Co.

He was defeated in his bid for a Council seat in the April 2, 1963 municipal election, finishing sixth in a field of 12 candidates for three six-year terms. He received 2,354 votes.

Marshall was appointed to the Planning Commission in April 1963 by the City Council. In June 1964 he was elected chairman of the Planning Commission to succeed Wayne Browneller.

Johnson's candidacy was not announced, but a petition was taken out on his behalf by G. Winston Whitney, vice president and secretary - treasurer of Whitney Electric Co.

Johnson ran fourth in the last election, for a six-year term, ahead of Marshall with 2,734 votes.

He is a partner in J's Motel-Hotel and a local resident since 1927.

He was appointed to the Council in June 1964 to fill the term vacated by Floyd Roberts' resignation.

In addition to Johnson, three incumbent councilmen would have to run in the April election to retain their seats. They are: Harry Hoth, Carl Decker and Eugene McCleary.

kinds of medical and surgical problems, they are availing themselves of this service. In fact, if the occupancy rate continues to increase, it won't be long until our board of directors will be compelled to think of expansion or another hospital."

The Colorado Springs osteopathic Hospital Association is a non-profit tax exempt organization originated in 1956. Through the hard work of the orginal group of eight D. O.s (Doctors of Osteopathy) the former Valley High Nursing Home was purchased for the purpose of conversion to general hospital useage.

The surgical and obstetrical wing was added after a successful fund raising campaign which produced nearly a quarter of a million dollars. The group, intent upon making this a true community project, refused government funds to get the project off the ground. The community responded and the hospital is now rapidly growing first class medical institution with a place for the dedicated members of the Osteopathic profession to give complete care to those who have chosen them for the treatment of their health problems. The hospital is recognized by all health agencies and insurance companies and, after a year of operation, will be inspected by the American Osteopathic Hospital Association to be rated according to the building itself and the type of care it renders. According to local officials it is expected to receive a "class A" rating.

A bake sale will follow the luncheon.

Jaycee Week Capped With Japanese Wrestlers

The week of January 17-23, 1965 has been a busy one for the Colorado Springs Jaycees. It is not only because the past week was National Jaycee Week, but that Jaycees are always busy.

On Monday the Jaycees met in the Chamber of Commerce office for a planning session to determine what they will do for tourist promotion in 1965. The Jaycees sponsor two main projects in this area—the World Famous Chuck Wagon Dinners in the Garden of the Gods, and the weekly Square Dance at Acacia Park during the summer.

The Chuck Wagon will be serving nothing but U. S. Choice Steak in 1965, and the entertainment will be better than ever. The Chuck Wagon will operate from June 7 to the end of August serving the public Monday thru Friday nights.

The open air square dances at Acacia Park will be held on Wednesday nights for 13 weeks starting June 9. Arrangements have been made to have Norman Chichester do the calling once again this year.

At the membership meeting on Thursday night Thomas M. Wilkinson was awarded the chapters Distinguished Service Award. This is an award going to a young man of the community between the ages of 21 and 35, who has contributed to the community.

On Friday the Jaycees weer busy with two projects. Bright and early that morning a couple of them drove to Aurora to pick up the Japanese High School wrestling team and bring them to the Springs where they participated in general assemblies at Wasson and Palmer High Schools.

Friday night the Jaycees sponsored the Colorado Springs Junior Miss Pageant at Alexander Film. The winner of this pageant was lovely of Gidget Farrell. She will now go on to represent Colorado Springs in the state competition to be held in Englewood.

Saturday morning the Jaycees were back with the Japanese boys and took them to the Air Force Academy where the boys saw a movie on the Academy with narration in a Japanese dialogue. After the movie the boys toured the Academy. That evening at the Palmer Gym a combined Wasson and Palmer team took on the Japanese boys.

A busy week it has been for the members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce but is not much different than any other week. They are always busy! Help support the Jaycees for the rest of the year—remember, they volunteer their services and it is for you—the community.

many students have cheated as student body presidents estimate, and more than three times as many have cheated as deans estimated.

"Even students themselves underestimate the proportion of students who have cheated at some time; they tend to believe that only about half as many have cheated as their self-reports indicate."

Bowers traced the origns of college cheating to the high schools and the prevailing student philosophy there that being a "brain" damages the student's popularity. Thus cheating is the means of "getting by" without risk to social standing.

In college, he continued, the most influential deterrent to cheating is how it is regarded by the student body in general. Where student disapproval is high, the frequency of cheating is low and vice versa.

"Large schools have higher levels of cheating than small ones," Bowers reported, "and coeducation schools have higher levels than either men's or women's colleges."

He said the lowest level occurred on campuses with honor systems, where the students themselves police honesty.

Such a system uncovered the current Air Force Academy scandal. There, the heart of the school's honor code is the cadets' pledge that, "We will not lie, cheat or steal, nor tolerate among us those who do."

sis to make oxygen, Payson said.

He explained that the combination of oxygen and algae would result in the probable growth of plants and fish, which astronauts could use for food.

Payson said the solid propelled Nova booster may be used rocket men from the Earth's surface. The Nova, which would measure 400-500 feet in height and some 70 feet in diameter, may have a thrust of one million pounds and would cost about $150 per pound.

"Just getting the craft away from Earth would run in excess of $150 million and does not include building the craft and training astronauts," Payson said, indicating the tremendous amount of money involved.

He listed other booster rockets now being used or under development and the cost of each. They are: Thro Delta, 1,000 pound thrust at a cost of $2,300 per pound; Atlas, 2,900 pound thrust at a cost of $700 per pound; the Titan 2, 6,000 pounds at $350 per pound; the Titan 3, 5-25,000 pounds at a cost of $350 per pound; the Saturn, 200,000-250,000 pounds at a cost of $250 per pound.

Payson said there is no evidence that there are beings on Mars as we might know them, but life could exist in the form of vegetation. He said lichens are believed existing on the planet.

Others problems that spacemen would encounter include the temperatures on Mars, the fourth planet from the Sun. Payson said temperatures at night might dive to 100 degrees below zero on the Farenheit scale. He said, however, that they would be considerably above freezing during the day.

The planet also has little oxygen as compared to Earth, Payson noted. The total amount of water on Mars would be about the size of Lake Erie, he said.

tion Office, has said that those who leave the Academy will not be named.

From the roster of last fall's varsity, there were 53 listed with 21 seniors who have already completed their elgibility, and 17 juniors and 15 sophomores who still could play one or two years. The Air Force also has a Junior Varsity squad of juniors and sophomores that numbers about 45 and a freshman football team of at least the same size.

Of the 30 football players Zuckert said were involved, they could come from any or all of those squads of roughly 150 players.

This past year the Air Force ended up with four victories and a tie in 10 games, but with the expected return of many of those juniors and sophomores for next season there were bright prospects for the Falcons. Next fall's schedule includes the following teams Wyoming, Nebraska, Stanford, California, Oregon, University of Pacific, UCLA, Army, Arizona and Colorado.

Scouts to Mark 55th Birthday This February

The Nations 6 million Scouts and Scouters will celebrate the 55th anniversary of the Boy Scouts of America, February 7-14. Many major events have been announced to the Pikes Peak region for a month long celebration of Scoutings birthday.

A total of 8,000 local Scouts and leaders will attend special Scout Sunday religious services on February 7. Scores of churches have invited Packs, Troops, and Posts to be guests of honor to give recognition to the twelfth Scout Law, "A Scout is Reverent."

More than 100 Packs and Troops are arranging parent and son banquets and recognition of the devoted sponsoring organizations who are so enthusiastically sponsoring units through the Pikes Peak Council. 22,000 Scouts and their families are expected to attend the anniversary banquets and Courts of Honor.

The all Council First-Aid-O-Ree will be held February 18 at the City Auditorium at 7 p.m. 20 Troops will compete in a First Aid contest sponsored by the Colorado Springs Fire Department.

Broadmoor International Center will be the scene of the annual Scouters' Recognition dinner on February 13. More than 2,000 Scouters and wives will be recognized at the largest Pot Luck dinner ever held in the Pikes Peak Region. Kerby Grant TV and stage star is the guest of Honor. George Myers Regional Scout Executive with Headquarters in Kansas City will represent the National Council of the Boy Scouts.

Explorer Scout Jeff Bain will represent the Pikes Peak Council in a special presentation to Gov. John Love, February 9th at the State Capitol Building. Simultaneous ceremonies will be held with the Governors of the 50 states and with President Lyndon Johnson at the National Capitol. The event is called Scoutings Report to the Nation.

Plans for the annual Scout-O-Rama to be held April 7-10 at the City Auditorium will be announced during Scout Anniversary week. This year's huge Scout-O-Rama will be the largest and most impressive Youth Show ever presented in Colorado Springs. Rotarians of the Pikes Peak region are sponsoring the event. Claire Williams is general chairman.

During Scout Anniversary week, the National Council of the Boy Scouts will announce a greatly increased Scouting program for the next two years, entitled "Break-through program". Col. Howard H. Cloud Jr., president of the Pikes Peak Scout Council, announced that one out of every two boys between the age of 8 and 18 years will be registered in Scouting by 1966.

New Billboard Battle Expected In Legislature

State Highway System — some 8,400 miles of roads—as well as the multi-lane federal Interstate Highway System. Signs would be banned within 660 feet of the right of way of Interstate Highways and the same distance from any historical spot or monument. They also could be barred from scenic areas. Signs violating the law would be declared public nuisances automatically and their destruction would be ordered.

Oliver pointed out that Colorado never has been able to obtain bonus federal funds which the U.S. Bureau of Public Roads offers to states rigidly restricting billboards on principal highways. This bonus amounts to half of one per cent of the grants for the year when the law is effective.

Manitou Springs Cubs To Meet Thursday

were serving on that committee. This Committee is charged with determining where the new facilities should be located so that both inside and outside recreational facilities can be provided and sa that adequate parking will be available for the many who come by automobile from all parts of the region to participate in the program.

According to Enoch, modern YMCA buildings provide facilities for both men and women, meeting rooms for boys and girls clubs, as well as swimming and gymnasium facilities for instructional and recreation program for all ages. Meeting rooms for community groups of all sorts are provided, and in some cities the "Y" building houses other social agencies. He stated that reports from many YMCA's which have been built in the past few years indicate that when new facilities are provided the YMCA usually needs a smaller percentage of operating funds from United Fund or Community Chest, and is able to serve many more people.

Building Funds for YMCA's, according to Judge Enoch, are received by public subscription in the local community, and to raise the amount of money needed depends on generous giving by individuals and corporations, over a period of years, and often memorial gifts make possible portions of these facilities.

'No Cause for Alarm' Says LBJ About His Cold

itol Hill Monday — and he had neither napped nor lunched the last two days.

"It may be a lesson I ought to — ." He didn't finish the sentence, but he obviously meant that he thinks he should be a little more careful in the future.

Although his medical histories never mentioned it, Johnson said he has had pneumonia six or eight times, and that he thinks he has more trouble with colds than most people.

All the Johnsons were outdors for the big inaugural ceremonies Wednesday, and the President didn't wear a topcoat either for his speech or for the five balls he attended that night.

His physicians refused to make any direct connection between the inauguration and the presidential cold, but three out of four of the Johnsons are feeling poorly.

Mrs. Johnson and their daughter Lynda Bird, 20, came down with colds Friday, and had gone to Camp David, Md., so they could keep the President from catching their germs. Johnson figures that's where he got the bug, though.

The other Johnson daughter, Luci Baines, 17, went with her father to the hospital, riding in the same ambulance. And she sat beside him during his impromptu news conference, patting him when he coughed.

Mrs. Johnson and Lynda Bird returned from Camp David Saturday, and after checking in with the President settled down to get medication of their own.

Mrs. Johnson was admitted as a patient, and assigned a room near the President. Lynda Bird returned to the White House where she expects to spend the weekend in bed.

Although Johnson's ailment was diagnosed as minor, any illness of the President is worrisome, especially when he has had a serious heart attack, as Johnson did in 1955.

Conservatives Plan Attacks On Laborites

ister Harold Wilson's Labor party, whose House of Commons margin is now shaved to three votes, could find itself in deep trouble mustering the necessary Votes to stay in office.

This new tilt to the British political scene came with the surprise defeat of Gordon Walker Thursday in a special election at the east London suburb of Leyton.

Stewart until Friday was minister of education and science. Throughout Labor's years of opposition, Stewart concentrated on home affairs.

With crucial international negotiations coming up, government sources suggested that Wilson will, for a time at least, keep a fairly tight personal rein on foreign affairs.

The Labor party, which obviously stunned at the defeat of Gordon Walker in what was supposed to be a solid Labor district, sought to display a confident front.

Laborite officials said Wilson had no intention of calling a national election to try to bolster his parliamentary strength and was determined to push ahead with his program.

Insistence on seeking parliamentary approval of such proposals as steel nationalization would deprive the Laborites of support from the Liberals, whose seven House of Commons members normally back Labor on less contentious measures.

Despite Laborite professions of confidence, their position was precarious. Special elections in just a couple of districts where the balance is delicate could wipe out the Laborite majority.

Former Area Resident Died in California

Word has been received from La Mesa, Calif., of the death at 87 of S. C. Steetle, a former resident of the Pikes Peak Region. For many years he was engaged in the restaurant business in Manitou Springs. Later he was in the Old American Roofing business in Colorado Springs.

He was well known in Masonic and Eastern Star circles, but had retained his home lodge membership in Kansas City, Mo. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle B. Steetle.

Funeral services were held in the Old World Chapel in Cypress View, with entombment in Cypress View Mausoleum.

have infiltrated the Buddhist campaign to oust Huong and were using demonstrations as a cover for attacks on American installations.

The US. consul in Hue, Samuel Thompson, reported that he felt the attack on the USIS building was caused by a group separate from the main body of 3,000 demonstrators.

"The Viet Cong encourage people to demonstrate and sit in the streets," Huong said in his radio address. "They hire hoodlums to demonstrate at the U.S. Embassy among other places They threw stones at the police and at the cultural service of a friendly country.

"They did this with the object of breaking up an international friendship. They did this disguised as monks leading a group of curious persons."

The mob in Hue surged into the agency building, drenched about half the library's books with gasoline and set them afire, officials reported.

Then they sacked the top floor of the building, extensively damaging the offices of the Viet Nam American Association, a private group that sponsors study programs for Vietnamese students. Cost of the damage has not been assessed.

Witnesses said there was no apparent effort by police or troops to quell the attack.

Earlier, about 100 Buddhist monks and nuns presented a letter at the U.S. Consulate, addressed to President Johnson and calling for an end of American support of the Huong government.

In Saigon, a monk plunged a knife into himself but apparently was not seriously injured. The Buddhists have threatened to renew the wave of fire suicides that led to the ouster of the Ngo Dinh Diem government in November 1963.

Paratroopers clashed with about 800 demonstrators at Saigon's Buddhist headquarters and squads patrolled potential trouble spots in the wake of Friday's unrest. A mob of youths inside the headquarters compound tried to take to the streets but the paratroopers pushed them back, hurling about 20 tear gas grenades at them.

Five monks inside the compound went into the fourth day of a protest hunger strike.

About one-fourth of Saigon's markets remained closed and 20 city blocks were cluttered with barbed wire, halting traffic in many places.

100 Cadets May Be Involved in Scandal

It may be some of these students, who in most colleges and universities aid instructors in various chores, who acquired the examination papers in the first place.

The length of time the cheating has been going on has not been disclosed, but one report is that it may have been happening for more than a year.

The actual investigation of the cheating began on Monday.

Academy officials said that the expose of the scandal came about through the Academy's honor system which is supposed to halt something as widespread as this before it begins.

The honor code binds the young officers-to-be to a promise that "we will not lie, cheat or steal, nor tolerate among us anyone who does." Elected members of the Cadet Wing police the system and make known any violations.

None of the Academy's announcements have indicated whether the students themselves exposed the cheating or if the initial reports came from some other source.

"We still don't know how much further we've got to go," Col. Richard Haney, academy information officer said.

Haney said that "one part" of the investigation still stood in the way of a full report on the cheating. He did not elaborate.

Other reports filtering from tight - lipped officials indicate that a cross-section of cadets are involved and that the scandal is not limited to one squadron or one particular group of cadets.

The Air Force has promised a full disclosure of findings in "two or three weeks."

William Klien Recognized Here For Top Output

William Klein, 641 Sequoia, received special recognition here Saturday night during the annual victory banquet of the Aid Association for Lutherans.

Klein received a plaque for selling over $1 million in life insurance for the organization during the past year. The Aid Association for Lutherans is the world's largest fraternal life insurance organization.

Klein was one of 74 "million-dollar agents" honored throughout the nation. He is with the Art Schmidt Agency, Denver, which received recognition from their home office as the leading agency in the country. The Schmidt Agency last year sold nearly $11 million in life insurance, a new record for an agency of this company.

"We have over 900,000 accounts," G. V. Krampien, senior vice president and agency director for the company said. "We are 31st in size of over 1,800 life insurance companies in this country and Canada. Yet we can serve only Lutherans which make up only about two per cent of the population.

"This has been a record-breaking year for us in many ways. This is the first time an agency in the midwest has won the leading agency award." The Schmidt Agency included Colorado, New Mexico and western Kansas.

Andrew Marshall Enters Race for Council Seat

as chairmen of the Planning Commission."

Marshall is treasurer and general management of the union Land and Grazing Co.

He was defeated in his bid for a Council seat in the April 2, 1963 municipal election, finishing sixth in a field of 12 candidates for three six-year terms. He received 2,354 votes.

Marshall was appointed to the Planning Commission in April 1963 by the City Council. In June 1964 he was elected chairman of the Planning Commission to succeed Wayne Brouweller.

Johnson's candidacy was not announced, but a petition was taken out on his behalf by G. Winston Whitney, vice president and secretary - treasurer of Whitney Electric Co.

Johnson ran fourth in the last election, for a six-year term, ahead of Marshall with 2,734 votes.

He is a partner in J's Motel-Hotel and a local resident since 1927.

He was appointed to the Council in June 1964 to fill the term vacated by Floyd Roberts' resignation.

In addition to Johnson, three incumbent councilmen would have to run in the April election to retain their seats. They are: Harry Hoth, Carl Decker and Eugene McCleary.

Hoth is presently mayor. The mayor is elected by the Council.

kinds of medical and surgical problems, they are availing themselves of this service. In fact, if the occupancy rate continues to increase, it won't be long until our board of directors will be compelled to think of expansion or another hospital."

The Colorado Springs osteopathic Hospital Association is a non-profit tax exempt organization originated in 1956. Through the hard work of the orginal group of eight D. O.s (Doctors of Osteopathy) the former Valley High Nursing Home was purchased for the purpose of conversion to general hospital useage.

The surgical and obstetrical wing was added after a successful fund raising campaign which produced nearly a quarter of a million dollars. The group, intent upon making this a true community project, refused government funds to get the project off the ground. The community responded and the hospital is now rapidly growing first class medical institution with a place for the dedicated members of the Osteopathic profession to give complete care to those who have chosen them for the treatment of their health problems. The hospital is recognized by all health agencies and insurance companies and, after a year of operation, will be inspected by the American Osteopathic Hospital Association to be rated according to the building itself and the type of care it renders. According to local officials it is expected to receive a "class A" rating.

A bake sale will follow the luncheon.

Jaycee Week Capped With Japanese Wrestlers

The week of January 17-23, 1965 has been a busy one for the Colorado Springs Jaycees. It is not only because the past week was National Jaycee Week, but that Jaycees are always busy.

On Monday the Jaycees met in the Chamber of Commerce office for a planning session to determine what they will do for tourist promotion in 1965. The Jaycees sponsor two main projects in this area—the World Famous Chuck Wagon Dinners in the Garden of the Gods, and the weekly Square Dance at Acacia Park during the summer.

The Chuck Wagon will be serving nothing but U. S. Choice Steak in 1965, and the entertainment will be better than ever. The Chuck Wagon will operate from June 7 to the end of August serving the public Monday thru Friday nights.

The open air square dances at Acacia Park will be held on Wednesday nights for 13 weeks starting June 9. Arrangements have been made to have Norman Chichester do the calling once again this year.

At the membership meeting on Thursday night Thomas M. Wilkinson was awarded the chapters Distinguished Service Award. This is an award going to a young man of the community between the ages of 21 and 35, who has contributed to the community.

On Friday the Jaycees weer busy with two projects. Bright and early that morning a couple of them drove to Aurora to pick up the Japanese High School wrestling team and bring them to the Springs where they participated in general assemblies at Wasson and Palmer High Schools.

Friday night the Jaycees sponsored the Colorado Springs Junior Miss Pageant at Alexander Film. The winner of this pageant was lovely of Gidget Farrell. She will now go on to represent Colorado Springs in the state competition to be held in Englewood.

Saturday morning the Jaycees were back with the Japanese boys and took them to the Air Force Academy where the boys saw a movie on the Academy with narration in a Japanese dialogue. After the movie the boys toured the Academy. That evening at the Palmer Gym a combined Wasson and Palmer team took on the Japanese boys.

A busy week it has been for the members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce but is not much different than any other week. They are always busy! Help support the Jaycees for the rest of the year—remember, they volunteer their services and it is for you—the community.

Half of College Students Admit Having Cheated

many students have cheated as student body presidents estimate, and more than three times as many have cheated as deans estimated.

"Even students themselves underestimate the proportion of students who have cheated at some time; they tend to believe that only about half as many have cheated as their self-reports indicate."

Bowers traced the origns of college cheating to the high schools and the prevailing student philosophy there that being a "brain" damages the student's popularity. Thus cheating is the means of "getting by" without risk to social standing.

In college, he continued, the most influential deterrent to cheating is how it is regarded by the student body in general. Where student disapproval is high, the frequency of cheating is low and vice versa.

"Large schools have higher levels of cheating than small ones," Bowers reported, "and coeducation schools have higher levels than either men's or women's colleges."

He said the lowest level occurred on campuses with honor systems, where the students themselves police honesty.

Such a system uncovered the current Air Force Academy scandal. There, the heart of the school's honor code is the cadets' pledge that, "We will not lie, cheat or steal, nor tolerate among us those who do."

sis to make oxygen, Payson said.

He explained that the combination of oxygen and algae would result in the probable growth of plants and fish, which astronauts could use for food.

Payson said the solid propelled Nova booster may be used rocket men from the Earth's surface. The Nova, which would measure 400-500 feet in height and some 70 feet in diameter, may have a thrust of one million pounds and would cost about $150 per pound.

"Just getting the craft away from Earth would run in excess of $150 million and does not include building the craft and training astronauts," Payson said, indicating the tremendous amount of money involved.

He listed other booster rockets now being used or under development and the cost of each. They are: Thro Delta, 1,000 pound thrust at a cost of $2,300 per pound; Atlas, 2,900 pound thrust at a cost of $700 per pound; the Titan 2, 6,000 pounds at $350 per pound; the Titan 3, 5-25,000 pounds at a cost of $350 per pound; the Saturn, 200,000-250,000 pounds at a cost of $250 per pound.

Payson said there is no evidence that there are beings on Mars as we might know them, but life could exist in the form of vegetation. He said lichens are believed existing on the planet.

Others problems that spacemen would encounter include the temperatures on Mars, the fourth planet from the Sun. Payson said temperatures at night might dive to 100 degrees below zero on the Farenheit scale. He said, however, that they would be considerably above freezing during the day.

The planet also has little oxygen as compared to Earth, Payson noted. The total amount of water on Mars would be about the size of Lake Erie, he said.

Requiem Mass Monday For Mrs. Spannan

Requiem high mass will be held at 9 a.m. Monday at the Corpus Christi Catholic Church for Mrs. Mary E. Spannan, 78, who died Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rose Caswell of Route 4.

A resident of Colorado Springs since 1938, Mrs. Spannan was born Nov. 19, 1886 in Sutton, Neb. She leaves Sister M. Anita of St. Catherine, Ky., a sister, and brothers Mark Hughes, Omaha, Neb. and Joe Hughes of Sutton, Neb. Mrs. Spannan also is survived by four grandchildren.

Rosary service will be at 7 p.m. Sunday in the Law Mortuary Drawing Room. Msgr. Anthony G. Elzi will officiate at the funeral Monday. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery.

Mrs. Spannan, who lived on Route 4, was affiliated with the Corpus Christi Catholic Church.

Warm Funeral Rites Set Here on Monday

Funeral services for Mrs. Hedwig (Hattie) Warm, 707 N. Hancock, will be at 1 p.m. Monday at Swan Funeral Home, Leslie O. Sylvester officiating.

Mrs. Warm, 68, died in a local hospital Friday. She was born in Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 13, 1896. She had been a resident here since 1955. She was a member of the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

Mrs. Warm is survived by her husband, Herbert; a daughter, Mrs. Samuel Coddington, Narberth, Penn.; a son, Roger Warm, Valdosta, Ga., and five grandchildren.

The body will be cremated.

J. J. Admirand Rites Set Here Tuesday

tion Office, has said that those who leave the Academy will not be named.

From the roster of last fall's varsity, there were 53 listed with 21 seniors who have already completed their elgibility, and 17 juniors and 15 sophomores who still could play one or two years. The Air Force also has a Junior Varsity squad of juniors and sophomores that numbers about 45 and a freshman football team of at least the same size.

Of the 30 football players Zuckert said were involved, they could come from any or all of those squads of roughly 150 players.

This past year the Air Force ended up with four victories and a tie in 10 games, but with the expected return of many of those juniors and sophomores for next season there were bright prospects for the Falcons. Next fall's schedule includes the following teams Wyoming, Nebraska, Stanford, California, Oregon, University of Pacific, UCLA, Army, Arizona and Colorado.

Funeral Services Set For Mrs. Sanders

Funeral services for Mrs. Ruby L. Sanders, 55, of 2328 Constitution, are scheduled for 2 p.m. Monday at the Chapel of Memories Mortuary with Rev. Walter G. Schaefer officiating. Mrs. Sanders died Thursday in a local hospital.

She was born March 10, 1909 in Grafton, Neb. and came to Colorado Springs from Geneva, Neb. in 1925. Mrs. Sanders was married Feb. 14, 1946 in Colorado Springs.

Survivors include her husband, Robert D. Sanders of Colorado Springs, her mother, Mrs. Edith Elliott, Colorado Springs and several cousins, aunts and uncles.

Pallbearers will be Hans Kensington, George Vandenberg, Claire Snell, Don Pumphrey, Fred Phenix and Harvey Claycomb. Interment will be at Evergreen Cemetery following services.

Col. Lathrop Set for Second AFA Seminar

Lt. Col. Richard C. Lathrop, associate professor of Electrical Engineering, will present the second in the spring series of technical seminars sponsored by the Air Force Academy Department of Electrical Engineering Feb. 2 at 3:30 p.m. in room 6H26, Fairchild Hall.

The session is open to the public.

Col. Lathrop will present a tutorial session on the theory of the z-transform and the application of this theory to sampled data systems.

The session will show the relation between Laplace transforms pulse transforms, and z-transforms.

Three different methods of calculating z-transforms will be given and the methods will be illustrated by a number of practical examples.

Col. Lathrop has been engaged in research and development of automatic control and computing systems since his return to active duty following award of his Ph.D. in 1951.

He received his B. S. degree in 1948, his Masters in 1950, and his Ph. D., all from the University of Wisconsin.

Immediately prior to joining the Academy faculty in July, 1961, Col. Lathrop was commandant of the USAF Test Pilot Scool. He had been associated with the school since 1956.

Prior to serving at the school, the colonel was director of an Air Force Computing Laboratory and a project engineer for an aircraft automatic control system.

Col. Lathrop has been instrumental in developing several advanced courses in Electrical Engineering particularly in the areas of analog computation, electro-magnetic fields and transmission, and servomechanical analysis and synthesis.

He has written numerous papers on application of analog computers, system response criteria, and aircraft stability and flight testing.

The colonel is the co-discoverer of the ITAE criteria for system transient response. He also developed an early original digital computer program to simulate an analog computer.

He is a registered professional engineer in Colorado.

Other seminars will be given on the following dates: Feb. 17, The Seiler Research Lab Low Density Shock Tube — Technology and Characteristics; March 9, The Scientist and the Philosopher — Friend or Foe; April 6, Obstacles in Coaxial Waveguides, Part II; April 27, Dynamic Analysis of a Two-Phase Servo Meter; May 18, Some Fundamental Concept of Application of Information Theory.

Rifle Team Ends Course At Academy

All 17 members of the Air Force Academy youth activities junior rifle team have completed an eight-weeks training course under coach Capt. Bill Shaw and are now qualified to shoot for NRA (National Rifle Association) marksmanship awards and to compete with other junior rifle teams in the area.

The training course, conducted under NRA rules, was completed at the cadet indoor range. It covered safe handling of fire arms, care of fire arms, sighting exercises, and shooting experience.

HIGH FINANCE

SIOUX FALLS, S.D. (AP) — Three years ago, Arthur Hockett sent a want ad to the Sioux Falls Argus-Leader from his home in Rio Hondo, Tex. His payment was 18 cents short and, as a matter of routine, the newspaper sent him a postcard advising him of that fact.

The card, mailed from Tina, Mo., was recently returned with two dimes attached and this the payment," wrote Hockett, "but I lost the card and didn't find it until we moved."

HALF CENTURY OF SERVICE — Two Air Force Academy Directorate of Engineering employees count up over a half-century service with the federal government. Col. James A. Bower, Deputy Chief of Staff/Engineering presents a 30-year service award to Mr. Clyde A. Love of the Electrical Division, and a 20-year award to Mr. Frank G. Cancil of the Fire Department.

Auto Thefts Set National Record During 1964

Auto thefts in the United States in 1964 increased almost 17 per cent over the number of cars stolen in 1963, reaching a record high of 466,805, according to preliminary estimates released today by the National Automobile Theft Bureau. Total value of cars stolen is expected to exceed $432 million.

Car stealing, the nation's leading crime against property, has grown rapidly in recent years, far outstripping increases in automobile registrations. The NATB said that, over the ten-year span from 1954 through 1964 the number of registered automobiles increased 47 per cent while auto thefts jumped 124 per cent. The ratio of thefts to registrations last year was one in every 153 automobiles, compared to only one in every 232 cars registered in 1954.

Ray M. King, manager of NATB's Eastern Division, placed a large share of responsibility for the growth of this crime on thoughtless motorists.

"More than half of all cars stolen were not locked at the time they were taken. Drivers who leave keys in the ignition or fail to lock their car doors unwittingly create an open invitation to thieves."

King said that activity of professional thieves and organized car theft rings has been increasing but he pointed out that according to law enforcement officials young people account for most thefts — up to 80 per cent. He said that a great many thefts could be prevented if motorists would take the simple precaution of locking their cars every time they park.

Children make up one-third of the world's population. The International Union for Child Welfare and the United Nations Children's Fund estimate that 800 million children in the developing countries are in dire need of assistance.

Congress approved an appropriation of $30,000 on March 3, 1843, to finance tests to develop the telegraph.

OSCILLATING EYEBALLS

Nys-tag'-mus is an ocular condition in which one or both eyeballs jerk back and forth, independently of other eye movements. These rhythmic oscillations or tremors are little more than a flicker. They result from a variety of conditions and are useful to the physician in diagnosing certain diseases.

The movements usually are from side to side but may be up and down, oblique, or 'round and 'round. The frequency varies from 40 to 100 per minute. Now and then they are too weak or slight to be seen and are detected only with a sensitive instrument (electronstagmograph or ENG).

Most people with nystagmus are unaware of it. Others are annoyed by the apparent swaying of objects as they look at them. In some instances, nystagmus is associated with head nodding or tilting and dizziness.

These oscillations represent a reflex from the balancing mechanism of the ear. In Meniere's syndrome, for example, the victim not only has nystagmus but dizziness, nausea, and ear noises. Nystagmus also is associated with a variety of nervous disorders.

Children with poor vision may develop these ocular movements as a mechanism to obtain the best fixation on an object — a sort of discriminate vision. Babies born blind and those who lose sight shortly after birth all have a noticeable nystagmus. This does not occur when blindness comes on later in life. Youngsters who have lived in dark surroundings may be afflicted after their third birthday and often the condition is associated with head nodding. Many albinos develop nystagmus and so do miners from working continuously in dim light.

Heavy drinkers are said to have nystagmus that persists up to 12 hours after drinking, even though the blood no longer contains alcohol. It is not marked; an ENG is needed to detect the movements. They are noted when turning the head and may present some problems for the individual when he drives a car on the day after imbibing.

Dr. Van Dellen will answer questions on medical topics if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request.

SHIVERING INDUCES HEAT

R. M. writes: Whenever I go outside in the cold from a warm room, I shiver for about 5 minutes. What can I do to prevent this chilling?

REPLY

POOR NUTRITION

M. M. writes: What are the usual results of malnutrition?

REPLY

Weight loss, weakness, mental apathy, and swelling of the legs. In addition, specific deficiency diseases may develop. These include beriberi, pellagra, scurvy, rickets, kwashiorkor, goiter, some anemias, and certain neurological disorders.

CONESHAPED EYEBALL

M. B. writes: Is there a cure for keratoconus, an eye affliction?

REPLY

This is a hereditary disturbance in which the cornea of the eye is coneshaped instead of well rounded (concave). The condition cannot be cured but corneal lenses improve vision.

KNEES TRN INWUARD
KNEES TURN INWARD

M. W. writes: What can be done to prevent knock knees from getting worse?

REPLY

THE FAMILY LAWYER

"We've got to find the motive!" cry hundreds of detectives in hundreds of murder novels.

It is true that finding the motive may point the finger of suspicion at the murderer. But motive is not an essential element of the crime. In the eyes of the law, a man may be guilty of murder even though his motive is never discovered. As one court commented in convicting a man for an apparently motiveless murder:

"Sometimes knowledge of the secret motive may die with the dead man, or be locked up in the breast of the slayer."

Does this seem unfair? To understand the law's reasoning, consider an oft-overlooked distinction between two common words: "intent" and "motive."

Suppose a man enters a store, fatally shoots the proprietor, and F WITH CONTENTS OF THE cash register. He had both an intent and a motive.

His intent — that is, his immediate purpose when he pulled the trigger — was to shoot the victim. Proving such an intent is indeed essential to the state's case. It would not be murder if the gun had gone off by accident.

But his motive — that is, his underlying purpose — may have been perfectly proper. Perhaps he wanted money to buy a new car. Or to take his wife on a vacation. After all, a desire to become richer is the very motive that inspires millions of law-abiding citizens in their daily activities.

Clearly, therefore, guilt or innocence should not depend on the underlying motive that leads a man to kill. Whatever his motive, good or bad, known or unknown, it is still murder to kill with intent to kill.

Of course, even though motive is not an essential element of murder, it may still be an important piece of evidence in a particular case. By showing that the defendant had a strong incentive to kill, it may help to convince the jury that he really did kill.

Thus, proof that the butler stood to profit from the victim's will, or that he coveted the victim's wife, would make it more plausible that he administered the fatal poison.

Motive alone is not decisive. But motive, when added to other evidence of guilt, may spell conviction for the defendant. And lack of motive, added to other evidence of innocence, may set him free.

Silver Supply Sufficient, Says Mining Congress

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The American Mining Congress said Thursday there will be a sufficient supply of silver for both industrial and coinage needs over the long term because of planned production increases and a possible reduction in the silver content of U.S. coins.

The organization issued its statement in reply to one made Wednesday by Hady & Harman, a leading precious metals refining company, that the government eventually will have to abandon silver coins altogether to preserve U.S. silver reserves.

Silver producers, reluctant to lose even a portion of their outlet in coinage. Late last year, through the silver committee of the Mining Congress, silver producing companies hastened to assure that there will be enough silver in coming years to support both rising industrial demand and this country's coinage requirements, which are also growing at a steep rate.

The organization said Thursday that it supports a recommendation by the Treasury Department to reduce the silver content of subsidiary coins. This, it said, "would provide a safe and intelligent long-term solution to the current imbalance between production and consumption of silver."

The first most valuable player in the National League selected by the Baseball Writers of America in 1931 was Frankie Frisch of the St. Louis Cardinals.

New Angle Reported In Probe of Baker

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Rules Committee has uncovered a new angle in its Bobby Baker investigation. But committee members declined to go beyond Chairman B. Everett Jordan's statement that "this new case involves a project in North Carolina."

For more than a year the committee has been investigating how Baker, who resigned in October 1963 as secretary to the Senate's Democratic majority, became a millionaire while on the Senate payroll at a salary of $19,600 a year.

In a statement Friday, Jordan, D-N.C., said that "for several weeks the staff of the committee has been working on a new angle in the Baker investigation and we expect to begin hearings on this new phase of the investigation in the very near future."

He said the case was similar in some respects "to bath the Haitian meat deal and the freight forwarders case discovered by the committee several months ago."

The committee has taken testimony that Baker received fees from the buyer and the seller of Haitian meat imported into this country and that his law firm was retained by a public relations man who was paid $5,000 by a group interested in passage of a freight forwarders bill.

Money Bill for Courts Introduced

DENVER (AP) — Colorado citizens got the first bill today for their court reorganization, which eliminated justices of the peace and increased the number of district courts and county courts.

A Bill appropriating $215,198 to pay for added district court judge salaries and district attorney salaries came before the Senate under special orders and was passed without debate.

State Economy To Be Subject Of Lecture Here

"The Colorado Economy; The Recent Past and Prospects" is the topic of a lecture to be given February 18, from 8 to 9:30 p.m. by Dr. William Miernyk, professor of economics at the University of Colorado.

Dr. Miernyk is one of four speakers in the lecture series entitled, "Colorado Faces Change" which begins February 4 and ends February 25. The lectures, held in Olin Lecture Hall, are offered by the University of Colorado Center in cooperation with Colorado College. Included in Dr. Miernyk's lecture will be a discussion of Colorado's resource base, the lack of economic research, and a consideration of the problems and needs associated in the development of a scientific-technological complex.

Dr. Miernyk is director of the University of Colorado Bureau of Economic Research. Currently he and the bureau are involved in several economic studies of the Rocky Mountain area. Specific areas include Boulder and the Colorado River Basin. A native of Durango, Dr. Miernyk received his undergraduate degree at the University of Colorado and his graduate degrees from Harvard University. In November, 1963, he was director of the University-Industry Liason Conference which was held at the Broadmoor Hotel. This conference was the first time that representatives of business, government, and Colorado's three universities met to discuss the problems of liason among groups interested in Colorado's economic growth. Dr. Miernyk edited the proceedings of that conference into a booklet entitled, "Colorado and the New Technological Revolution." He has written numerous other monographs and articles. His most recent book, "Trade Unions in the Age of Affluence", was published in 1962.

Other speakers in the lecture series will discuss Colorado history, higher education, and politics. The fee for the entire series is $5. Tickets are now available at the University of Colorado offices, 1105 North Nevada Ave.

Youth Calls For Hearse, Shoots Self

JOHNSTOWN (UPI)— A 17-year-old Johnstown, Colo., youth was in serious condition in Denver's Porter Hospital today after what Johnstown police described as a bizarre suicide attempt.

Police said Mark Dodge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Dodge, called the Manqui Mortuary in Johnstown late Thursday and told the owner, Francis Manqui to "come pick me up; I'll be dead when you get here."

Manqui called police and went to the Dodge home where Mark was found with a .22-caliber bullet wound in the head.

Young Dodge was rushed to Porter Hospital and placed in the intensive care unit.

UPI Man Will Get Award In Journalism

LAWRENCE, Kan. (UPI) — Trustees of the William Allen White Foundation announced Friday that Earl J. Johnson, editor and vice president of United Press International had been chosen to receive the foundation's 1965 National Citation for Journalistic Merit. The award will be presented at the University of Kansas on Feb. 10 when Johnson comes here to deliver the William Allen White lecture.

This will be the second time the UPI editor has been honored on the campus where he was a student from 1919 through 1921. He received the Kansas University Alumni Association's distinguished service citation here in 1952 for outstanding service to his profession and humanity.

Feb. 10 is the birthday of William Allen White, the country's best-known small-town editor. After his death in 1944 the foundation in his name was established, and the university's Department of Journalism became the William Allen White School.

Springs Man Named To ROTC Position

Stephen C. Gates of Colorado Springs has been appointed security and law enforcement officer of the 90th Cadet Wing, Air Force ROTC, at Colorado State University. The appointment is based on his superior record during the first three years of ROTC training.

Gates is a senior, majoring in business, and is a Cadet Captain in the ROTC. He is a son of Mr .and Mrs. H. B. Gates of 135 Cresta Rd.

Gossard Says Funds Are Okay

DENVER (AP) — The chairman of a special committee appointed by Gov. John A. Love to study highway taxation, Rep. Bill Gossard, R-Craig, says there appears to be no rush about increasing funds for highway use.

Gossard said nothing presented to his committee at its most recent meeting—last August—indicated any immediate need for new revenues.

He expressed the view to reporters after ex-Gov. Ed C. Johnson said in a letter that the state will fall $15 million short of matching federal funds during the next five years and might be another $35 million short if the gross ton mile tax on trucks should be repealed.

Gossard said his committee will not make a final report for at least a year and presently plans no interim report to the legislature.

Whiplash Can Get Worse As Time Passes

By The Colorado Chiropractice Society

One of the most common type of auto accidents which police investigate is the rear end collision—a high percentage of the moving violation tickets which police write involve this type of crash.

But too often, the person who is hit suffers whiplash injury, but doesn't know there is any serious damage until much later when serious illness has come.

The weakest section of the spine is the cervical, or neck, portion. This part of the spine encases the most important nerve centers near the base of the brain. Yet, a whiplash injury, if it is not too severe, can cause minor nerve pinching which will slowly damage the victim's health.

The Doctor of Chiropractic warns that such injuries should be given the closest attention. Whiplash goes hand in hand with the rear end collision—as the head snaps back, spinal vertebrae may be misplaced or even broken.

Yet the spine is flexible enough that the injury may not be at all apparent at first. Some really. What about loss of health?

Whiplash injury can have far soreness or stiffness may bother the victim for a time, but the bruised muscles holding the bones in place feel better after a while, and the crash is forgotten.

Far too many accident victims make the mistake of accepting an insurance settlement without having a competent spinal examination, and it should be made by the right doctor. Just as the dentist is better equipped to take care of the teeth, the Doctor of Chiropractic is best equipped to x-ray the spine and interpret the findings. Too many find they have to pay for chiropractice care because they accepted an insurance adjustment too quickly.

But the loss of insurance protection is not the biggest worry, reaching effects. Headache is a common complication,, but paralysis of the arms, legs, and even blindness can result if the vertebrae are fractured or misplaced, thus causing nerve pressure.

Whiplash injury is too great a threat to be passed off lightly, says the Doctor of Chiropractic—make sure the spinal check is not overlooked.

HAS 100TH BIRTHDAY

LONDON (UPI) — Fleet Admiral Sir Henry Francis Oliver, one of Sir Winston Churchhill's closest collaborators when Churchill was first lord of the Admiralty in World War I, celebrated his 100th birthday Friday.

Thief Tells Teller To Sign Note, Too

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — A robber "withdrew" $2,879 from the Wells Fargo Bank branch Thursday then forced the teller to certify the amount in a signed note.

After getting the money, police said, the thief ordered teller Karen Puma, 20, to write a note with the amount stolen and sign it, "legal-like."

35 Red Cross Volunteers Gain Honors

Thirty - five American Red Cross volunteers will receive certificates of completion during graduation and recognition ceremonies Jan. 31 at 7 p.m. in the Air Force Academy Hospital.

All military and civilian personnel are invited to attend the ceremony.

According to Mrs. W. C. Hamilton, Jr., Academy volunteer chairman, 35 volunteers will receive certificates for successfully completing both classroom work and on-the-job training.

Volunteers who have at least 75 hours of service within a year's time will receive service awards.

Special recognition will also be given Academy military and civilian sections and individuals for outstanding support of the Academy Red Cross program.

Mrs. Williams will be assisted during the ceremony by Mrs. Kay Wadleigh, chairman for all volunteers in the Colorado Springs area.

Miss Kay Gilbride is Academy Red Cross Field Director.

School Chiefs Angry Over Court Ruling

By AUSTIN SCOTT

NEW YORK (AP) — City school officials have reacted angrily to a state court ruling that places their efforts to halt a spreading school boycott under the federal jurisdiction of the 1964 civil rights law.

Boycott leaders, arrested two days ago for successfully urging pupils to stay out of a primarily Negro Brooklyn school, Friday won the court decision they had sought, declaring their case a civil rights matter.

"Absurd," was the comment of School Board President James B. Donovan.

"If this ruling is law," he told reporters, "it means that a man can set a building afire, say that he is demonstrating for civil rights and when he is arrested, go to federal court. This will mean months of delay. Meanwhile, the fires are burning."

The boycott, begun four days ago at Brooklyn's P.S. 617, a school for disturbed youngsters, spread Friday to junior high school 139 in Harlem, where 35 per cent of the pupils stayed home.

The Rev. Milton A. Galamison, Negro minister who led two school boycotts last winter, has said his goal is to shut down 45 "segregated" schools in the city.

Galamison, one of those arrested, defines segregated as "more than 50 per cent Negro or Puerto Rican." Both the boycotted schools fit that category.

Thousands Reds Infiltrate Through Laos

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of North Vietnamese troops infiltrated into South Viet Nam through Laos last year to reinforce the Red guerrillas fighting the U.S.-supported Saigon government, authorities here report.

Hanoi's dispatch of fighting men southward may at least partly reflect the difficulty the Viet Cong is encountering in recruiting South Vietnamese. However, it also may be part of an effort to enlarge the guerrilla force as part of a Communist effort to step up the war.

The United States is heavily committed in South Viet Nam and has 22,000 men assisting the government forces.

The State and Defense Departments are reported working on figures, which probably will be released early next week, to show the extent of infiltration. The report that it was heavy and involved thousands of men became available Friday after the State Department had said there had been "a net increase over the last few weeks."

State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey said Hanoi's intent in sending reinforcements into Laos was not clear to the United States. Washington repeatedly has charged North Viet Nam with violating the 1962 Geneva agreement that provides for the neutralization of Laos and the withdrawal of all foreign forces. The United States claims that North Vietnamese military units never were withdrawn from the small kingdom.

U.S. officials say the stepup in Red forces in South Viet Nam has not changed either the military or the political situation there.

They said there remains an urgent need for unity among the various power factions which have kept the Saigon government in a state of dissension for many months.

As for the military effect of the Red build-up, U.S. officials said the increase in guerrilla forces roughly parallels the strengthening of the South Vietnamese military forces, with a ratio of about 5 or 6 soldiers to 1 guerrilla.

The United States was reported recently to have informed Saigon it would support an increase of 100,000 men in the armed forces, raising the total to about 660,000.

U.S. Still Opposed to Long-Term Credits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials reported Friday the United States does not plan to drop its opposition to granting credits of more than five years to Soviet Russia and other Communist countries.

They said the administration feels that such long-term credits would represent economic aid to Russia and would not be in the "free world's" interest.

City Traffic System Doesn't Need To Be Synchronized, the People Do

Text by JOHN KUGLIN
Photos by STANLEY PAYNE
Staff Photographer

"We can synchronize the system, but not the people," says City Traffic Engineer Don Smith.

His point is proven every time a pedestrian hops from a curb when a sign blinks "Don't Walk" or a driver "jumps" a signal before it turns green.

The Traffic Engineering Department operates under the logical theory that two masses cannot occupy a space at the same time. "You can't give something without taking away something from someone else," says Smith.

If persons understand principles behind traffic control, Smith believes it will be easier for everyone to walk and drive.

Let's take Nevada Avenue, he says, it's synchronized for driving at an average of 20 miles per hour.

Smith shows what he means by starting at the south city limits and driving on Nevada to the north limits without encountering a red signal. This can only be done when drivers are synchronized, not when they are hogging the lanes at very slow speeds.

Pedestrians are often more unsynchronized than drivers. There are two special intersections for them where diagonal crossing is allowed: Tejon Street's intersections with Pikes Peak Avenue and Kiowa Street.

The minimum 34 seconds allowed for diagonal crossing is supposed to be enough for even the slowest walker, but some pedestrians pay no attention to the "Don't Walk" flasher and are trapped in the traffic.

Often they are the three classes of persons the signal was designed to protect: (1) the elderly, (2) the young, and (3) the partially incapacitated.

The downtown search for a parking space doesn't help traffic control. The best synchronized signal doesn't help when traffic is backed through the intersection it controls by someone vacating a parking space.

The concept of "signalization" is nothing new for Colorado Springs. But now there's more impressive and expensive gadgetry.

The most expensive signal installation is at Cimarron and 8th Streets, a joint $10,000 city-state project.

The mushrooming population of Colorado Springs, particularly on the east side, has made it more difficult to walk and drive in the city.

So traffic signals are put where they will do the most good, when warranted by traffic counts taken by Traffic Analyst Ralph Wendland and other considerations.

Signals, which are an attempt to improve the traffic flow by regulating it, are now at 87 intersections.

"Traffic signals don't prevent accidents, sometimes they cause them" is a point the traffic engineer frequently stresses in his frequent talks to civic groups.

"Oh no, automatic signals are not safety devices," agrees Jay Myers, assistant traffic engineer.

Statistics compiled by the department show a substantial increase in rear end collisions when an intersection is signalized. This is usually offset by a decrease in collisions from opposing lanes of traffic.

"No control device is ever put in without a reason. We like to start with the least control possible and build up." theorizes the traffic engineer.

Once signals are in there is the problem of synchronizing them. The downtown area has its own automatic system for 38 intersections. Another system controls the two intersections with diagonal pedestrian crossings. There are outlying connected systems such as West Colorado Avenue and actuated intersections controlled in part by traffic flow. As funds are available the department plans to extend synchronization.

Educating the public is given top priority by the department. "We are always glad to hear citizens requests for assistance," says Smith. "We don't regard this as complaints.

One educational project last year was to show youngsters how to use the 19 new push button signals installed at school crossings.

The department continues to experiment with new traffic control devices. Some of these are permanent street markings and simplified signal circuits.

SPECIALIZED SIGNALS—There's a special word in the Traffic Engineer's vocabulary for crooked intersections like this one at Uintah Street and Cascade Avenue. Traffic is kept moving safely with a barrier island, lines and arrows (slated for repainting) and a transistor signal system. Moving westbound traffic has passed over a magnetic tripping device under the pavement. It will hold waiting traffic with a red signal until the intersection is cleared. The photographer took this wide-angle shot after he was hoisted aloft in the department's aerial rig.

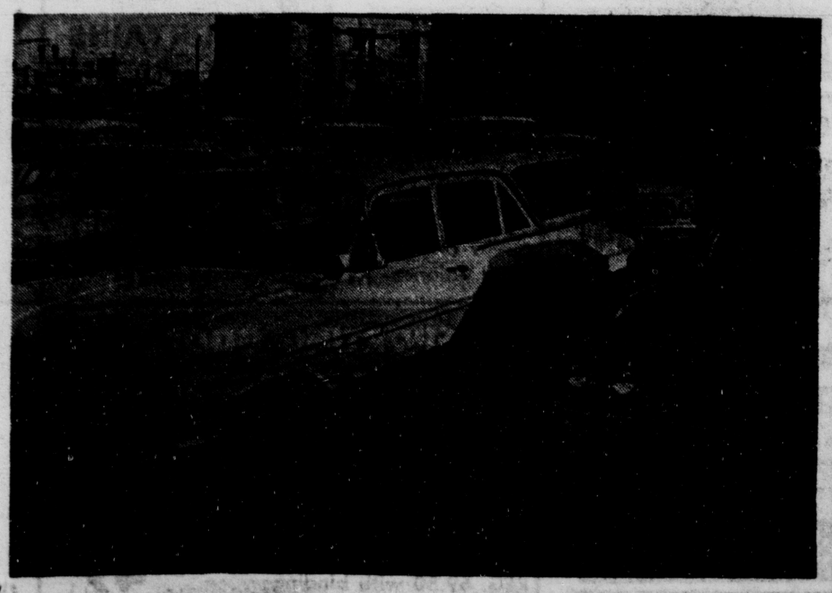
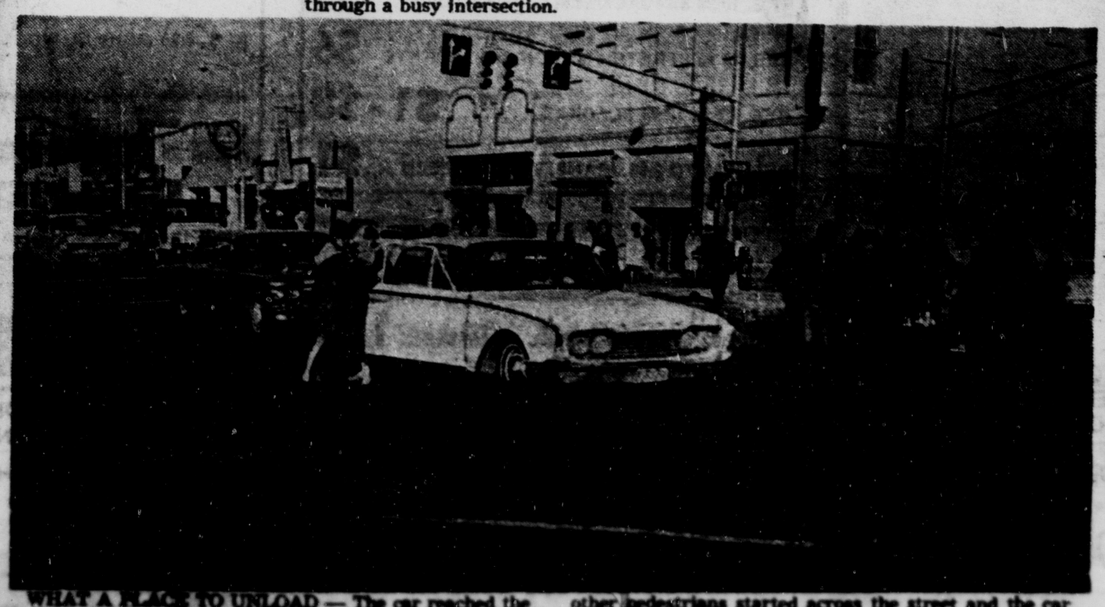
UNSYNCHRONIZED GIRLS—The pedestrian crossing sign flashed "Don't Walk" but the girls thought they could beat the signal. Now they are caught in the center of the traffic flow at the busy intersection of Tejon Street and Pikes Peak Avenue. "We can synchronize the system, but not the people," says City Traffic Engineer Don Smith.



PILE UP—The most sophisticated synchronized signal system won't untangle this typical downtown traffic pile up. As the car (right) backs from a coveted parking space on Pikes Peak Avenue, another driver waits to move in. The right lane of traffic is backed for a block. The snarl extends around the corner on Weber Street.

WHISTLE NOT OUTDATED—Signals have their place but sometimes they are not as efficient as the police traffic detail. Patrolman Kenneth Trapp, his whistle ready, is about to step from the curb to direct traffic through a busy intersection.



WHAT A PLACE TO UNLOAD — The car reached the middle of the intersection of Tejon and Kiowa Streets when the girls decided to get out. The policeman and other pedestrians started across the street and the car was trapped with the vehicle behind it. The policeman finally motioned the cars across the intersection.

GADGETRY—It takes a lot of equipment to operate the complex signals for the crooked intersection at Cascade Avenue and Uintah Street. Joe Rico, traffic signal technician, checks signal cycles. If he shortens the cycle, traffic will move faster but fewer cars will get through the intersections.

City Traffic System Doesn't Need To Be Synchronized, the People Do

"We can synchronize the system, but not the people," says City Traffic Engineer Don Smith.

His point is proven every time a pedestrian hops from a curb when a sign blinks "Don't Walk" or a driver "jumps" a signal before it turns green.

The Traffic Engineering Department operates under the logical theory that two masses cannot occupy a space at the same time. "You can't give something without taking away something from someone else," says Smith.

If persons understand principles behind traffic control, Smith believes it will be easier for everyone to walk and drive.

Let's take Nevada Avenue, he says, it's synchronized for driving at an average of 20 miles per hour.

Smith shows what he means by starting at the south city limits and driving on Nevada to the north limits without encountering a red signal. This can only be done when drivers are synchronized, not when they are hogging the lanes at very slow speeds.

Pedestrians are often more unsynchronized than drivers. There are two special intersections for them where diagonal crossing is allowed: Tejon Street's intersections with Pikes Peak Avenue and Kiowa Street.

The minimum 34 seconds allowed for diagonal crossing is supposed to be enough for even the slowest walker, but some pedestrians pay no attention to the "Don't Walk" flasher and are trapped in the traffic.

Often they are the three classes of persons the signal was designed to protect: (1) the elderly, (2) the young, and (3) the partially incapacitated.

The downtown search for a parking space doesn't help traffic control. The best synchronized signal doesn't help when traffic is backed through the intersection it controls by someone vacating a parking space.

The concept of "signalization" is nothing new for Colorado Springs. But now there's more impressive and expensive gadgetry.

The most expensive signal installation is at Cimarron and 8th Streets, a joint $10,000 city-state project.

The mushrooming population of Colorado Springs, particularly on the east side, has made it more difficult to walk and drive in the city.

So traffic signals are put where they will do the most good, when warranted by traffic counts taken by Traffic Analyst Ralph Wendland and other considerations.

Signals, which are an attempt to improve the traffic flow by regulating it, are now at 87 intersections.

Selassie Is Named Protector of Faith

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Emperor Haile Selassie was proclaimed "protector of the faith" at Thursday's ceremonial closing of the conference here of heads of the Oriental Orthodox churches — the first such meeting in almost 2,000 years.

The Ethiopian emperor was a prime mover in bringing the church leaders together for the conference, during which many delegates called for action to bring unity to the Orthodox faiths.

AFA Seminar Will Feature Technical Topics

Technical topics — obscure perhaps to the layman, but of vital importance to scientists, engineers, and educators — are scheduled for discussion during the spring seminar series sponsored by the Air Force Academy of Electrical Engineering.

Subjects to be covered between Feb. 2 and May 18 range from z-transforms and sampled data systems to the relationship of the scientist and philosopher.

Seminars will be at 3:30 p.m. in the Electrical Engineering conference room, 6H26 Fairchild Hall, Feb. 2 and 17, Mar. 9, April 6 and 27, and May 18.

All sessions are open to the public.

Feb. 2, Lt. Col. R. C. Lathrop, associate professor of Electrical Engineering, will present a tutorial session on z-transforms and sampled data systems.

Technology and characteristics of the Frank J. Seiler Research Lab shock tube will be discussed Feb. 17 by Capt. D. S. Johnson and 1st Lt. C. F. Stebbins, lab research associates.

For the Pikes Peak Group of the Colorado Mountain Club

Colorado Springs has been called the City of Sunshine and what could be more fittingly said about our fair city? Like a powerful king of the day, the sun comes rejoicing in the east. Higher it rises in the sky and the whole landscape is flooded with its golden light. In the summer, all vegetation is cheered by the sunlight and begin to open leaves and buds; flowers and vegetables begin to grow. As we watch the sun drop from sight every evening, we sometimes have the feeling what if it should never rise again and we would be forever shut off from sunlight? The great sun has never failed us yet and whatever comes, the sun still shines. Science agrees that there is no substitute for sunshine. There are many attempts at making substitutes which might give the same effect but they cannot get the same effects and they cannot get the wonderful power of the sun.

It is our nearest star and the central body of the solar system. For the inhabitants of the earth, no body in the heavens compares for an instant with the sun in point of interest and vital importance. For not only are the orbits of the earth and the sun but all forms of life on the earth are immediately dependent upon the heat and light which we derive from the sun. Sunshine effects us both physically and mentally. It is a psychological fact that people do rash acts in a fit of despondency during a period of gloomy weather which perhaps, they would never have thought of doing in bright sunny weather.

A bright day with sunshine is conducive to good business and better mentality, in various lines of work, cheerfulness and full of energy and good workmanship. We are in a better mood for whatever comes our way. Sunshine is one of our great assets in life. It is free for all of us and cannot be bought or sold and no one person can monopolize it.

After all, elements in nature are the most permanent things in life. We lose money and fight over it. We are robbed of jewels and money, pleasures are just for the moment, we tire of fine clothes, television, picture shows, and fine cars. People sicken and die but the air is still in existence and the sun still shines. As the poet said, "Night has a thousand eyes and the day but one, yet the light of the whole world dies with the setting sun." For the inhabitants of the earth, no other body in the heavens compares for an instant with the sun from point of interest and vital importance.

DISCUSS WEED CONTROL — A five-year weed control program in Evergreen Cemetery is under discussion by (from left) John A. Miller, grass seed company representative; Stuart Richter, director of the City Parks and Recreation Department; Jack Sutton, botanist; and Dee Rhodes, Evergreen Cemetery superintendent.

City Out to Get Rid of Weeds At Evergreen

The city plans to get rid of some weeds in Evergreen Cemetery.

Weed eradication and rough grass control will start this year, according to Stuart Richter, director of the City Parks and Recreation Department.

Some weed control measures were started last year, but the new program will be more extensive and spread out over five years.

Richter said two representatives of the Scott Company were engaged to offer professional advice and suggest a program to follow "in order that we can make some real strides in weed and rough grass control."

The weed control program is one of several improvements planned at Evergreen and Fairview Cemeteries. They will be paid for from budgeted funds. The cemeteries are classified as self supporting.

Richter said a new maintenance building will be constructed this year in Evergreen Cemetery. The old buildings in the older section will be torn down.

It is also planned to repave one mile of roadways in Evergreen and patch all the bad spots in the rest of asphalted sections. Another new block will be opened this year, too.

Planned this year is remodeling of public rest rooms in both cemeteries.

Additionally, Richter said, the maintenance building in Fairview cemetery will be painted and the office there remodeled.

Richter said it is also hoped to plant some rye or crested wheat to help hold the soil in newly graded areas in Fairview.

Council to Unite Clubs Proposed Here in Springs

Representatives of organizations serving international visitors and students in the Pikes Peak region will unite Tuesday night for dinner at the El Paso Club to discuss the feasibility of a joint Council.

The immediate purpose of the Council would be the exchange and clarification of existing services and programs offered to foreign visitors in the area and the investigation of future joint ventures.

Elizabeth Wright Ingraham, chairman of the Institute of International Education Exchange of Persons Committee in Colorado Springs, will act as temporary chairman for the meeting. Dr. Fred Sondermann of Colorado College will head an advisory group made up of individuals experienced in community international visitor programs.

There are some thirty organizations in the area serving the idea of international exchange work in one way or another according to Mrs. Ingraham. Some of the groups are involved with direct programming for recipients of government, private or academic grantees while others are cooperating by programs, attractions and information for the visitors.

In addition, the temporary chairman gave as a contributing reason for the exploration of such a joint Council the need to sustain a broad and enriched community base to keep pace with the growing area population as well as with the growing cultural and education exchange programs.

"The Pikes Peak Region long has played host to international visitors, and its various cultural centers and scenic opportunities are a constant attraction. Such people to people programs are one of the few areas of contact where individual citizens can reach out and be heard on the world scene."

Any organization that feels they may fit into such a Council and who have not already been contacted are asked to call Mrs. Ingraham or Dr. Sondermann for further information.

Three-Minute Speech Given by Humphrey

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey took over as presiding officer of the Senate Friday amid a standing ovation, and the senators let him make a three-minute speech.

It was probably his last chance for a while to say that much. The vice president seldom has a chance to say anything in the Senate. He rules on procedural matters and votes in case of a tie.

Dist. 11 Teachers to Get Briefing on Classroom TV

Teachers and princpals involved in District 11's pilot program in televised instruction will get a detailed briefing on the program during a four-hour workshop, starting at 4 p.m. Monday, at Wasson High School.

The workshop, organized by William P. Wells, director of audiovisual education, is planned to familiarize teachers with lesson content, how to prepare classes for televised lessons, and how to followup each lesson for maximum learning.

During the first hour of the workshop, teachers will hear talks by Superintendent Thomas B. Doherty and Dr. Arthur R. Olson, deputy superintendent, who will explain the aims and objectives of the local program.

In addition to District 11 officials, the workshop program includes three specialists in educational television from outside the district. Dr. Richard Bell, director of educational television, University of Colorado, will speak on instructional television in Colorado.

"Using Classroom Television is the topic of Tracy Clement, assistant director of the Great Plains Library, Lincoln,, Neb. Meeting in separate sessions with fourth, fifth, and sixth teachers, Clement will show them how to use the instructional programs most effectively in their own classrooms.

John Rugg, a television teacher at Station KRMA in Denver, will tell teachers about "Building a Television Program" to give them a background for answering pupils questions about television production.

In a third session, teachers will hear Robert Card, manager of Station KSHS FM, talk about the operation and care of classroom television receivers.

The first of the daily televised lesson in District 11 start February 1 and will be seen from 10:30 to 11 a.m. over Station KRDO, Channel 13. Initially, about 1800 pupils in 11 elementary schools will see the programs.

National YMCA Week To Be Observed Here

National YMCA Week will be observed this year today through next Sunday. The local 'Y' has scheduled several special events for YMCA Week with an Open House on the 31st to climax the week.

The Open House will be from 2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. during which time there will be a complete schedule of YMCA activities and exhibits going on to demonstrate the different facets of 'Y' program.

Jan. 31 also will be observed as YMCA Sunday and most of the local churches will use YMCA church bulletins at their services on that day. The public is invited to the Open House.

CU Prof Gets Fullbright Fellowship

Prof. Walter N. Vickery, chairman of the University of Colorado Department of Slavic and Eastern Languages, has been awarded a Fulbright-Hayes Fellowship to spend the next seven months in Italy.

He will do research on the Italian Renaissance comic epic, a type of amusing narrative poetry written in the 14th and 15th centuries, tracing the influence of the epic on the later writings of Voltaire, Byron and Pushkin.

Vickery joined the CU faculty next month. During his absence, Prof. Donald Willis will serve as acting department chairman.

Vickery joined the C University last July. He is a native of England and a U.S. citizen. He has degrees from Oxford and Harvard Universities, and he has taught at the Universities of Montreal and Indiana. He also spent a year in Moscow on a British Foreign Office appointment.

Teachers and princpals involved in District 11's pilot program in televised instruction will get a detailed briefing on the program during a four-hour workshop, starting at 4 p.m. Monday, at Wasson High School.

The workshop, organized by William P. Wells, director of audiovisual education, is planned to familiarize teachers with lesson content, how to prepare classes for televised lessons, and how to followup each lesson for maximum learning.

During the first hour of the workshop, teachers will hear talks by Superintendent Thomas B. Doherty and Dr. Arthur R. Olson, deputy superintendent, who will explain the aims and objectives of the local program.

In addition to District 11 officials, the workshop program includes three specialists in educational television from outside the district. Dr. Richard Bell, director of educational television, University of Colorado, will speak on instructional television in Colorado.

"Using Classroom Television is the topic of Tracy Clement, assistant director of the Great Plains Library, Lincoln,, Neb. Meeting in separate sessions with fourth, fifth, and sixth teachers, Clement will show them how to use the instructional programs most effectively in their own classrooms.

John Rugg, a television teacher at Station KRMA in Denver, will tell teachers about "Building a Television Program" to give them a background for answering pupils questions about television production.

In a third session, teachers will hear Robert Card, manager of Station KSHS FM, talk about the operation and care of classroom television receivers.

The first of the daily televised lesson in District 11 start February 1 and will be seen from 10:30 to 11 a.m. over Station KRDO, Channel 13. Initially, about 1800 pupils in 11 elementary schools will see the programs.

National YMCA Week To Be Observed Here

National YMCA Week will be observed this year today through next Sunday. The local 'Y' has scheduled several special events for YMCA Week with an Open House on the 31st to climax the week.

The Open House will be from 2:00 p.m. to 5:00 p.m. during which time there will be a complete schedule of YMCA activities and exhibits going on to demonstrate the different facets of 'Y' program.

Jan. 31 also will be observed as YMCA Sunday and most of the local churches will use YMCA church bulletins at their services on that day. The public is invited to the Open House.

Tax Bill Is Due Wednesday

DENVER (AP) — Rep. John Vanderhoof, R-Glenwood Springs leader of the Republican minority in the Colorado House of Representatives, said Friday that Gov. John A. Love's tax bills will be introduced next Tuesday or Wednesday.

Democratic leaders have complained about delay in introduction of the bills, proposing a boost from two to three per cent in the sales tax, and from three to five cents a package in the cigarette tax.

Vanderhoof said the sales tax legislation is ready, but the cigarette tax bill has been held up pending consultation with bond attorneys. Money from the cigarette tax would be used for capital construction at state institutions, and Vanderhoof said there was a question about tax anticipation warrants.

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. Friday announced distribution of nearly $102 million in GM common stock, government bonds and cash to 60,000 salaried employes in the United States.

The distribution under a 1959 savings fund plan, was worth an average of $1,700 per employe.

Colorful Service Career to End After 20 Years

An ex-sailor who took part in 10 combat operations and spent the last six years at the Air Force Academy with "stars in his eyes" will retire after more than 20 years active service, Feb. 1.

TSgt. Omer B. Bunch joined Academy staff March 18, 1958 and for much of that period has been assigned to the Planetarium. He is presently NCOIC and chief technician.

Sgt. Bunch is responsible for many technical innovations which have increased both the versatility and reliability of Planetarium equipment.

He began his military career Feb. 26, 1942 by enlisting in the Navy. Following boot training at San Diego, Sgt. Bunch joined the crew of the USS Begley as a fire controlman.

Between April 16, 1942 and Nov. 19, 1945, he took part in 10 operations in Asiatic - Pacific Theater. Included were the Guada canal-Tulagu landings and operations in the Eastern Solomons, Eastern New Guinea, the Bismarck Archipelago, Marianas, Western Carolines, Leyte, Luzon, Iwo Jima, and Okinawa.

Sgt. Bunch received his discharge from the Navy Nov. 21, 1945. He returned to the service Sept. 12, 1947—enlisting in the Air Force.

Prior to joining the Academy staff, the sergeant served at Keesler AFB, Miss., Decatur, Ala., Pepperrell AFB, Newfoundland, Westover AFB, Mass., and Orlando AFB, Fla.

Birds, Beasts and Decayed Teeth Were Routine for DOCARE Team

(EDITOR'S NOTE: A Colorado Springs man recently was presented a personal award for humanitarian services by DOCARE International. DOCARE is a non-profit, non-sectarian national association of physicians and friends of the osteopathic profession who fly their airplanes to remote areas to donate their skill to sick and destitute people. The award was made to Ray Dorr for work he did in 1963 while accompanying a DOCARE medical team among the primitive cave dwelling Tarahumara Indians in a remote mountain area of Chihuahua, Mexico. His story follows.)

By RAY DORR

People often ask me to describe a typical day with a DOCARE team. Let me tell of the day we called the "tooth pulling party in Panalachi". After swooping in for a breath-taking landing in a corn field near the Tarahumaran mission headquarters in Sisoquichi, I had a few days to gather material for an article and learn a few words of the Indian dialect while the doctor and two dentists on the team worked in an ancient adobe hospital. My teachers were an Indian girl who teaches Spanish to other Indian girls, and an American nurse whom I must give the ficticious name of Millie.

One day Dr. Allaby, the president of DOCARE, a dentist from Boulder, a Mexican guide and I climbed into a jeep and bounced off in a cloud of white dust toward a village called Panalachi. Four hours later the jeep lunged off a pine-covered ridge, attempted and failed to broad jump a murky stream, then kicked up a suffocating cloud of red dust as it charged across a field of stunted corn toward a cluster of adobe houses.

The big man in Panalachi was a friendly Mexican named Senor Ortez. He carried a .45 automatic in his hip pocket. His huge house was straight out of the pages of a Southwestern story. It had thick adobe walls, plank floors and ancient furniture. In the spotless kitchen was the pride and joy of Mrs. Ortez — a blue porcelain wood range. The house was built in three sections — living quarters, general store and church. In the tiny room called the general store, you could buy straw sombreros, lariets, coffee grinders, shoes twenty years out of style and warm pepsi-cola. This was the only store for hundreds of Indians in the surrounding mountains.

When the guide parked the jeep in a patio behind the Ortez house, I just sat their for a couple of minutes. Then I heaved myself out of the metal creature and kicked it, hard. Now I felt better.

Dr. Allaby took over a cubby hole in the dark recesses of the house for a consultation, operating and recovery room. I helped the dentist set up shop in the patio. The only chair available was a wooden affair that looked something like a lawn chair. When we propped it up against a roof post, sparrows flew out of the thatch overhead.

The dentist eyed the birds overhead. "Very sterile operation we're going to have today," "Especially with these pigs, dogs and chickens running around under foot."

We lined up two water buckets on a bench, sloshed in some Clorox for disinfecting dentist tools, sat a cardboard box by the chair for a spitoon and we were ready for business.

A single Indian cowered in a corner of the patio. The dentist pointed into his own mouth and motioned toward the chair. The Indian shook his head and pointtd toward his left foot. He had a broken foot.

Twenty minutes later the patio was packed with silent Indians and laughing, jostling young Mexican cowboys, their wives and children. This was an eventful day in the lives of these isolated people. The women came forward first, later the men. I held a flashlight in one hand, spalshed instruments in the Clorox with the other, tickled the chickens away with my foot and translated for the dentist. "Bitt hard on the cotton and keep your mouth shut for five minutes."

The dentist was even busier. He didn't have to ask which tooth hurt. A young man not yet out of his teens would sit down and open his mouth to reveal maybe a half dozen healthy teeth. His gums would be studded with blackened, decayed stubs. Some of the abcessed roots could be flipped out. Otthers clung stubbornly to the jawbone. Many of the older people had not a single good tooth but many bad ones. Even today I wonder at the years of pain those people endure in their caves and log huts.

All afternoon I had noticed an old Mexican woman dressed in black with a black rebosa over her head. When I would catch her eye she would point to her mouth and smile. But she never came near the chair. Finally, when the last cowboy had been jostled into the chair by his comrades and the last Indian had stood up and walked silently away, the old woman came slowly forward. The dentist met her and led her gently to the chair.

Of all the bad teeth in the village, hers were the worst. Of the hardest jawbones, hers were the hardest. I remember still the look of pain and fright in her eyes. After an eternity it was over. The old woman's son came forward to lead her away. The dentist handed the old woman some pills and I told the son how often she should take one. But I don't know if he understood.

I picked up the cardboard spitoon, and shifted the heap of teeth in bloody saliva.

"How many teeth do you suppose you pulled this afternoon, Doc?" I asked. "A couple of hundred?"

"More than that," he answtred. "I extrated twenty from that old woman." Then he cursed.

My travels with the DOCARE team were limited to a thirty miles square area near the Continental Divide. I wanted to descend into the barrancas or canyons nearby that are deeper than the Grand Canyon of Arizona. Also, I wanted to go deeper into Tarahumara country where, according to legend, there are lost Spanish cities and even more primitive segments of the Tarahumara tribe.

So, last June, Roy Walholm, Jr., 17 Marland Rd., and I journeyed by Jeep through much of the Tarahumara stronghold. The dirt roads and trails are only forty miles in a full day's drive. In over 300 miles we found but a single road sign. Our only maps were those drawn in the dust by Mexican cowboys and Indians. The people, however, often seemed surprised when we greeted them in their own language and always guided us to the right trail or "highway", as they called it.

We were told that we could not drive the jeep to the bottom of the Barranca de Urica. But we did. At the bottom of the canyon we explored the ruins of an ancient Spanish fort. In nearby caves were many stone artifacts.

Later, while following the Continental Divide toward the headwaters of the Barranca de Urica, we photographed an Indian hitched to a heavy plow.

Descending to the dessert from the mountains we stopped to camp one night when a local Mexican warned us that twenty-three men, including three policemen had been killed by bandits along that stretch of road. We packed up and drove all night to reach the town of Parral on the highway. At the border the story of the bandits was confirmed by Americans.

Last month Dr. Allaby met an untimely death because of cancer. But his work among the primitive people in this nearly inaccessible corner of Mexico continues.

After swooping in for a breath-taking landing in a corn field near the Tarahumaran mission headquarters in Sisoquichi, I had a few days to gather material for an article and learn a few words of the Indian dialect while the doctor and two dentists on the team worked in an ancient adobe hospital. My teachers were an Indian girl who teaches Spanish to other Indian girls, and an American nurse whom I must give the ficticious name of Millie.

One day Dr. Allaby, the president of DOCARE, a dentist from Boulder, a Mexican guide and I climbed into a jeep and bounced off in a cloud of white dust toward a village called Panalachi. Four hours later the jeep lunged off a pine-covered ridge, attempted and failed to broad jump a murky stream, then kicked up a suffocating cloud of red dust as it charged across a field of stunted corn toward a cluster of adobe houses.

The big man in Panalachi was a friendly Mexican named Senor Ortez. He carried a .45 automatic in his hip pocket. His huge house was straight out of the pages of a Southwestern story. It had thick adobe walls, plank floors and ancient furniture. In the spotless kitchen was the pride and joy of Mrs. Ortez — a blue porcelain wood range. The house was built in three sections — living quarters, general store and church. In the tiny room called the general store, you could buy straw sombreros, lariets, coffee grinders, shoes twenty years out of style and warm pepsi-cola. This was the only store for hundreds of Indians in the surrounding mountains.

When the guide parked the jeep in a patio behind the Ortez house, I just sat their for a couple of minutes. Then I heaved myself out of the metal creature and kicked it, hard. Now I felt better.

Dr. Allaby took over a cubby hole in the dark recesses of the house for a consultation, operating and recovery room. I helped the dentist set up shop in the patio. The only chair available was a wooden affair that looked something like a lawn chair. When we propped it up against a roof post, sparrows flew out of the thatch overhead.

The dentist eyed the birds overhead. "Very sterile operation we're going to have today," "Especially with these pigs, dogs and chickens running around under foot."

We lined up two water buckets on a bench, sloshed in some Clorox for disinfecting dentist tools, sat a cardboard box by the chair for a spitoon and we were ready for business.

A single Indian cowered in a corner of the patio. The dentist pointed into his own mouth and motioned toward the chair. The Indian shook his head and pointed toward his left foot. He had a broken foot.

Twenty minutes later the patio was packed with silent Indians and laughing, jostling young Mexican cowboys, their wives and children. This was an eventful day in the lives of these isolated people. The women came forward first, later the men. I held a flashlight in one hand, spalshed instruments in the Clorox with the other, tickled the chickens away with my foot and translated for the dentist. "Bitt hard on the cotton and keep your mouth shut for five minutes."

The dentist was even busier. He didn't have to ask which tooth hurt. A young man not yet out of his teens would sit down and open his mouth to reveal maybe a half dozen healthy teeth. His gums would be studded with blackened, decayed stubs. Some of the abcessed roots could be flipped out. Others clung stubbornly to the jawbone. Many of the older people had not a single good tooth but many bad ones. Even today I wonder at the years of pain those people endure in their caves and log huts.

All afternoon I had noticed an old Mexican woman dressed in black with a black rebosa over her head. When I would catch her eye she would point to her mouth and smile. But she never came near the chair. Finally, when the last cowboy had been jostled into the chair by his comrades and the last Indian had stood up and walked silently away, the old woman came slowly forward. The dentist met her and led her gently to the chair.

Of all the bad teeth in the village, hers were the worst. Of the hardest jawbones, hers were the hardest. I remember still the look of pain and fright in her eyes. After an eternity it was over. The old woman's son came forward to lead her away. The dentist handed the old woman some pills and I told the son how often she should take one. But I don't know if he understood.

I picked up the cardboard spitoon, and shifted the heap of teeth in bloody saliva.

"How many teeth do you suppose you pulled this afternoon, Doc?" I asked. "A couple of hundred?"

"More than that," he answtred. "I extrated twenty from that old woman." Then he cursed.

My travels with the DOCARE team were limited to a thirty miles square area near the Continental Divide. I wanted to descend into the barrancas or canyons nearby that are deeper than the Grand Canyon of Arizona. Also, I wanted to go deeper into Tarahumara country where, according to legend, there are lost Spanish cities and even more primitive segments of the Tarahumara tribe.

So, last June, Roy Walholm, Jr., 17 Marland Rd., and I journeyed by Jeep through much of the Tarahumara stronghold. The dirt roads and trails are only forty miles in a full day's drive. In over 300 miles we found but a single road sign. Our only maps were those drawn in the dust by Mexican cowboys and Indians. The people, however, often seemed surprised when we greeted them in their own language and always guided us to the right trail or "highway", as they called it.

We were told that we could not drive the jeep to the bottom of the Barranca de Urica. But we did. At the bottom of the canyon we explored the ruins of an ancient Spanish fort. In nearby caves were many stone artifacts.

Later, while following the Continental Divide toward the headwaters of the Barranca de Urica, we photographed an Indian hitched to a heavy plow.

Descending to the dessert from the mountains we stopped to camp one night when a local Mexican warned us that twenty-three men, including three policemen had been killed by bandits along that stretch of road. We packed up and drove all night to reach the town of Parral on the highway. At the border the story of the bandits was confirmed by Americans.

Last month Dr. Allaby met an untimely death because of cancer. But his work among the primitive people in this nearly inaccessible corner of Mexico continues.

In fact, the maps drawn in the dust turned out to be the only maps the men could find on their trip. In the background is a Tarahumara Indian who is dressed in the typical "blouse and diaper" costume of the area.

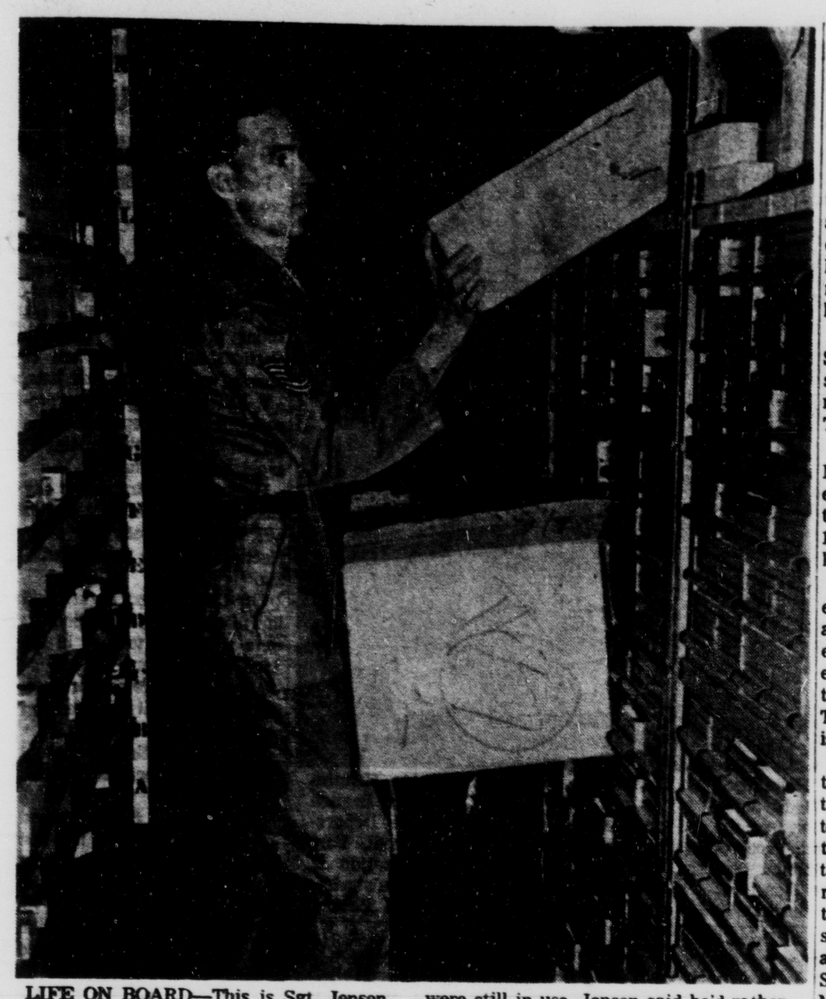
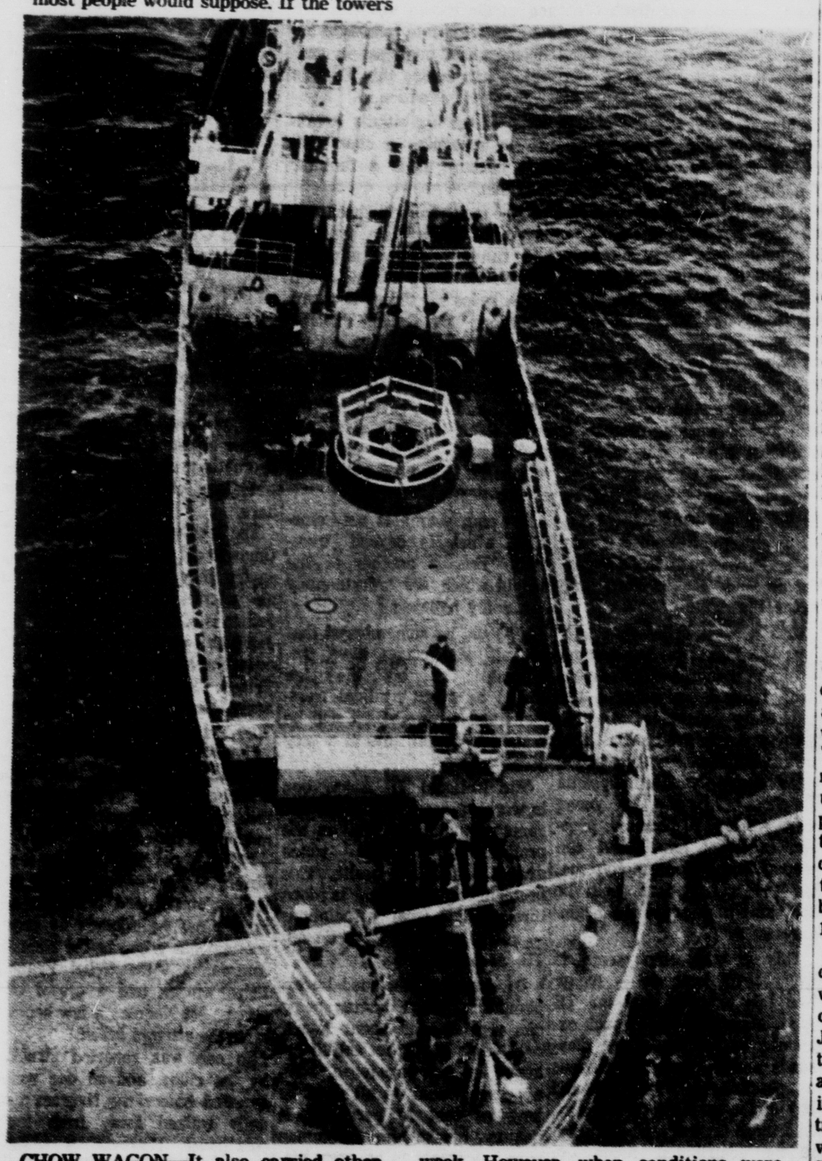
Texas Tower Men Practiced Their Rescue Missions on Basketballs



LIFE ON BOARD—This is Sgt. Jensen as he worked aboard Texas Tower 2. He said that life on board wasn't as bad as most people would suppose. If the towers were still in use, Jensen said he'd rather spend another tour on them than go to a remote overseas station.



CHOW WAGON—It also carried other necessary supplies to the men who were stationed on the Texas Towers. Most supplies were brought to the towers on U.S. Navy ships such as this one once a week. However, when conditions were bad, or in event of emergency, helicopters made the run to the towers cutting as much as six hours off delivery time.

TWO YEARS ON TOWER TWO—This is Texas Tower 2 where Sgt. Jensen spent two years as a non-commissioned officer in charge of supply. When there wasn't too much wind, the men who manned the tower played basketball on the weather deck, but most of their recreation was taken inside the station. The biggest problem with basketball was losing the ball over the side, but Sgt. Jensen said, it gave them an opportunity to practice rescue missions.

When a Texas Tower is mentioned, most people think of a Texas oil rig. But there are quite a few men in the Air Force who think of the large radar towers that used to be located off the Atlantic Coast.

M. Sgt. Carl Jensen, Staff Supply NCO for the 9th Aerospace Defense Division here, remembers very well his days on Texas Tower 2.

Tower 2 was located off the Massachusetts coast, 120 miles east of Cape Cod. He boarded the huge Tower for duty March 1, 1961, as NCOIC of Supply and left it for good on June 26, 1963.

"When I arrived at the Tower," says Sgt. Jensen, "we had a total of four officers and 103 enlisted men. This was considered a remote tour and we had to serve 365 actual days on the Tower before our tour was finished."

They stayed on the Tower for thirty to forty-five days at a time and then went ashore for ten to fifteen days. This gave them time to take care of dental appointments, any legal matters, and all of the other things that had to be done on shore. When on land they were assigned to the 4604th Support Squadron, Otis Air Force Base, Massachusetts.

The primary mission of Tower 2 was the surveillance of the coastal areas and beyond in conjunction with the Boston and New York Air Defense Sectors. On board were three AC&W-type radars; an AN-FPS-64 search radar and two AN-FPS-6 height finders that operated 24 hours a day.

"We were a self-sustaining unit," says Jensen. "We made potable drinking water with a purification plant located right on the Tower. We also had our own heating plant, power plant and mess hall. The men stationed on the Tower included everybody from administrative types to plumbers and steam fitters. We even had two medics stationed on board and some great cooks. For my money, we had the best food in the Air Force."

The Tower was supplied each week by a Navy ship which brought everything except emergency supplies. These were flown out by helicopter from Otis.

The arrival of the ship required a boat detail made up of a deck officer, supply sergeant, and eight to thirteen airmen who would tie the ship to the Tower and insure that the connex boxes (large iron boxes used to ship the supplies; were properly unloaded. They were then reloaded with excess or damaged supplies for the return trip. Each of the connex boxes was capable of holding 12,000 pounds of supplies.

"This operation was very dangerous during the high winds and seas which are so common off Cape Cod," Sgt. Jensen said. "But during all the time I was there, we didn't lose a single man hour because of injury. This was due to the extreme caution and close supervision exercised by the deck officers and the supply sergeants.

"When winds of more than 35 knots were forecast, the Tower was evacuated by ship or helicopter. Whenever possible, the choppers were used for evacuation. It took them only two hours to make a round trip from Otis to the Tower and back. But it took a ship eight to sixteen hours to reach Tower 2 from shore.

"When an unpredictable storm was in the area, the chopper pilots sat near their birds on alert status. Even at that, there were times when an evacuation was impossible and we had to sit a storm out. I remember sitting through one storm and watching the wind guage pass 75 knots. The waves reached 45 feet during that one. And the bottom of the Tower was only 54 feet above the normal water line."

Near the end of Sergeant Jensen's tour, the Air Force installed a seven man survival capsule. This permitted seven people to remain aboard and insure minimum operation during storms. By staying on Tower 2, the men insured that no unauthorized personnel could get aboard.

"There were numerous foreign fishing vessels constantly in the area. But to my knowledge, no one ever got aboard a tower during these storms. By using the survival capsules, we were able to insure that no one even tried.

"Speaking of foreign vessels, I recall one incident which happened late at night when a Russian fishing trawler passed fairly close to us. One of the airmen, hoping for some excitement, ran to the radar deck and turned a big searchlight on the fishing boat. The Russians retaliated with their searchlight. The duel continued until an NCO saw what was going on and ordered the airman to turn off the light. The airman got more than he bargained for when the commander found out about it later that night.

"On another occasion, during an afternoon "man overboard" drill, one of the two 25 foot rescue boats was put over the side to retrieve a dummy. While this was going on, we saw a Russian trawler approach the Tower. Our Commander was aboard the rescue boat and directed it toward the oncoming vessel. Instead of turning away, the Russians cut their engines. Our boat came along side and one of the airmen tossed a package of American cigarettes onto the deck of the trawler. Suddenly a shower of Russian cigarettes rained down on the Americans. More GI cigarettes were tossed up and soon one of the Russians said in broken English, "We're glad to see you." We returned the greeting and, as their boat drifted away, we noticed that there were two women aboard the ship. For days after, the Commander was refusing our requests for trade with the Russians on a larger scale."

Recreation aboard the Tower consisted mostly of pool and ping-pong. The men had two pool tables and a ping-pong table located in the day room on the main deck. There was no swimming allowed but, according to Jensen, there was some great fishing. Haddock, cod, and pollock were plentiful and most catches ran from 15 to 20 pounds each.

"We played basketball on the weather deck," Jensen recalls, "when the weather and wind was calm enough. When we did play it was usually in winds ranging from 10 to 15 knots. When a ball went over the side we called a "man overboard" drill to retrieve it. This way we became proficient in our training and saved a lot of basketballs.

"We had three television sets. Our viewing depended on the climatic conditions. Some nights we couldn't get anything and some nights we'd pick up stations that weren't even on the dial. I can recall picking up Pittsburgh and that's nearly three hundred miles from Cape Cod.

"There was a photo lab that all the camera bugs used. All the equipment was furnished including the paper. We also had a small library, a ceramic shop with molds and kiln, a woodwork shop, and a weight room.

"We had movies about three times a week. Sometimes they were pretty old. . .I especially enjoyed Mary Pickford."

Details on the Tower, including KP were pulled by everyone through technical sergeant. Each section pulled KP as a unit one week out of every month.

"Our morale was always high," says Jensen, "and we took personal pride in keeping the Tower spotless. I feel that we had the cleanest tower of the three and this is not to say that the others were dirty. Visitors constantly commented on the tower's outstanding appearance."

When asked about his personal feelings on Texas Tower duty, Jensen said "It wasn't the best duty in the world, but it wasn't as bad as most people would suppose. If the towers were still there and I had the choice between them and a remote station overseas, I'd pick the Tower every time."

Chiang Renews Appeal To Regain Mainland

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Warning that the Chinese Communists must be wiped out before they are able to deliver nuclear bombs, President Chiang Kai-shek renewed an appeal today for support to regain mainland China.

"We hope the free world will give us positive support so that we can quickly begin our counter-offensive before the Reds have time to complete their development of nuclear weapons," he said in a message to a rally attended by 15,000 persons.

The youths demanded revision of the agreement covering U.S. military bases here and an end to what they called American economic privileges.

The demonstration lasted for about two hours.

Lung Diseases Increase Steadily In Recent Years

Respiratory diesease has increased 10 times in recent years, and is now the second most common reason for premature collection of retirement disability.

Dr. James W. Raleigh, medical director of the American Thoracic Society of the National Tuberculosis Association, visited in Colorado Springs this month during an early 1965 survey of TB Association work.

Dr. Raleigh said the respiratory threat is growing, but the regular increases are steady rather than in spurts, "and the average citizen is not aware of the extent to which he is threatened." Physicians see it . . . private, city and V.A. hospitals see it . . . and too many people are dying from it, the doctor explained.

It is not only tuberculosis which concerns the TB Association workers, as so many believe. Diseases such as asthma, bronchitis, pneumonia and the chronic cough and cold are of vital concern, because these are so often the forerunners of health problems which develop into actual causes of death.

The lungs, through which the sweet air of spring must pass before it can be used by the millions of individual cells in the human body, are one of the vital organs which a human being just can't do without. There is a disease called emphysema which really does a job of ruining the lungs beyond repair — it actually eats away the individual lung cells and leaves behind a transparent shell, much like a sponge made of clear plastic.

Emphysema is often the result of other less dramatic respiratory diseases. And because it is such a slow working disease, it is almost always diagnosed in people beyond 40 years of age.

But is emphysema strictly a disease of the 40-and-older? No, this is only the age when it may get serious enough to be recognizable — it has its start long before that.

Such a false belief that only older persons get emphysema results in many cases of emphysema today . . . because the respiratory diseases in the younger people are the first step toward emphysema. Only action today can prevent emphysema tomorrow. Actually, a young man with a respiratory problem does not have what can properly be called emphysema, but the way it works out he has what may equal the beginning of it.

This is why emphysema is everybody's concern — today. And this explains why the TB Association is going to such extremes to test as many thousands and thousands of citizens as possible to detect TB and any of the respiratory diseases. And these tests are where much of the contributed funds go, while another portion of them are invested in research.

Dr. Raleigh said the case where one of the common respiratory diseases turns out to be emphysema is not an occasional problem, but is frequently reported. He said both industry and health organizations are becoming more aware, and public health agencies are not expanding into treatment for chronic chest problems in general, where before only TB was given much attention.

One of the big pitfalls is failure to recognize a chest disease because it is a familiar condition.

"The man may cough once a day, then twice, then eight or nine times, and over a period of time develop a chronic cough which keeps his throat in a raw condition.," Dr. Raleigh explained. "Yet this man does not realize the seriousness of his condition because he is used to the cough, and he is among the most likely to fall victim to emphysema, forced disability retirement, and possibly an earlier death.

But emphysema is not something which is beyond treatment. This is another of the beliefs which are unfortuantely commonly believed.

It should be remembered that not all who cough have emphsema . . . but the cough should be given medical treatment and advice which will be certain to benefit him to a very great extent.

The National TB Association is working hard to educate the general public as well as the professional segment which guards the public health. This problem of education is done through the local associations — such as the El Paso County TB Association.

Dr. Raleigh concluded by explaining that the human being can survive with about 25 per cent of his lungs, but only if the lungs are not threatened. Such a person would do all right as long as that 25 per cent is healthy, but to him a common cold is a threat to his very life.

The doctor recalled the air pollution conditions which affected London in 1952, and Donora, Pa., in 1963. The air became still for several days, became polluted from natural causes and caused severe illness and death — it was those with weak lungs who were stricken.

Dr. Raleigh calls for public support of the local TB Association, and complete cooperation to discover lung disorders at the very earliest possible moment.

Phil Long Ford Body Shop Uses Latest Equipment

Since Phil Long Ford moved into their new building last November business in the paint and body shop has almost doubled, according to Jim Besset, paint and body shop manager. "Phil Long Ford's slogan of "Total Service" is no idle boast," Besset said recently, glancing around the spacious, gleaming - white body shop. "Here in the body shop we have the finest equipment to work with. Take this Bear Frame Alignment machine, for instance . . . It's their latest and best machine; built to handle all conventional frames and unitized bodies. We also have two Bear Wheel Alignment units. We can handle any part of any car. And by the way ,all of our technicians who operate this equipment were trained at the Bear Frame and Alignment Training Center in Rockford, Illinois."

"Our paint shop has two big metal paint booths and uses the latest methods in car finishing. Between the paint and the body shop we have ten experienced men for good fast service."

We hope the people who come in to look at the building get back here to the body shop," said Besset, " and don't forget to tell them we give free estimates . . . and they'll never have trouble finding a place to park. We've got plenty of room."

Besset, who opened his own body shop at 19, was appointed body shop manager of Phil Long Ford about four months ago. He is a native of Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and now resides with his wife Jean at 243 Crestone Street, Colorado Springs. adv.

Colorado College Gets $5,000 De Pont Grant

Colorado College has received a grant of $5,000 from the Du Pont Co., to support advancement in teaching.

Of this, $2,500 is designated for chemistry and $2,500 for other subjects important to the education of scientists and engineers.

Emphasizing the support in teaching in scientific and related fields, the Du Pont Co., has awarded such grants to 78 institutions, mostly liberal arts colleges, to help them maintain and improve the excellence of their teaching.

Half of each grant is for chemistry teaching and the other half for other liberal arts subjects which contribute to the education of scientists and engineers.

The funds are to be used by the institutions in ways they feel will most effectively advance their instruction in these subjects.

"We hope that this program will help enhance the status of teaching which has become a primary concern of educators today," said Dr. Paul L. Salzberg, chairman of Du Pont's Committee on Educational Aid and director of the company's Central Research Department.

Voting Changes To Be Discussed By City Council

Possible changes in city voting procedure will be on the agenda for Tuesday's City Council meeting.

In April 1963 voters approved an amendment to the City Charter to allow the Council to set voting procedure for the city elections, including the use of County voter registration lists.

It has previously been proposed that all registration be shifted to the County Building to avoid voters' confusion.

Presently, registration for city elections is in the city clerk's office and registration for other elections is in the County Building.

City Clerk Robert Parker said this morning that 10,374 persons were registered to vote in the April city election.

About 8,600 persons were registered for the city election two years ago.

Voter registration was about 8,700 for city elections last fall, Parker said.

Then the City Council passed a two per cent sales tax and carriers of initiative petitions urged persons to register so they could sign petitions.

That is why registrations in the city clerk's office jumped from 8,700 to 10,374.

The City Council has also approved using voting machines, for the first time, in April's election.

If voting procedure is changed to the County Building, persons voting in the November elections would remain registered voters for city elections.

Selma Negro March Praised By Dr. King

By JIM KNIGHT

SELMA, Ala. (AP) — An abortive attempt by about 100 Negro schoolteachers to enter the Dallas County Courthouse was praised by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. as the most dramatic protest thus far in the week-long civil rights struggle here.

The teachers attempted three times to get into the courthouse, saying they wanted to register as voters. Each time Sheriff James G. Clark and some of his deputies pushed them back down the steps with night sticks Friday. The voter registration board was not in session at the time.

However, King, who returned to Selma Friday to lead the drive, called the demonstration the most significant since the movement began.

"This is the first time in the history of the movement that so well-organized and dramatic a protest has been made by any professional group in the Negro community," the Nobel Peace Prize winner told a crowd of about 1,000 Negroes a few hours after the attempt failed.

No one was reported struck by the clubs, and no one was arrested before the Negroes finally walked away from the courthouse. However, a white civil-rights worker near the courthouse was attacked by another whiteman swinging his fist, and the latter was arrested by city police.

Chiang Renews Appeal To Regain Mainland

TAIPEI, Formosa (AP) — Warning that the Chinese Communists must be wiped out before they are able to deliver nuclear bombs, President Chiang Kai-shek renewed an appeal today for support to regain mainland China.

"We hope the free world will give us positive support so that we can quickly begin our counter-offensive before the Reds have time to complete their development of nuclear weapons," he said in a message to a rally attended by 15,000 persons.

The youths demanded revision of the agreement covering U.S. military bases here and an end to what they called American economic privileges.

The demonstration lasted for about two hours.

Lung Diseases Increase Steadily In Recent Years

Respiratory diesease has increased 10 times in recent years, and is now the second most common reason for premature collection of retirement disability.

Dr. James W. Raleigh, medical director of the American Thoracic Society of the National Tuberculosis Association, visited in Colorado Springs this month during an early 1965 survey of TB Association work.

Dr. Raleigh said the respiratory threat is growing, but the regular increases are steady rather than in spurts, "and the average citizen is not aware of the extent to which he is threatened." Physicians see it . . . private, city and V.A. hospitals see it . . . and too many people are dying from it, the doctor explained.

It is not only tuberculosis which concerns the TB Association workers, as so many believe. Diseases such as asthma, bronchitis, pneumonia and the chronic cough and cold are of vital concern, because these are so often the forerunners of health problems which develop into actual causes of death.

The lungs, through which the sweet air of spring must pass before it can be used by the millions of individual cells in the human body, are one of the vital organs which a human being just can't do without. There is a disease called emphysema which really does a job of ruining the lungs beyond repair — it actually eats away the individual lung cells and leaves behind a transparent shell, much like a sponge made of clear plastic.

Emphysema is often the result of other less dramatic respiratory diseases. And because it is such a slow working disease, it is almost always diagnosed in people beyond 40 years of age.

But is emphysema strictly a disease of the 40-and-older? No, this is only the age when it may get serious enough to be recognizable — it has its start long before that.

Such a false belief that only older persons get emphysema results in many cases of emphysema today . . . because the respiratory diseases in the younger people are the first step toward emphysema. Only action today can prevent emphysema tomorrow. Actually, a young man with a respiratory problem does not have what can properly be called emphysema, but the way it works out he has what may equal the beginning of it.

This is why emphysema is everybody's concern — today. And this explains why the TB Association is going to such extremes to test as many thousands and thousands of citizens as possible to detect TB and any of the respiratory diseases. And these tests are where much of the contributed funds go, while another portion of them are invested in research.

Dr. Raleigh said the case where one of the common respiratory diseases turns out to be emphysema is not an occasional problem, but is frequently reported. He said both industry and health organizations are becoming more aware, and public health agencies are not expanding into treatment for chronic chest problems in general, where before only TB was given much attention.

One of the big pitfalls is failure to recognize a chest disease because it is a familiar condition.

"The man may cough once a day, then twice, then eight or nine times, and over a period of time develop a chronic cough which keeps his throat in a raw condition," Dr. Raleigh explained. "Yet this man does not realize the seriousness of his condition because he is used to the cough, and he is among the most likely to fall victim to emphysema, forced disability retirement, and possibly an earlier death.

But emphysema is not something which is beyond treatment. This is another of the beliefs which are unfortuantely commonly believed.

It should be remembered that not all who cough have emphsema . . . but the cough should be given medical treatment and advice which will be certain to benefit him to a very great extent.

The National TB Association is working hard to educate the general public as well as the professional segment which guards the public health. This problem of education is done through the local associations — such as the El Paso County TB Association.

Dr. Raleigh concluded by explaining that the human being can survive with about 25 per cent of his lungs, but only if the lungs are not threatened. Such a person would do all right as long as that 25 per cent is healthy, but to him a common cold is a threat to his very life.

Voting Changes To Be Discussed By City Council

Possible changes in city voting procedure will be on the agenda for Tuesday's City Council meeting.

In April 1963 voters approved an amendment to the City Charter to allow the Council to set voting procedure for the city elections, including the use of County voter registration lists.

It has previously been proposed that all registration be shifted to the County Building to avoid voters' confusion.

Presently, registration for city elections is in the city clerk's office and registration for other elections is in the County Building.

City Clerk Robert Parker said this morning that 10,374 persons were registered to vote in the April city election.

About 8,600 persons were registered for the city election two years ago.

Voter registration was about 8,700 for city elections last fall, Parker said.

Then the City Council passed a two per cent sales tax and carriers of initiative petitions urged persons to register so they could sign petitions.

That is why registrations in the city clerk's office jumped from 8,700 to 10,374.

The City Council has also approved using voting machines, for the first time, in April's election.

If voting procedure is changed to the County Building, persons voting in the November elections would remain registered voters for city elections.

Ha! Say Local Clerics' Wives to British Cousin's 'Sour Grapes'

By MARGUERITE MITCHELL
Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

Being married to a clergyman is "a lousy job," said a 28-year old wife of an Anglican parish priest last week in a news story from London.

Five local clerics' mates didn't hesitate when asked if they agreed with Mrs. Brenda Wolfe, 28, whose resentment was published in an article in the church magazine Prism.

With ardor and fervor, the five wives took an adverse view of Mrs. Wolfe's fixed conviction that she is "happy basically, because I love my husband. But I am afraid that it is often in spite of the church."

She's not, says Mrs. James W. Calhoun. "She's projecting her unhappiness on the church; there's something else there."

Married for seven years, Mrs. Wolfe says: "But here I am, surrounded by four children, tied to the house, expected to turn up at every cat hanging and feeling like a widow as my husband is always on duty."

"Your husband isn't always yours," concedes Mrs. Calhoun, wife of the minister of St. Paul's Methodist Church, "but when you see him helping people, this brings you happiness."

A clergyman's wife doesn't have a monopoly, says Mrs. Wayne Benson whose husband is pastor of Faith United Presbyterian Church.

"I'm sure there have been many times when a doctor's wife has felt, if he could only stay home — especially when you've planned an outing — if that phone just wouldn't ring."

Surrounded by four children? "I worry a lot about the time I spend away from my children," says Mrs. Calhoun, mother of three youngsters, ages four to seven.

These are the important years, when a mother should be with her children, Mrs. Calhoun says. She has five choirs and is often called upon to do programs. "I love it," she frankly admits, but is cutting out some of her activities to be with the children.

"A clergy wife is expected to run the conventional things and turn up at church and every other connected social affair whatever her domestic circumstances may be," says Mrs. Wolfe.

"I think that it's very true a minister's wife is expected to be at various functions, but people are understanding when you cannot be," says Mrs. Richard K. Baker, wife of the minister of Gateway United Presbyterian Church.

"You have to learn to say no," says Mrs. Benson, "and this is one of the hardest things to do. But if you learn to say no graciously, most people accept it and understand."

Mrs. Edward Busch expressed it this way: "My first obligation and duty and joy is to my home. I wasn't called to be a minister's wife; my husband was called to be the pastor and I just came along. I'm part of him."

Wife of the pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church, Mrs. Busch says further: "Because I'm not called, I feel that I have a right to my own privacy and don't need to be completely involved in everything that is going on in the church."

Mrs. David Bailey's sentiments were: "I went into the ministry, knowing my life would be different, and I adjusted to it. There have been times when I've felt perhaps that demands were made that shouldn't have been, but it's been seldom."

"I made up my mind I would do my best to adjust," she continued, "I married David (minister of Southgate Church of the Nazarene) for better or for worse and I wanted to make it better."

"To be a minister's helper, or marital helper, is not asking any more of a woman than any husband needs," says Mrs. Baker, "because any husband needs help and understanding whatever field he is in."

But she adds: "I really do think your life is not your own as compared to other women who are married outside this field."

"I also resent the fact that I have to be myself, self-consciously. If I twist at the parish dance, this causes comment. I now have become so introspective that I ask myself if I twist in order to cause comment. I resent the basic reason behind it — that somehow we are different," says Mrs. Wolfe.

One of the ministers' wives creamed this off speedily. "We don't twist at our church," she said flatly.

"Here in a modern suburb, for the first time, I've felt that I can be myself and am enjoying the life fr the first time," says Mrs. Baker candidly. Most of her husband's ministry has been spent in smaller Colorado communities, she explained.

Mrs. Calhoun said she felt like Mrs. Wolfe when her husband had a small church in rural Georgia. "It's different out here though," she says, "I felt like I had to be molded into something that I wasn't in the South, but here I can be myself."

Mrs. Benson, who has been married 10 years, readily admitted that during the first few years she was self-conscious about how she acted, even about how she felt regarding many things.

"But I've come to the conclusion that for me, I have to be myself, and if people don't like me as I am, I'm sorry; I cannot live as something other than that."

Mrs. Busch echoed this. "Perhaps I'm too outspoken," she says, "People know I'm not the pastor's wife, that I'm ME — if I can't be myself, that's too bad because I have to be myself."

"It would make one miserable to have to live a double standard," she added.

"No," says Mrs. Bailey, "I've always lived just like I felt."

Is their privacy invaded?

"Not any more than I let it," says Mrs. Benson, "but this is my own fault as I allow it."

"If anything, I have the feeling that it's difficult to make friends," Mrs. Busch says. "People don't drop in, for just some casual chatting; they're always afraid I'm busy enough."

"But," she says, "there's never a time when I can't take five minutes for a cup of coffee."

"If members of my husband's congregation want to come to see us," Mrs. Bailey says, "they always call first."

"Of course I like people," she adds, "and it doesn't matter to me if they want to drop in unexpectedly."

"Clergymen ought to be celibate because no decent, right-minded man ought to have the effrontery to ask any woman to take on a lousy job. It is thoroughly un-Christian," says Mrs. Wolfe.

"She's crazy," one of the wives said succinctly.

"I don't like the word lousy," Mrs. Baker said, "Let's say it's a very demanding job, but a rewarding one."

"It's a wonderful life," says Mrs. Calhoun, adding that "some people aren't cut out for the job, and it's a shame, especially when you love someone.

"She hasn't come to terms with herself," said Mrs. Benson.

The Baileys have three, two sons, 20 and 18, and a daughter, 16. All are ardent workers in the church, "for which we are grateful," their mother says.

"If you can maintain your identity and your home as a separate unit," Mrs. Busch says, "you're just in a tremendous position."

As a footnote, Mrs. Busch added that her father was a minister. "I said for years I would never marry a minister," she laughs, "but I did, and Ive never been unhappy about the decision."

Neither have the four other clerics' mates.

All were sympathetic toward Mrs. Wolfe, however. And as one wife pointed out: "Perhaps it's different in England — after all, her husband is a clergyman in the State religion."

Capt. Johnson Assigned To Philippines Command

Navy Captain James M. Johnson, former Operations and Chief Satff Officer for Commander Naval Forces, Continental Air Defenst Command, has been ordered to the Republic of Philippines to command the U. S. Naval Station, Sangley Point.

CAPT. JAMES M. JOHNSON

Captain Johnson's new command, located just north of Manila, has long been one of the most vital commands in tht Far East. The Naval Station is also the headquarters for the Commander Naval Forces, Philippines, and the direct representative, Commander-in-Chief Pacific, for the Southeast Asian area.

Captain Johnson has been with the Naval Forces staff since September 1962. He also held the additional assignment as the Staff's Public Information Officer.

Aside from his military duties, while in Colorado Springs he assisted in many civic and community affairs. He was instrumental in the forming of the Tuesday Afternoon Rest and Aspiration Society - a unique organization composed of civilian community leaders and military officers. He also worked with the Colorado Springs "Ramrods" in organizing the first Pagent Parade of the Rockies, formerly the Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo Rodeo Parade.

Captain Johnson, a naval aviator, has had a 23-year varied career. He participated as a combat flyer and carrier ship's company offictr in two major conflicts, has served on several staffs, attended the Navy's highest rated schools, and assisted in the forming of the nation's largest missile and satellite launch complex — the Pacific Missile Range.

In World War II, Captain Johnson participated in the North African invasion, as well as European missions and Fleet actions, later moving to the Pacific Theater as one of the first Night Attack pilots. During the Korean conflict, he was the Operations Officer aboard the attack carrier, U. S. S. Bon Homme Richard. In January 1953 he attended the Navy's Post Graduate School, followed by the General Line School. He next served the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Florida.

Following this assignment he was ordered to the Atlantic Fleet to serve as Executive Officer of a jet reconnaissance squadron. In 1958 he reported to tht Navy's newly commissioned Pacific Missile Range. As the Staff Operations Coordinator for the Commander Pacific Missile Range he was part of the nucleus staff who formed the Range and established its vast Pacific - wide missile and satellite operational capability.

Before reporting to this component Command of NORAD he was Executive Officer of the attack aircraft carrier U. S. S. Bon Homme Richard.

Lebanon Joins Water Program

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — After a seven-hour session, the Lebanese Parliament today approved participation in Arab plans to divert the Jordan River's headwaters to defeat an Israeli irrigation scheme.

Under the plan, a pumping station is to be built on the Wazzani River, two miles inside Lebanese territory from the Israeli border. The Wazzani is a tributary of the Jordan.

Parliament authorized the government to permit the entry of Arab soldiers whenever needed to help defend the country against any Israeli attack. Premier Hussein Oweini had asked the deputies for such authorization.

Israel plans to pump water to the Negev Dessert from the Sea of Galilee, into which the Jordan flows. Arab plans to divert the water source were outlined at a conference in Cairo Jan. 9-12.

Shipments to Communist China were prohibited by an act of Congress Dec. 8, 1950.

Public Offered Safety Course

Red Cross water safety and first aid training courses, to be conducted at the Air Force Academy, are open to all residents of the Colorado Springs area.

Registrations may be made by calling the Academy Red Cross office, 472-1541.

Personnel registering for the first aid instructor training must hold a standard and advanced first aid current card and be at least 18 years of age.

Anyone holding an instructor's card which has expired within the past two years may become eligible for the training by reviewing and successfully completing the advanced first aid classes.

Standard and advanced classes are now being held Friday at 3:30 and 7:30 p.m. in the music room, Library.

The first aid instructor classes will be conducted by Mr. Gilbert Gribble, National Red Cross safety representative Feb. 15 through 19.

The water safety instructor training course will be held evenings Feb. 8 through 12 at the Community Center pool by Mr. Gribble.

Individuals who are at least 18 and have successfully completed a senior life saving course may register. Water safety instructors whose certificates have expired are also eligible.

A phase one training course will be given by Mrs. Ruth Hawkins, Academy Red Cross volunteer water safety instructor, the first week in February. This course must be completed prior to taking phase two and final certification course.

Ha! Say Local Clerics' Wives to British Cousin's 'Sour Grapes'

By MARGUERITE MITCHELL, Gazette Telegraph Staff Writer

Being married to a clergyman is "a lousy job," said a 28-year old wife of an Anglican parish priest last week in a news story from London.

Five local clerics' mates didn't hesitate when asked if they agreed with Mrs. Brenda Wolfe, 28, whose resentment was published in an article in the church magazine Prism.

With ardor and fervor, the five wives took an adverse view of Mrs. Wolfe's fixed conviction that she is "happy basically, because I love my husband. But I am afraid that it is often in spite of the church."

She's not, says Mrs. James W. Calhoun. "She's projecting her unhappiness on the church; there's something else there."

Married for seven years, Mrs. Wolfe says: "But here I am, surrounded by four children, tied to the house, expected to turn up at every cat hanging and feeling like a widow as my husband is always on duty."

"Your husband isn't always yours," concedes Mrs. Calhoun, wife of the minister of St. Paul's Methodist Church, "but when you see him helping people, this brings you happiness."

A clergyman's wife doesn't have a monopoly, says Mrs. Wayne Benson whose husband is pastor of Faith United Presbyterian Church.

"I'm sure there have been many times when a doctor's wife has felt, if he could only stay home — especially when you've planned an outing — if that phone just wouldn't ring."

Surrounded by four children? "I worry a lot about the time I spend away from my children," says Mrs. Calhoun, mother of three youngsters, ages four to seven.

These are the important years, when a mother should be with her children, Mrs. Calhoun says. She has five choirs and is often called upon to do programs. "I love it," she frankly admits, but is cutting out some of her activities to be with the children.

"A clergy wife is expected to run the conventional things and turn up at church and every other connected social affair whatever her domestic circumstances may be," says Mrs. Wolfe.

"I think that it's very true a minister's wife is expected to be at various functions, but people are understanding when you cannot be," says Mrs. Richard K. Baker, wife of the minister of Gateway United Presbyterian Church.

"You have to learn to say no," says Mrs. Benson, "and this is one of the hardest things to do. But if you learn to say no graciously, most people accept it and understand."

Mrs. Edward Busch expressed it this way: "My first obligation and duty and joy is to my home. I wasn't called to be a minister's wife; my husband was called to be the pastor and I just came along. I'm part of him."

Wife of the pastor of Redeemer Lutheran Church, Mrs. Busch says further: "Because I'm not called, I feel that I have a right to my own privacy and don't need to be completely involved in everything that is going on in the church."

Mrs. David Bailey's sentiments were: "I went into the ministry, knowing my life would be different, and I adjusted to it. There have been times when I've felt perhaps that demands were made that shouldn't have been, but it's been seldom."

"I made up my mind I would do my best to adjust," she continued, "I married David (minister of Southgate Church of the Nazarene) for better or for worse and I wanted to make it better."

"To be a minister's helper, or marital helper, is not asking any more of a woman than any husband needs," says Mrs. Baker, "because any husband needs help and understanding whatever field he is in."

But she adds: "I really do think your life is not your own as compared to other women who are married outside this field."

"I also resent the fact that I have to be myself, self-consciously. If I twist at the parish dance, this causes comment. I now have become so introspective that I ask myself if I twist in order to cause comment. I resent the basic reason behind it — that somehow we are different," says Mrs. Wolfe.

One of the ministers' wives creamed this off speedily. "We don't twist at our church," she said flatly.

"Here in a modern suburb, for the first time, I've felt that I can be myself and am enjoying the life fr the first time," says Mrs. Baker candidly. Most of her husband's ministry has been spent in smaller Colorado communities, she explained.

Mrs. Calhoun said she felt like Mrs. Wolfe when her husband had a small church in rural Georgia. "It's different out here though," she says, "I felt like I had to be molded into something that I wasn't in the South, but here I can be myself."

Mrs. Benson, who has been married 10 years, readily admitted that during the first few years she was self-conscious about how she acted, even about how she felt regarding many things.

"But I've come to the conclusion that for me, I have to be myself, and if people don't like me as I am, I'm sorry; I cannot live as something other than that."

Mrs. Busch echoed this. "Perhaps I'm too outspoken," she says, "People know I'm not the pastor's wife, that I'm ME — if I can't be myself, that's too bad because I have to be myself."

"It would make one miserable to have to live a double standard," she added.

"No," says Mrs. Bailey, "I've always lived just like I felt."

Is their privacy invaded?

"Not any more than I let it," says Mrs. Benson, "but this is my own fault as I allow it."

"If anything, I have the feeling that it's difficult to make friends," Mrs. Busch says. "People don't drop in, for just some casual chatting; they're always afraid I'm busy enough."

"But," she says, "there's never a time when I can't take five minutes for a cup of coffee."

"If members of my husband's congregation want to come to see us," Mrs. Bailey says, "they always call first."

"Of course I like people," she adds, "and it doesn't matter to me if they want to drop in unexpectedly."

"Clergymen ought to be celibate because no decent, right-minded man ought to have the effrontery to ask any woman to take on a lousy job. It is thoroughly un-Christian," says Mrs. Wolfe.

"She's crazy," one of the wives said succinctly.

"I don't like the word lousy," Mrs. Baker said, "Let's say it's a very demanding job, but a rewarding one."

"It's a wonderful life," says Mrs. Calhoun, adding that "some people aren't cut out for the job, and it's a shame, especially when you love someone.

"She hasn't come to terms with herself," said Mrs. Benson.

The Baileys have three, two sons, 20 and 18, and a daughter, 16. All are ardent workers in the church, "for which we are grateful," their mother says.

"If you can maintain your identity and your home as a separate unit," Mrs. Busch says, "you're just in a tremendous position."

As a footnote, Mrs. Busch added that her father was a minister. "I said for years I would never marry a minister," she laughs, "but I did, and Ive never been unhappy about the decision."

Neither have the four other clerics' mates.

All were sympathetic toward Mrs. Wolfe, however. And as one wife pointed out: "Perhaps it's different in England — after all, her husband is a clergyman in the State religion."

Capt. Johnson Assigned To Philippines Command

Navy Captain James M. Johnson, former Operations and Chief Satff Officer for Commander Naval Forces, Continental Air Defenst Command, has been ordered to the Republic of Philippines to command the U. S. Naval Station, Sangley Point.

Captain Johnson's new command, located just north of Manila, has long been one of the most vital commands in tht Far East. The Naval Station is also the headquarters for the Commander Naval Forces, Philippines, and the direct representative, Commander-in-Chief Pacific, for the Southeast Asian area.

Captain Johnson has been with the Naval Forces staff since September 1962. He also held the additional assignment as the Staff's Public Information Officer.

Aside from his military duties, while in Colorado Springs he assisted in many civic and community affairs. He was instrumental in the forming of the Tuesday Afternoon Rest and Aspiration Society - a unique organization composed of civilian community leaders and military officers. He also worked with the Colorado Springs "Ramrods" in organizing the first Pagent Parade of the Rockies, formerly the Pikes Peak or Bust Rodeo Rodeo Parade.

Captain Johnson, a naval aviator, has had a 23-year varied career. He participated as a combat flyer and carrier ship's company offictr in two major conflicts, has served on several staffs, attended the Navy's highest rated schools, and assisted in the forming of the nation's largest missile and satellite launch complex — the Pacific Missile Range.

In World War II, Captain Johnson participated in the North African invasion, as well as European missions and Fleet actions, later moving to the Pacific Theater as one of the first Night Attack pilots. During the Korean conflict, he was the Operations Officer aboard the attack carrier, U. S. S. Bon Homme Richard. In January 1953 he attended the Navy's Post Graduate School, followed by the General Line School. He next served the Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Florida.

Following this assignment he was ordered to the Atlantic Fleet to serve as Executive Officer of a jet reconnaissance squadron. In 1958 he reported to tht Navy's newly commissioned Pacific Missile Range. As the Staff Operations Coordinator for the Commander Pacific Missile Range he was part of the nucleus staff who formed the Range and established its vast Pacific - wide missile and satellite operational capability.

Before reporting to this component Command of NORAD he was Executive Officer of the attack aircraft carrier U. S. S. Bon Homme Richard.

Lebanon Joins Water Program

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — After a seven-hour session, the Lebanese Parliament today approved participation in Arab plans to divert the Jordan River's headwaters to defeat an Israeli irrigation scheme.

Under the plan, a pumping station is to be built on the Wazzani River, two miles inside Lebanese territory from the Israeli border. The Wazzani is a tributary of the Jordan.

Parliament authorized the government to permit the entry of Arab soldiers whenever needed to help defend the country against any Israeli attack. Premier Hussein Oweini had asked the deputies for such authorization.

Israel plans to pump water to the Negev Dessert from the Sea of Galilee, into which the Jordan flows. Arab plans to divert the water source were outlined at a conference in Cairo Jan. 9-12.

Shipments to Communist China were prohibited by an act of Congress Dec. 8, 1950.

Public Offered Safety Course

Red Cross water safety and first aid training courses, to be conducted at the Air Force Academy, are open to all residents of the Colorado Springs area.

Registrations may be made by calling the Academy Red Cross office, 472-1541.

Personnel registering for the first aid instructor training must hold a standard and advanced first aid current card and be at least 18 years of age.

Anyone holding an instructor's card which has expired within the past two years may become eligible for the training by reviewing and successfully completing the advanced first aid classes.

Standard and advanced classes are now being held Friday at 3:30 and 7:30 p.m. in the music room, Library.

The first aid instructor classes will be conducted by Mr. Gilbert Gribble, National Red Cross safety representative Feb. 15 through 19.

The water safety instructor training course will be held evenings Feb. 8 through 12 at the Community Center pool by Mr. Gribble.

Individuals who are at least 18 and have successfully completed a senior life saving course may register. Water safety instructors whose certificates have expired are also eligible.

A phase one training course will be given by Mrs. Ruth Hawkins, Academy Red Cross volunteer water safety instructor, the first week in February. This course must be completed prior to taking phase two and final certification course.

Emergency Landing Brings Top ADC Award to Captain

A member of the Air Defense Command's 325th Fighter Interceptor Squadron at Truax Field, Wis., Captain William D. Hicks, has been selected to receive the ADC "We Point With Pride" award. Presentation of the award will be made in the near future.

Capt. Hicks of Morgantown, W. Va., was nominated for the award after displaying outstanding flying ability under extreme weather conditions in a multiple emergency during takeoff on a training mission in an F-102A, Delta Dagger.

CAPT. WILLIAM D. HICKS

The first emergency occurred just as Capt. Hicks left the runway. He raised the landing gear after liftoff but the bar light, gear handle light and horn remained on. He immediately shut off the after burner and kept his air speed at 220 knots per hour. Although there were scattered clouds, light drizzle and fog making visibility poor, he managed, at first, to keep the field in sight and fly according to visual flight rules.

After turning out of traffic, Capt. Hicks attempted to lower the landing gear but the nose gear remained in the "up" position. Emergency gear extension was used to no avail and the pneumatic pressure light came on indicating another malfunction. The hydraulic failure light was flashing and the secondary hydraulic pressure was below standard.

Because of worsening weather conditions, a new instrument flight rules clearance became necessary. Meantime, another aircraft had reported a loss in oil pressure and an electrical power failure making it necessary to land immediately. In order to allow this aircraft to land, Capt. Hicks remained clear of the field for approximately 30 minutes, flying on instruments. During this time, the "hydraulic oil hot" light came on.

He flew over the tank drop area and attempted to jettison the external fuel tanks, both containing fuel. Both charges fired but neither tank left the aircraft.

Emergency equipment was positioned on the field in preparation for Capt. Hicks' landing. Carrying 6300 pounds of fuel, he made a long, low final approach lowering his main gear. The nose gear was still stuck in the "up" position. Moving at a speed of 180 knots per hour, he touched down on the first 1,000 feet of runway with his speed brakes on. Upon touchdown, he released the drag chute and stopcocked the throttle. He lowered the nose of the aircraft onto the runway at 100 knots per hour and slid 2500 feet to a safe stop on the nose of the aircraft.

The captain's skill and sound judgment in the multiple emergency situation limited the aircraft damage to very minor sheet metal work.

Capt. Hicks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Hicks, 792 Weaver Street, Morgantown. Graduating from Morgantown High School, he attended the University of West Virginia for a year before entering the Air Force Aviation Program in 1954. He was commissioned an Air Force Second Lieutenant and received his wings on November 18, 1955.

The ADC captain has flown a total of 1895 hours and has the rating of Senior Pilot. Besides the F-102A, he has also flown the L-20, the C-47, the F-86 and the T-33.

Carson Troops Draw Praise From Maroun

"Mission of out-loading accomplished in an oustanding manner" was the overall conclusion of the STRIKE Command team which evaluated the 5th Division's Rapid Reaction Force (DRRF) performance in Joint Exercise Quickfire this week at Ft. Carson, according to Col. Francis B. Mills, Joint Team Chief.

Maj. Gen. Autrey J. Maroun, commanding general, thanked the thousands of personnel responsible through the commanders present at Thursday's critique. He announced Friday and Saturday as a training holiday for participating DRRF units. Other supporting division and post troops were granted a holiday Saturday.

Gen. Maroun asked the commanders to "pass on my congratulations to the individual soldiers for their performance" and added a deeply sincere, "Thank you," for their part in the exercise.

He praised the troops' "Cheerfulness, morale and attitude" stressing that the first thing a good command must have is "Will To Do the Job."

The commanding general said that he had already given an "outstanding" in his opinion and stated "You have done a very difficult exercise" where "there was no way to hide incompetence" and that "you have proved to me what we can do working together."

He thanked Col. Mills and Col. George Hudson, who headed the CONARC — Fifth Army group, for their performance, stating "I believe we are a better division as a result of your coming here."

Col. Hudson complimented post unit support throughout Quickfire, calling it a "fine training medium for supporting installation and division activities. It is always a pleasure to come back to the 5th Division," he concluded.

Lt. Col. John F. Mulhern, covering personnel readiness, added his outstanding and commented on the military courtesy, soldierly appearance, high morale and cheerful attitude. He said individuals were well oriented on their personal affairs.

Lt. Col. R. W. Baker, evaluating operations and training in the exercise, suggested that the 5th Division nickname — Red Devils — be modified by "Ready Red Devils." He added that loading plans and procedures "Will set an example for subsequent Quickfires and that the men deserve a pat on the back."

Special Course Aids Students At Wasson High

An independent reading program to give students a better background for the study of Latin and a greater appreciation of the contributions of Roman culture to Western Civilization is now in progress at Wasson High School.

Mrs. Martha Putnam, Wasson High Latin teacher, developed the program that now enrolls 17 sophomore students, all of them volunteers. Those who satisfactorily fulfill the requirements will receive honors credit in their regular Latin course.

Mrs. Putnam compiled a bibliography of some 30 books, and students are required to read a minimum of five. They will take an examination over their reading, but the most important requirement is a term paper.

Students will select a major theme in Roman literature as the topic of their term papers and trace the theme as it appears at various times in various forms in literature of the West. All work for the program is done outside of the regular class period.

Another activity planned for later in the year is meetings with honors English classes for discussions of Shakespearean themes that go back to Roman literature and forward to contemporary literature and drama in such plays as "My Fair Lady" and "West Side Story."

FAITH IN ELEPHANT

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) —Dan Blake, newly elected student body president of Lincoln Junior High School, today has faith in the elephant as a good political symbol—especially if you ride a live one.

Blake borrowed Bimbo Jr., a baby elephant which has appeared on Mickey Rooney's television program, and rode it on school grounds the day before the election. He won by 38 votes.

Hicks remained clear of the field for approximately 30 minutes, flying on instruments. During this time, the "hydraulic oil hot" light came on.

He flew over the tank drop area and attempted to jettison the external fuel tanks, both containing fuel. Both charges fired but neither tank left the aircraft.

Emergency equipment was positioned on the field in preparation for Capt. Hicks' landing. Carrying 6300 pounds of fuel, he made a long, low final approach lowering his main gear. The nose gear was still stuck in the "up" position. Moving at a speed of 180 knots per hour, he touched down on the first 1,000 feet of runway with his speed brakes on. Upon touchdown, he released the drag chute and stopcocked the throttle. He lowered the nose of the aircraft onto the runway at 100 knots per hour and slid 2500 feet to a safe stop on the nose of the aircraft.

The captain's skill and sound judgment in the multiple emergency situation limited the aircraft damage to very minor sheet metal work.

Capt. Hicks is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry W. Hicks, 792 Weaver Street, Morgantown. Graduating from Morgantown High School, he attended the University of West Virginia for a year before entering the Air Force Aviation Program in 1954. He was commissioned an Air Force Second Lieutenant and received his wings on November 18, 1955.

The ADC captain has flown a total of 1895 hours and has the rating of Senior Pilot. Besides the F-102A, he has also flown the L-20, the C-47, the F-86 and the T-33.

Carson Troops Draw Praise From Maroun

"Mission of out-loading accomplished in an oustanding manner" was the overall conclusion of the STRIKE Command team which evaluated the 5th Division's Rapid Reaction Force (DRRF) performance in Joint Exercise Quickfire this week at Ft. Carson, according to Col. Francis B. Mills, Joint Team Chief.

Maj. Gen. Autrey J. Maroun, commanding general, thanked the thousands of personnel responsible through the commanders present at Thursday's critique. He announced Friday and Saturday as a training holiday for participating DRRF units. Other supporting division and post troops were granted a holiday Saturday.

Gen. Maroun asked the commanders to "pass on my congratulations to the individual soldiers for their performance" and added a deeply sincere, "Thank you," for their part in the exercise.

He praised the troops' "Cheerfulness, morale and attitude" stressing that the first thing a good command must have is "Will To Do the Job."

The commanding general said that he had already given an "outstanding" in his opinion and stated "You have done a very difficult exercise" where "there was no way to hide incompetence" and that "you have proved to me what we can do working together."

He thanked Col. Mills and Col. George Hudson, who headed the CONARC — Fifth Army group, for their performance, stating "I believe we are a better division as a result of your coming here."

Col. Hudson complimented post unit support throughout Quickfire, calling it a "fine training medium for supporting installation and division activities. It is always a pleasure to come back to the 5th Division," he concluded.

Lt. Col. John F. Mulhern, covering personnel readiness, added his outstanding and commented on the military courtesy, soldierly appearance, high morale and cheerful attitude. He said individuals were well oriented on their personal affairs.

Lt. Col. R. W. Baker, evaluating operations and training in the exercise, suggested that the 5th Division nickname — Red Devils — be modified by "Ready Red Devils." He added that loading plans and procedures "Will set an example for subsequent Quickfires and that the men deserve a pat on the back."

Special Course Aids Students At Wasson High

An independent reading program to give students a better background for the study of Latin and a greater appreciation of the contributions of Roman culture to Western Civilization is now in progress at Wasson High School.

Mrs. Martha Putnam, Wasson High Latin teacher, developed the program that now enrolls 17 sophomore students, all of them volunteers. Those who satisfactorily fulfill the requirements will receive honors credit in their regular Latin course.

Mrs. Putnam compiled a bibliography of some 30 books, and students are required to read a minimum of five. They will take an examination over their reading, but the most important requirement is a term paper.

Students will select a major theme in Roman literature as the topic of their term papers and trace the theme as it appears at various times in various forms in literature of the West. All work for the program is done outside of the regular class period.

Another activity planned for later in the year is meetings with honors English classes for discussions of Shakespearean themes that go back to Roman literature and forward to contemporary literature and drama in such plays as "My Fair Lady" and "West Side Story."

FAITH IN ELEPHANT

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (UPI) —Dan Blake, newly elected student body president of Lincoln Junior High School, today has faith in the elephant as a good political symbol—especially if you ride a live one.

Blake borrowed Bimbo Jr., a baby elephant which has appeared on Mickey Rooney's television program, and rode it on school grounds the day before the election. He won by 23 votes.

Children Will Take Dentist Examinations

An estimated 2,000 children from District 8 schools will receive a general dental examination with referral to civilian dentists if corrective work is needed as part of Ft. Carson's third annual observance of Children's Dental Health Week Feb. 7 through 13.

Supporting the theme of "Healthy Teeth, Happier Life," the children of Army personnel willl have their teeth cleaned and immunized by stannous fluoride — both preventive dentistry measures. A tube of stannous fluoride tooth paste will be given to each student.

While each child is being examined, he will be given a few minutes instruction on oral hygiene by the dental officer.

Maj. David Layman, preventive dentistry officer, mentioned the program at a parents' meeting Jan. 19 at Talbott School, Widefield. The subject of his talk was "Gum Diseases" which he said hits 80 per cent of adults sometime in their lives.

All 33 Fort Carson dentists will concentrate on the children during Children's Dental Health Week. Superintendent Dean Fleischauer of District 8 is cooperating on the program which covers 12 schools at Carson and Fountain.

The dental program will be expanded to all schools and children of military in 1965 using films, slides and tapes.

The referral card to be given to each child seen includes suggestions that a specific type of dental specialist be seen, "Your child has several cavities. . .," "There are no apparent defects at this time," etc. It concludes with the statement, "This general inspection should not be considered as taking the place of thorough and complete examination in your dentist's office."

POWERED BY MICROWAVE—Invisible energy is the only power needed to fly this small helicopter. In a demonstration at Raytheon's Spencer Laboratory, Burlington, Mass., microwave power, like that used in radar, was beamed at a blanket of tiny diodes mounted under the helicopter. These semiconductors converted the microwave energy into DC electricity for a motor which turned the rotor blades. Readying the helicopter for its 50-foot flight are William C. Brown, left, manager of Raytheon's Super Power Laboratory and head of the development team, and Robert Bowen, an engineer.

Engineers to Hear Details Of Radio-Powered Chopper

The Colorado Springs Section of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers Tuesday will hear details pertaining to a six-foot helicopter powered only by invisible energy beamed from the ground which climbed 50 feet into the air recently.

The accomplishment at Raytheon Company's Spencer Laboratory was in the nature of a progress report for visiting officials from the U. S. Air Force's Rome Air Development Center (RADC) at Rome, N. Y., which had commissioned the firm to develop the device.

Microwave energy, similar to that used in radar, was beamed from a transmitting antenna on the ground upward to a small helicopter was a special antenhelicopter was a special antenna, a device that looks at first glance like a glass - beaded blanket. It is actually an array of thousands of tiny diodes, each less than a half-inch long. When the diodes were hit by the beam of microwave energy an immediate flow of direct current electricity resulted. This electricity ran the motor which turned the rotor blades of the helicopter.

William C. Brown, manager of the Super Power Operation at Raytheon's Spencer Laboratory in Burlington, Mass. and head of the development team for the helicopter and other projects will discuss the helicopter at the IEEE regular monthly meeting.

Brown received his B. S. in Electrical Engineering from Iowa State College and his Master's Degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His publications include papers on microwave propagation and super microwave power generation and transmission. He has received many honors, among them a Naval Ordnance Development Award and a Certificate of Commendation from the United States Navy.

The IEEE meeting will be held at 6:15 p.m. Tuesday, at The Candlelight Inn.

Advanced Math Courses Added To Center Slate

Three advanced applied mathematics courses are added to the Spring semester schedule of the Colorado Springs Center, it was announced today.

Because of special interest shown in particular mathematical topics, the University of Colorado will supplement its spring math schedule at the Center.

Advanced Calculus, Numerical Analysis and Celestial Mechanics are the proposed offerings. The calculus course is A. Math 431-3 and its prerequisite is a year of calculus. It will be from 4 to 5:20 p.m., Tuesdays and Fridays beginning Feb. 2.

A. Math 565-3 includes interpolation, solution of equations and numerical analysis of differential equations. Prerequisite includes advanced Calculus. The class will meet from 4 to 5:20 p.m., Mondays and Thursdays beginning Feb. 1.

The third course, Celestial Mechanics I is A. Math 573-3, and includes the application of analytical dynamics to satellite motion,, gravitational potentials, 2-body problem and methods of determination of orbits. Students must have had differential equations and analytical mechanics. This class also meets from 4 to 5:20 p.m., Tuesdays and Fridays.

Registration for these courses will be at the Center's regular registration period, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday or Thursday.

Flugstad Attending Guidance Conference

Attending the sixth annual Rollins College Guidance Conference this weekend is Thomas Flugstad, director of college placement at Fountain Valley School, Colorado Springs.

More than 100 secondary school counselors, principals, and headmasters, representing some 18 states, are attending the Rollins Guidance Conference. Feature speaker at Saturday's banquet was John F. White, President of National Educational Television.

The Rollins Guidance Conference is to better acquaint the visiting secondary school officials with Rollins College, to allow the campus visitors to meet with their former students now attending Rollins, and to hear Rollins Professor Dr. Bruce Wavell unveil in its tentative form the new and exciting Rollins Honors Program, a four-year program of honors work culminating with a special Honors Degree.

Razing Wrong Building Costly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Isi Wenesky, who returned from a business trip and discovered that his apartment house was being razed, figures someone owes him $83,000.

His lawyer agrees. They filed suit Friday for that amount in Superior Court, charging that a wrecking company carelessly demolishing the building when it was supposed to have razed an adjacent one.

Wenesky is seeking $50,000 in punitive damages, $30,000 property damages and $3,000 for loss of rent since last December.

Wrecking company officials said later that orders were confused and that the building beside Wenesky's was to have been the target. They razed it later.

Snakes are deaf, though they can receive vibrations from the ground, so the music of snake charmers doesn't affect them.

Pueblo Man Dies Of Asphyxiation

A fellow worker, Charles H. Brooks, 49, was overcome but was able to summon help. Bensik was pronnounced dead at a hospital. Brooks was reported recovering.

Investigators said they had not determined the cause of a sudden surge of fumes that enveloped the workmen.

Teacher Examinations Scheduled Soon at CSC

National Teacher Examinations will be given at Colorado State College Mar. 20.

College seniors preparing to teach and teachers applying for positions in school systems which encourage or require applicants to submit their scores on the examinations along with their other credentials are eligible to take the tests.

At the one-day test session in the CSC counseling and testing center, a candidate may take the Common Examinations, whch include tests in professional education and general education. He also may take one of the 13 teaching area examinations, which are designed to evaluate his understanding of the subject matter and methods applicable to the area he may be assigned to teach, Dr. Theodore Nelson, director of the testing center, said.

The examinations are prepared and administered by Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J. Designation of CSC as a test center will give prospective teachers in this area an opportunity to compare their performance on the examinations with candidates throughout the country who take the tests.

Bulletins of information describing registration procedures and containing registration forms may be obtained from Dr. Nelson, director, CSC counseling and testing center, CSC or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Box 911, Princeton, N. J. Dr. Nelson advises prospective teachers planning to take the tests to obtain the bulletins promptly.

FIRE SCIENCE COURSE

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — A college course designed especially for local firemen — the first of its kind in the state — will be offered by Spokane Community College under the sponsorship of the fire department and the State Vocational Education Department.

The series of evening sessions will include general education and fire science study. Fire department personnel who complete the course will earn an associate science degree in applied arts.

Children Will Take Dentist Examinations

An estimated 2,000 children from District 8 schools will receive a general dental examination with referral to civilian dentists if corrective work is needed as part of Ft. Carson's third annual observance of Children's Dental Health Week Feb. 7 through 13.

Supporting the theme of "Healthy Teeth, Happier Life," the children of Army personnel willl have their teeth cleaned and immunized by stannous fluoride — both preventive dentistry measures. A tube of stannous fluoride tooth paste will be given to each student.

While each child is being examined, he will be given a few minutes instruction on oral hygiene by the dental officer.

Maj. David Layman, preventive dentistry officer, mentioned the program at a parents' meeting Jan. 19 at Talbott School, Widefield. The subject of his talk was "Gum Diseases" which he said hits 80 per cent of adults sometime in their lives.

All 33 Fort Carson dentists will concentrate on the children during Children's Dental Health Week. Superintendent Dean Fleischauer of District 8 is cooperating on the program which covers 12 schools at Carson and Fountain.

The dental program will be expanded to all schools and children of military in 1965 using films, slides and tapes.

The referral card to be given to each child seen includes suggestions that a specific type of dental specialist be seen, "Your child has several cavities. . .," "There are no apparent defects at this time," etc. It concludes with the statement, "This general inspection should not be considered as taking the place of thorough and complete examination in your dentist's office."

POWERED BY MICROWAVE—Invisible energy is the only power needed to fly this small helicopter. In a demonstration at Raytheon's Spencer Laboratory, Burlington, Mass., microwave power, like that used in radar, was beamed at a blanket of tiny diodes mounted under the helicopter. These semiconductors converted the microwave energy into DC electricity for a motor which turned the rotor blades. Readying the helicopter for its 50-foot flight are William C. Brown, left, manager of Raytheon's Super Power Laboratory and head of the development team, and Robert Bowen, an engineer.

The Colorado Springs Section of the Institute of Electrical and Electronic Engineers Tuesday will hear details pertaining to a six-foot helicopter powered only by invisible energy beamed from the ground which climbed 50 feet into the air recently.

The accomplishment at Raytheon Company's Spencer Laboratory was in the nature of a progress report for visiting officials from the U. S. Air Force's Rome Air Development Center (RADC) at Rome, N. Y., which had commissioned the firm to develop the device.

Microwave energy, similar to that used in radar, was beamed from a transmitting antenna on the ground upward to a small helicopter was a special antenhelicopter was a special antenna, a device that looks at first glance like a glass - beaded blanket. It is actually an array of thousands of tiny diodes, each less than a half-inch long. When the diodes were hit by the beam of microwave energy an immediate flow of direct current electricity resulted. This electricity ran the motor which turned the rotor blades of the helicopter.

William C. Brown, manager of the Super Power Operation at Raytheon's Spencer Laboratory in Burlington, Mass. and head of the development team for the helicopter and other projects will discuss the helicopter at the IEEE regular monthly meeting.

Brown received his B. S. in Electrical Engineering from Iowa State College and his Master's Degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology. His publications include papers on microwave propagation and super microwave power generation and transmission. He has received many honors, among them a Naval Ordnance Development Award and a Certificate of Commendation from the United States Navy.

The IEEE meeting will be held at 6:15 p.m. Tuesday, at The Candlelight Inn.

Advanced Math Courses Added To Center Slate

Three advanced applied mathematics courses are added to the Spring semester schedule of the Colorado Springs Center, it was announced today.

Because of special interest shown in particular mathematical topics, the University of Colorado will supplement its spring math schedule at the Center.

Advanced Calculus, Numerical Analysis and Celestial Mechanics are the proposed offerings. The calculus course is A. Math 431-3 and its prerequisite is a year of calculus. It will be from 4 to 5:20 p.m., Tuesdays and Fridays beginning Feb. 2.

A. Math 565-3 includes interpolation, solution of equations and numerical analysis of differential equations. Prerequisite includes advanced Calculus. The class will meet from 4 to 5:20 p.m.., Mondays and Thursdays beginning Feb. 1.

The third course, Celestial Mechanics I is A. Math 573-3, and includes the application of analytical dynamics to satellite motion,, gravitational potentials, 2-body problem and methods of determination of orbits. Students must have had differential equations and analytical mechanics. This class also meets from 4 to 5:20 p.m., Tuesdays and Fridays.

Registration for these courses will be at the Center's regular registration period, 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. Wednesday or Thursday.

Flugstad Attending Guidance Conference

Attending the sixth annual Rollins College Guidance Conference this weekend is Thomas Flugstad, director of college placement at Fountain Valley School, Colorado Springs.

More than 100 secondary school counselors, principals, and headmasters, representing some 18 states, are attending the Rollins Guidance Conference. Feature speaker at Saturday's banquet was John F. White, President of National Educational Television.

The Rollins Guidance Conference is to better acquaint the visiting secondary school officials with Rollins College, to allow the campus visitors to meet with their former students now attending Rollins, and to hear Rollins Professor Dr. Bruce Wavell unveil in its tentative form the new and exciting Rollins Honors Program, a four-year program of honors work culminating with a special Honors Degree.

Razing Wrong Building Costly

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Isi Wenesky, who returned from a business trip and discovered that his apartment house was being razed, figures someone owes him $83,000.

His lawyer agrees. They filed suit Friday for that amount in Superior Court, charging that a wrecking company carelessly demolishing the building when it was supposed to have razed an adjacent one.

Wenesky is seeking $50,000 in punitive damages, $30,000 property damages and $3,000 for loss of rent since last December.

Wrecking company officials said later that orders were confused and that the building beside Wenesky's was to have been the target. They razed it later.

Snakes are deaf, though they can receive vibrations from the ground, so the music of snake charmers doesn't affect them.

Pueblo Man Dies Of Asphyxiation

A fellow worker, Charles H. Brooks, 49, was overcome but was able to summon help. Bensik was pronnounced dead at a hospital. Brooks was reported recovering.

Investigators said they had not determined the cause of a sudden surge of fumes that enveloped the workmen.

Teacher Examinations Scheduled Soon at CSC

National Teacher Examinations will be given at Colorado State College Mar. 20.

College seniors preparing to teach and teachers applying for positions in school systems which encourage or require applicants to submit their scores on the examinations along with their other credentials are eligible to take the tests.

At the one-day test session in the CSC counseling and testing center, a candidate may take the Common Examinations, whch include tests in professional education and general education. He also may take one of the 13 teaching area examinations, which are designed to evaluate his understanding of the subject matter and methods applicable to the area he may be assigned to teach, Dr. Theodore Nelson, director of the testing center, said.

The examinations are prepared and administered by Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N.J. Designation of CSC as a test center will give prospective teachers in this area an opportunity to compare their performance on the examinations with candidates throughout the country who take the tests.

Bulletins of information describing registration procedures and containing registration forms may be obtained from Dr. Nelson, director, CSC counseling and testing center, CSC or directly from the National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Box 911, Princeton, N. J. Dr. Nelson advises prospective teachers planning to take the tests to obtain the bulletins promptly.

Capt. Jack D. Baird To Address Rotarians

Capt. Jack D. Baird, Commanding Officer of the Naval Reserve Training Center will present a slide presentation entitled "Sustained Power at Sea," to the Rotary Club of Colorado Springs Friday Jan. 29 at the Acacia Hotel.

Air Conditioners Arrive in Record Load

Air conditioning in automobiles is becoming a "must" for motorists, according to officials of the Barney Gross Supply Co., who received the first full truckload of automobile air conditioners ever delivered in the Rocky Mountain Region.

Local dealers include: Daniels Motors, Bob Foss Motors, Johnson Pontiac, Phil Long Motors and the Perkins Motor Company.

The historic load of Mark IV air conditioners arrived Jan. 8, at the firm's distribution headquarters, in Denver.

"The record smashing size of this order is a mile-stone which marks the coming-of-age of automobile air conditioning," said Gross, who has pioneered the distribution of this type of equipment in the Rocky Mountain Region.

Previously regarded as a luxury accessory, the automobile air conditioner came into being only 11 years ago, and has gained popular acceptance as "must" equipment in a remarkably short period of time.

Mark IV is recognized as the leading independent name in auto air conditioners, leading all other independent makers by a wide margin.

The de-humidification features of Mark IV units have developed year 'round sales throughout the United States.

The Barney Gross Supply Company, which has been in the automotive supply business for more than 30 years, has organized a distribution chain of 100 dealers throughout the area.

Including these, there are over 3200 service centers for Mark IV thoughout the United States.

BUENOS AIRES — Fifteen TV stations are going up in Argentina.

Springs Kennel Club To Meet Here Monday

The regular meeting of the Colorado Springs Kennel Club will be open to the public at 8 p.m. Monday at the Alamo Hotel.

Special guests will be members of the P.T.A. of Stratton Meadows and persons who have been circulating petitions to be presented to the state legislature for a county leash law, Mrs. Mary Urban reported.

Anyone who is concerned about the dog problem in parts of El Paso County is welcome to attend the meeting and discussion on this subject. Kennel Club President Capt. Charles Thoma was quoted as saying, "As members of the Colorado Springs Kennel Club, we are certainly interested in helping to form the right laws for control of our dog population. We would like anyone who has constructive ideas on updating the state laws on animals to attend the meeting of the Colorado Springs Kennel Club Monday evening."

Loveland Getting New Tube Firm

LOVELAND (UPI)—A stain less steel tubing manufacturer, Oakley Tube Corp., of Skokie, Ill., will move its production plant to Loveland, the Loveland Chamber of Commerce announced Thursday.

Oakley will employ 50 men to start production in Loveland about April 15, the announcement said, and the work force is expected to double by the end of 1965.

The company expects to transfer 10 employees and their families from Skokie to Loveland, Jerry McFarland, president of Oakley, told the Loveland Development Fund. The fund is a unit of the Chamber of Commerce.

Oakley Tube will operate at the Turner Industrial tract three miles south of Loveland, using an available building.

Capt. Jack D. Baird To Address Rotarians

Capt. Jack D. Baird, Commanding Officer of the Naval Reserve Training Center will present a slide presentation entitled "Sustained Power at Sea," to the Rotary Club of Colorado Springs Friday Jan. 29 at the Acacia Hotel.

Air Conditioners Arrive in Record Load

Air conditioning in automobiles is becoming a "must" for motorists, according to officials of the Barney Gross Supply Co., who received the first full truckload of automobile air conditioners ever delivered in the Rocky Mountain Region.

Local dealers include: Daniels Motors, Bob Foss Motors, Johnson Pontiac, Phil Long Motors and the Perkins Motor Company.

The historic load of Mark IV air conditioners arrived Jan. 8, at the firm's distribution headquarters, in Denver.

"The record smashing size of this order is a mile-stone which marks the coming-of-age of automobile air conditioning," said Gross, who has pioneered the distribution of this type of equipment in the Rocky Mountain Region.

Previously regarded as a luxury accessory, the automobile air conditioner came into being only 11 years ago, and has gained popular acceptance as "must" equipment in a remarkably short period of time.

Mark IV is recognized as the leading independent name in auto air conditioners, leading all other independent makers by a wide margin.

The de-humidification features of Mark IV units have developed year 'round sales throughout the United States.

The Barney Gross Supply Company, which has been in the automotive supply business for more than 30 years, has organized a distribution chain of 100 dealers throughout the area.

Including these, there are over 3200 service centers for Mark IV thoughout the United States.

Springs Kennel Club To Meet Here Monday

The regular meeting of the Colorado Springs Kennel Club will be open to the public at 8 p.m. Monday at the Alamo Hotel.

Special guests will be members of the P.T.A. of Stratton Meadows and persons who have been circulating petitions to be presented to the state legislature for a county leash law, Mrs. Mary Urban reported.

Anyone who is concerned about the dog problem in parts of El Paso County is welcome to attend the meeting and discussion on this subject. Kennel Club President Capt. Charles Thoma was quoted as saying, "As members of the Colorado Springs Kennel Club, we are certainly interested in helping to form the right laws for control of our dog population. We would like anyone who has constructive ideas on updating the state laws on animals to attend the meeting of the Colorado Springs Kennel Club Monday evening."

Loveland Getting New Tube Firm

LOVELAND (UPI)—A stain less steel tubing manufacturer, Oakley Tube Corp., of Skokie, Ill., will move its production plant to Loveland, the Loveland Chamber of Commerce announced Thursday.

Oakley will employ 50 men to start production in Loveland about April 15, the announcement said, and the work force is expected to double by the end of 1965.

The company expects to transfer 10 employees and their families from Skokie to Loveland, Jerry McFarland, president of Oakley, told the Loveland Development Fund. The fund is a unit of the Chamber of Commerce.

Oakley Tube will operate at the Turner Industrial tract three miles south of Loveland, using an available building.

FEEDER SALES

DENVER (AP)—The National Western Livestock Show reported Friday total feeder sales were just short of $2 million.

Receipts from 14,300 head of stock were about $500,000 short of the $2,400,000 figure predicted during the sale Thursday.

Idea-Selling Secret Is Content Wrapped Well

Mr. Walter Knott,
Knott's Berry Farm,
Buena Park, Calif.

Dear Mr. Knott: Your letter of Jan. 4 comments on a question asked in this column; namely, "Non-socialists know they can produce, but can they sell? Socialists can sell, but can they produce?" You then asked me to state my opinion as to what is in the package of non-socialist ideas.

Sir, the marketplace of ideas is like any other marketplace. A commodity submitted there ought to have (1) attractive wrappings and (2) pure contents.

When I examine the content of conservative ideas, I find them to be impure. By "impure" I mean they are mixed with contradictions, with irrationalities, and with socialist contaminants. Capitalism will begin to gain in the marketplace of ideas only when those who believe in Capitalism know what it is and how to explain it. This can be demonstrated mathematically.

If each of 100 Conservatives believes in 99 per cent Capitalism with one per cent socialism and if each goes out to sell his version of the package, the resulting sales effort will not be for the 99-to-one ratio but rather for some mixtures containing from one per cent socialism upwards to 100 per cent.

That is point number one: the content of the package must be pure. The theoretics of pure Capitalism have been worked out by the finest economists of the twentieth century. There has been sufficient practical trial of this doctrine to know that it proves out.

Point number two pertains to the wrappings of the package. Since I am trying to cover quite a bit of ground here in a short space, let me pass by this important subject with a single comment. The people of this country want PROTECTION. The aged citizen is taxed out of his very house. The workingman is social-securitied out of his pay. The businessman struggles for survival in a jungle of regulation. The jobless are forgotten in the false belief that the welfare state already has provided for them.

The Capitalistic package therefore should offer protection to the abused and down-trodden of ALL economic levels.

Beyond these two elements that pertain to the Capitalistic package, the Capitalistic sales force will be more unified when it has a sales goal. President Johnson stated a pretty good goal when he said "We seek to establish a harmony between man and society which will allow each of us to enlarge the meaning of his life and all of us to elevate the quality of our civilization."

Every Capitalist can say amen to that. What is the harmonious society? To the socialist it is conformity. To the Capitalist it is variety.

The socialist says "compel." The Capitalist says "persuade."

The socialist says "liberalize." The Capitalist says "liberate."

The socialist says "standardize." The Capitalist says "upgrade."

The socialist says "regulate." The Capitalist says "compete."

The socialist idolizes "the public." The capitalist has regard for the people.

The socialist thinks of government as bureaucracy; to the Capitalist government means law and order.

The socialist advocates foreign aid; the Capitalist calls for free trade.

The socialist wants welfare; the Capitalist seeks well-being.

The socialist urges demonstration; the Capitalist relies on example.

In summary, all the information we need is available in written form. The problem is to get it into one brain having a sufficient grasp of both the theoretics and the practicalities so that it can come out as a sound product in a good package with a spirited sales program behind it. The program should be devised in such a way that it will survive the fall of the existing social structure.

Respectfully,
Sam Campbell

FEDERAL TAX TIPS

BY ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

FORM W-2 — Reminder to Employers: Employers are required to furnish Form W-2, showing income and social security tax information, to all their employees on or before Feb. 1st.

FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT TAX: Employers are reminded that where they employed four or more individuals on at least one day of each of 20 weeks in 1964 that they must file a return and pay the Federal Unemployment Tax. This is done on Form 940, and same must be filed on or before February 1, 1965.

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS: There is space provided on page 1 of your 1964 Federal income tax return, for you to list your Social Security number. Taxpayers are reminded that the law requires you to put your number on your return. Husbands and wives filing joint returns sometimes neglect to enter both their social security numbers when both have income. Please check your return to see that you have listed all the required information.

TAX RETURN SIGNERS ARE RESPONSIBLE: All taxpayers are reminded that they are responsible for all entries and supporting documents in their Federal tax returns. This is true, no matter who prepares the return. Tax advisors, whether they be taxpayer assistance personnel of the Internal Revenue or private practitioners, can only rely upon the information furnished by the taxpayer. Their primary function is to transfer information from the taxpayer to the proper places on the tax form. It is suggested that taxpayers seeking assistance should review last year's return and read first our current instructions. Frequently, a deduction or item of income is missed because the advisor was not furnished with all the necessary information. Regardless of who prepares the return, the responsibility for filing the return and liability for any underpayment, interest and possible penalties are the taxpayer's. On joint returns, both husband and wife are equally responsible.

ATTACH FORMS W-2: Be sure to attach copy B of all Forms W-2 to your return. Refunds cannot be paid nor can credit be given for taxes withheld without the required Forms W-2, the withholding tax statements from employers. Please don't use staples or pins when enclosing your W-2's when filing the card Form 1040-A. Card form returns are processed by machine and staple or pin holes in the cards interfere with processing. Make sure that the W-2 attached to the return is COPY B, the one marked for the Federal tax return. If the taxpayer had several jobs during the year, A W-2 Form from each job must be included.

CHECKS PAYABLE TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE: If you owe more tax when filing your 1964 Federal Income Tax Return, make your check payable to "Internal Revenue Service." When filing your return you must make full payment of any additional tax due, and the return must be filed no later than April 15, 1965.

IDENTIFY YOUR TAX RETURN: "When will I get my refund?" is one of the questions most frequently asked by taxpayers. An illegible name or address is quite often the reason for failure to receive refunds. Thousands of refund checks are returned to Internal Revenue every year because the postman cannot deliver them. It is permissible to sign your name at the bottom of the return the way you always sign your name, even if your signature is a hurried scrawl. But, at the top of the return, be sure that your name and address are carefully printed or typed along with your social security number. If you move since last filing, be sure to show your new address on the return you are currently filing. If you move after filing, a forwarding address should be left with the post office. Carefully printed or typewritten identification of the taxpayer's name and address are vitally important to prompt processing of the return.

TV TO PICS

Date-Line

By Ele and Walt Dulaney

Today we're going to cast a critical glance at the "wedding madness" that will erupt in a few more months. Perhaps these off - season comments will give some couples the support they need to keep in touch with reality as they plan their wedding day.

It's tragic how many folks "go for broke" — and we do mean broke — when they wed. A reception for 500 to 1,000 guests; a platoon of photographers; a wedding dress with both train and caboose attached; a battalion of bridesmaids; and on and on and on. And up mount the bills!

Now don't get us wrong. We think big weddings are fine if you've got the bankroll and inclinations. What we oppose is the cruel social pressure that pushes a family with limited funds into spending $1,000 to $2,500 to launch their daughter "properly" with an enormous wedding and reception. Madness!

What's the real purpose of a wedding? To repay past social obligations? To coax an ill-assorted avalanche of gifts from friends, relatives and business acquaintances? Or is it a glorified style show?

Dr. James A. Peterson, a pioneer in marriage education, says this: "The important part of the marriage ceremony is the dedication of one individual to another in a reverent and beautiful day. But when the romantic dreams of the 'march in the gown' or the social prestige factors involved in the 'great ceremony' occupy the attention, a wedding loses much of its special value to the couple."

In other words, a big wedding may turn into a carefully rehearsed "circus" that denies the couple the real meaning to the dedication ceremony as they struggle to impress an army of spectators.

How often have you heard people say that the wedding is the "high point" of the couple's life? Well, we're sorry for any pair who find the first day of married life is the best. It's pretty sad to think of every day after that is an emotional letdown. Personally, we've found that each day of shared experiences makes marriage richer and fuller.

If you see the wedding ceremony as the start and not as the climax of your married life, you'll plan a much more sensible service. Since this is just the beginning of your future, why mortgage a thousand tomorrows to pay for the debts of one day?

Even if you're wealthy, you'll still want to choose the most satisfying way to spend your money. Do you really want a $2,500 reception with lobster for 500 guests? Or would you enjoy a month's honeymoon in the Orient? Maybe you'd prefer a cake and punch reception and then use the balance of your money to purchase a TV, washer, dryer, refrigerator and miscellaneous furniture. Or would you rather use the money as a down payment on a home?

Occasionally parental pressures bloat the intimate, meaningful service the couple desired, into a hideous crushing mob scene.

This is too bad and shouldn't happen. It's the couple's privilege to plan a wedding that suits them. It's their wedding day, not their parents'. Naturally the couple will consider their parents' suggestions, but the final decision is up to them.

It's equally important that both the bride and the groom be pleased with the plans. It's not "her" day, it's their day. And if the decision is a joint one, the couple will more easily withstand ill - advised interference from others.

There is no need for the bride and groom to worry about impressing or entertaining their guests. Sincere guests come to express their affection for the pair, not to gasp at the flowers or chow down.

And don't worry that folks will think you had to get married if the wedding is small. Big wedding or small, folks will still count the months until the first baby arrives. That's just human nature.

Make sense? Why not drop us a line in care of this paper and share your wedding day dreams or memories? We'd like to have your thoughts.

The socialist idolizes "the public." The capitalist has regard for the people.

The socialist thinks of government as bureaucracy; the Capitalist government means law and order.

The socialist advocates foreign aid; the Capitalist calls for free trade.

The socialist wants welfare; the Capitalist seeks well-being.

The socialist urges demonstration; the Capitalist relies on example.

In summary, all the information we need is available in written form. The problem is to get it into one brain having a sufficient grasp of both the theoretics and the practicalities so that it can come out as a sound product in a good package with a spirited sales program behind it. The program should be devised in such a way that it will survive the fall of the existing social structure.

Respectfully,
Sam Campbell

FEDERAL TAX TIPS

BY ROGER E. WARD
Administrative Representative
Internal Revenue Service

FORM W-2 — Reminder to Employers: Employers are required to furnish Form W-2, showing income and social security tax information, to all their employees on or before Feb. 1st.

FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT TAX: Employers are reminded that where they employed four or more individuals on at least one day of each of 20 weeks in 1964 that they must file a return and pay the Federal Unemployment Tax. This is done on Form 940, and same must be filed on or before February 1, 1965.

SOCIAL SECURITY NUMBERS: There is space provided on page 1 of your 1964 Federal income tax return, for you to list your Social Security number. Taxpayers are reminded that the law requires you to put your number on your return. Husbands and wives filing joint returns sometimes neglect to enter both their social security numbers when both have income. Please check your return to see that you have listed all the required information.

TAX RETURN SIGNERS ARE RESPONSIBLE: All taxpayers are reminded that they are responsible for all entries and supporting documents in their Federal tax returns. This is true, no matter who prepares the return. Tax advisors, whether they be taxpayer assistance personnel of the Internal Revenue or private practitioners, can only rely upon the information furnished by the taxpayer. Their primary function is to transfer information from the taxpayer to the proper places on the tax form. It is suggested that taxpayers seeking assistance should review last year's return and read first our current instructions. Frequently, a deduction or item of income is missed because the advisor was not furnished with all the necessary information. Regardless of who prepares the return, the responsibility for filing the return and liability for any underpayment, interest and possible penalties are the taxpayer's. On joint returns, both husband and wife are equally responsible.

ATTACH FORMS W-2: Be sure to attach copy B of all Forms W-2 to your return. Refunds cannot be paid nor can credit be given for taxes withheld without the required Forms W-2, the withholding tax statements from employers. Please don't use staples or pins when enclosing your W-2's when filing the card Form 1040-A. Card form returns are processed by machine and staple or pin holes in the cards interfere with processing. Make sure that the W-2 attached to the return is COPY B, the one marked for the Federal tax return. If the taxpayer had several jobs during the year, A W-2 Form from each job must be included.

CHECKS PAYABLE TO INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE: If you owe more tax when filing your 1964 Federal Income Tax Return, make your check payable to "Internal Revenue Service." When filing your return you must make full payment of any additional tax due, and the return must be filed no later than April 15, 1965.

IDENTIFY YOUR TAX RETURN: "When will I get my refund?" is one of the questions most frequently asked by taxpayers. An illegible name or address is quite often the reason for failure to receive refunds. Thousands of refund checks are returned to Internal Revenue every year because the postman cannot deliver them. It is permissible to sign your name at the bottom of the return the way you always sign your name, even if your signature is a hurried scrawl. But, at the top of the return, be sure that your name and address are carefully printed or typed along with your social security number. If you move since last filing, be sure to show your new address on the return you are currently filing. If you move after filing, a forwarding address should be left with the post office. Carefully printed or typewritten identification of the taxpayer's name and address are vitally important to prompt processing of the return.

By Ele and Walt Dulaney

Today we're going to cast a critical glance at the "wedding madness" that will erupt in a few more months. Perhaps these off - season comments will give some couples the support they need to keep in touch with reality as they plan their wedding day.

It's tragic how many folks "go for broke" — and we do mean broke — when they wed. A reception for 500 to 1,000 guests; a platoon of photographers; a wedding dress with both train and caboose attached; a battalion of bridesmaids; and on and on and on. And up mount the bills!

Now don't get us wrong. We think big weddings are fine if you've got the bankroll and inclinations. What we oppose is the cruel social pressure that pushes a family with limited funds into spending $1,000 to $2,500 to launch their daughter "properly" with an enormous wedding and reception. Madness!

What's the real purpose of a wedding? To repay past social obligations? To coax an ill-assorted avalanche of gifts from friends, relatives and business acquaintances? Or is it a glorified style show?

Dr. James A. Peterson, a pioneer in marriage education, says this: "The important part of the marriage ceremony is the dedication of one individual to another in a reverent and beautiful day. But when the romantic dreams of the 'march in the gown' or the social prestige factors involved in the 'great ceremony' occupy the attention, a wedding loses much of its special value to the couple."

In other words, a big wedding may turn into a carefully rehearsed "circus" that denies the couple the real meaning to the dedication ceremony as they struggle to impress an army of spectators.

How often have you heard people say that the wedding is the "high point" of the couple's life? Well, we're sorry for any pair who find the first day of married life is the best. It's pretty sad to think of every day after that is an emotional letdown. Personally, we've found that each day of shared experiences makes marriage richer and fuller.

If you see the wedding ceremony as the start and not as the climax of your married life, you'll plan a much more sensible service. Since this is just the beginning of your future, why mortgage a thousand tomorrows to pay for the debts of one day?

Even if you're wealthy, you'll still want to choose the most satisfying way to spend your money. Do you really want a $2,500 reception with lobster for 500 guests? Or would you enjoy a month's honeymoon in the Orient? Maybe you'd prefer a cake and punch reception and then use the balance of your money to purchase a TV, washer, dryer, refrigerator and miscellaneous furniture. Or would you rather use the money as a down payment on a home?

Occasionally parental pressures bloat the intimate, meaningful service the couple desired, into a hideous crushing mob scene.

This is too bad and shouldn't happen. It's the couple's privilege to plan a wedding that suits them. It's their wedding day, not their parents'. Naturally the couple will consider their parents' suggestions, but the final decision is up to them.

It's equally important that both the bride and the groom be pleased with the plans. It's not "her" day, it's their day. And if the decision is a joint one, the couple will more easily withstand ill - advised interference from others.

There is no need for the bride and groom to worry about impressing or entertaining their guests. Sincere guests come to express their affection for the pair, not to gasp at the flowers or chow down.

And don't worry that folks will think you had to get married if the wedding is small. Big wedding or small, folks will still count the months until the first baby arrives. That's just human nature.

Make sense? Why not drop us a line in care of this paper and share your wedding day dreams or memories? We'd like to have your thoughts.

Train Takes All Night for Ankara Trip

By HAL McCLURE

ISTANBUL (AP) — The old locomotive, sounding like a wounded tea kettle, huffs out a long piercing whistle and the train lurches off into the night, bound for Ankara nearly 250 miles to the east.

Taking the night train to Ankara is an adventure no train buff should miss.

There's nothing express about the run.

It takes more than 12 hours to reach Ankara after skirting the Sea of Marmara, plunging through the mountains and across the windswept Anatolian plains.

The government-owned railroads have a few diesel locomotives and more on order, but much of the rolling stock has seen better days — long before Ataturk.

The traditional Wagon - Lits sleepers, the scene of a hundred international movie thrillers, are kept neat and clean. In some the wood paneling decorated with fancy harem - like designs still has a glossy shine.

But the seats and carpeting are worn in some, the fixtures and hardware tarnished in others. Doors stick and windows rattle.

But the nostalgic traveler ignores the brutal facts of encroaching age to recall the train's exciting and adventurous past.

The best days, by far, were those of World War II, when the train was almost the only way to get between Istanbul and Ankara, the then neutral capital.

Diplomats, journalists — and spies — of a dozen countries were thrown together as they made the familiar overnight journey.

German and British officials glared at each other over steaming black Turkish coffee.

Ignoring everyone, the French sipped the national Turkish drink, raki, which tastes of licorice but is so powerful it is known locally as tiger's milk.

The jolliest group was usually the Americans, who tried to get a trainboard party started to make the ride shorter—and less painful.

Intrigue and gossip were everywhere.

That's all past now.

A few foreigners still make the trip each night, but the main clientele is among Turkish businessmen whose no - so-secret missions might be to boost tractor sales or cotton acreage.

The Turks have a complaint about the trains, too:

The railroad, perhaps fearing the wild behavior of the raki drinkers, has banned the fiery liquid from the train.

Maj. Gen. Ware To Visit AFA Next Saturday

Maj. Gen. C. B. Ware, commandant of the Canadian Defense College, head of a contingent of college staff members and students scheduled to visit the Air Force Academy Saturday is a veteran of more than 30 years service to his country.

The commandant was commissioned in 1935. During World War Two he served in Sicily and following VE Day was a member of the allied occupation forces in Germany.

A long-time military educator, Gen. Ware has headed the Canadian Service College at Royal Roads, British Columbia, and served as director-general of military training for Canadian Army headquarters.

In 1954 he was commander of the Canadian Military Mission Far East in Tokyo.

Gen. Ware is a graduate of the British Imperial Defense College.

He was promoted to major general and assigned to his present post in 1962.

Accompanying the commandant are two of his staff members: Commander P.F.X. Russell, Navy member, and Mr. J. M. Teakles, foreign service office member.

Two U.S. personnel are included in the student body, Air Force Col. James H. Watkins and Mr. C. G. Wooten, Department of State.

THE AMERICAN HERITAGE HISTORY OF WORLD WAR ONE — By the Editors of American Heritage — Narrative by S.L.A. Marshall — Illustrated—384 pages — New York — American Heritage — distributed by Simon & Schuster $16.-50 — How did World War One really start? What gave rise to the holocaust which drowned Europe, and many other parts of the world, in a flood of fire and death? And gave rise to the modern era of massive warfare?

This book, with the text by Gen. Marshall, is probably one of the best interpretations so-far.

Colorado Springs has a very large military contingent, and this book therefore will be of special interest.

Brig. Gen. Marshall has been described by Carl Sandburg as "the greatest of writer on modern war." But one would have to pinpoint more exactly why he is a great writer. One of the reasons is that he is not content merely with a description of battles: That has been done. What is of tremendous importance is that Marshall goes behind the scenes to pull out forgotten bits of back-stage shenanigans between politicians, kings, Kaiser, and military men, as well as diplomats and conspirators, and there finds the germ of the conflict which once and for all changed the concepts of war and of power.

One of the main points at which Gen. Marshall hammers without equivocation is that one of the reasons, if not the main reason, for World War One, was the military stance of the great powers, and the commitment of the military mind, for instance, that once the troops have been mobilized, the war must follow automatically and irrevocably.

In this respect, even though the military mind today is always aware of the "military posture," there seems to be a difference between the contemporary world, and the one before World War One. Today, even though the world seems to exist much of the time on the brink of war, a brink from which even the military mind shrinks, and the emphasis today is on "peace" and "prevention" rather than on war as a total tool of national policy.

Whether it is really so or not, probably might depend on the semantics in the case, and whether the "real-politik" of today's power postures can be modified by semantics may remain to the purists a moot point or not, depending on their inclinations.

But that the power posture, or as it is called defense posture, before World War One was different, of that there seems to be little doubt, if one follows the engrossing text by Gen. Marshall in all of its logical and painstakingly researched conclusions.

In those days, it seems, the military mind was still preoccupied with the conviction (or illusion or delusion) that military action could, and would, be the only solution to political questions: It was still a world in which most questions could be divided into black-and-white, choosing the color regardless in which camp the contestant found himself.

As contrast, today's situation seems to have become sophisticated, in that it exists in all kinds of shades not only of gray, but in all the colors of the rainbow, and by some thinkers this may be taken as a step forward into a progressive integration of the world's political kaleidoscope — instead of a deterioration, as others think, when they think of the ultimate danger of the atomic, hydrogen and even worse bombs and germ warfare.

This book should not be confused with the usual run of the mill gift books. Marshall's text alone runs to some 160,000 words, and it is a book in itself. The editors of American Heritage have seen fit to make a big production of it, with profuse illustrations, most of them in color, and the end result is all to the good, for it brings to life scenes which to many people, are merely hearsay, or at best hoary memories.

Gen. Marshall himself served in World War One as a young infantry officer. His writing proves again his reputation as one of America's most brilliant military writers. Certainly, what he writes is not only clear in style, but clear in concept as well. His insights are like bayonet thrusts into the murk of fact and fable, and instead of confining himself to the development of the military picture, the machinations of diplomats and statesmen, their stupidities, their personal corruption and their blunders are uncovered with skillful, surgeon-like precision by Marshall in what otherwise would seem a pile of old forgotten, dry and dustry records.

One reviewer remarked that Marshall shows "strongly original opinions." Strongly original they may be, but we would go further than saying that they are merely opinions, for the word opinions is too close for comfort to opinionated: Rather, we would say that Marshall pulls no punches, and he lets the chips fall where they may.

To some people, of course, it may sound like an "opinion" when he declares that the "deepest villain of the 1914 summer tragedy" was not the Kaiser, but the Austrian Foreign Minister Count Leopold von Berchtold, who deliberately provoked the warring nations for reasons that could only be explained as coming from a stupid Mephistopheles.

To be sure, the Kaiser comes in for his share of opprobrium. But, here is where Marshall's military mind touches that of the psychologist: For he takes into full cognizance the psychological circumstances of individuals in the seats of power, their strong points, as well as their weaknesses, and teh picture which emerges is that, really, of a handful of men, the Kaiser, the Czar, the Emperor, the Cabinet in whose hands the fate of Europe lay, and in whose hands Europe was reduced to shambles.

To be sure, the Kraiser comes

And for this reason, in that duced to shambles.

Marshall provides the psychological glimpses into the secret springs of political and military action, the history of World War One will probably never be the same.

For instance, while he describes the Kaiser, the Czar, and the Austrian Emperor as blundering through the gathering murk, Marshall declares that it was primarily von Berchtold who "betrayed the peace, deliberately lying, deceiving, double-dealing and committing folly unequalled."

Perhaps this will not be a popular view with some historians or war buffs, but Marshall is completely undeterred. He may, also, not be popular with some Anglophiles for not painting the "Hun" in all-black, nor does he ascribe to the Germans, as used to be the case by a reverse admirers of the German military mind, its sinister brilliance (which, incidentally, Hitler used to such good effect in his propaganda.) On the contrary, for instance regarding the famous Schlieffen Plan, Marshall says bluntly that he does not think there was anything specially brilliant in it. As a matter of fact, the Schlieffen Plan eventually became "another strategic concept altogether," by the time it was put into operation.

The point is that Marshall throws into the teeth of former historians the almost superstitious admiration of German perfection. The Germans were not nearly as perfect as even their enemies, believed them to be.

To be sure, the German military masterminded all kinds of plans for the eventualities of war, and perhaps part of their success may lie in the impression of invincibility, which served them sell in several wars from a psychological viewpoint. But, when one examines the evidence of the actual conduct of war, in the face of enemy resistance, one finds that the Germans had to adapt their plans, and had to meet all kinds of situations not expected in their plans, and consequently, not only their plans had to be changed, even improvised, but they also found that even the plans, such as they were, foundered against enemy resistance, when it developed, the most spectacular incidents perhaps to be quoted are the German disasters at Moscow and Stalingrad, to take some examples from World War Two. But in World War One there were also many such cases.

Another myth which Marshall explodes is the single-minded fanaticism of the German military mind. There is the case of the assault on Verdun, for instance, by Gen. Falkenhayn. This is a matter which has been debated ever since the event, and many commentators have attempted to read perfectionist profundity or fanaticism into it. Marshall says drily that Falkenhayn merely wanted to start a Verdun bloodbath so devastating that the nations, and Germany itself, would be shocked into seeking a speedy peace. Ironically, it did not work that way; no more than the invention of the machine gun, or the atomic bomb, stopped warfare, showing once again the erroneousness position that the horrors of war have ever stopped a war.

It did not work, of course, because the military minds on all sides were too deeply committed to war, as can best be illustrated by the military strategy of attrition practiced in the Flanders Fields.

Not that Marshall comes out flatly saying war is useless. The first point he makes is that the situation just before World War One had the main drawback of being inflexible: Once the armies had been mobilized, there was no way to stop them. The second point seems to be that if military steps had to be taken, they were taken with an incredible amount of waste, the kind of waste from which a flexible, military mind, would, or should, recoil. Or, in terms of humor, it is like the man who wants to kill a gnat, and turns a cannon on himself to do it, blowing himself to smithereens.

Not that the troubles of Europe were mosquitoes. But the solution certainly could not be called efficient in any sense of the term.

It in this respect that perhaps today's military mind has been forced, by the atomic threat, to seek more efficient solutions. In other words, one might say that the picture has undergone a sophistication, under pressure of events and conditions, and therefore, at least in this respect, there still might be some hope. In World War One there was no hope, because the rulers and their generals and diplomats did not want any hope.

The book contains some 300 pictures. Many of them are photographs from sources never before published. Also, there are many other aids for the reader, such as fine, clear maps, and the text and pictures are so well coordinated that they aid in the illumination of this very complex subject.

And what is the importance of World War One? In Marshall's words: "World War One destroyed the Old European Society, the old European controls, the stability of the entire World Structure." But, it might be argued, this does not concern the average American reader too much. Marshall proceeds with a stronger indictment: "All that has happened since, the rise of monstrous dictatorships, the collapse of colonial empires, the Second War, was the uneasy time in which a world that has lost its equilibrium struggles so painfully and at such mortal risks to find a new equilibrium, all of these things (and Communism, too) followed inexhorably World War One."

1. When the Lights Went Out — The political, diplomatic, and military history of Europe from 1870 to the eve of the war, stressing the animosity between evitable once the spark had been ignited. The assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand at Sarajevo and the ultimatums, mobilization, and declarations of war that line up Austria - Hungary and Germany against Serbia, Russia, France, and Britain.

2. Appointment at the Marne — Siege of Liege and Belgian resistance. French advance toward Metz as Germany strikes with powerful right wing of her armies against northern France. Arrival of the BEF in France. Mons, Le Cateau, and the retreat. Von Kluck's turn in front of Paris. Gallieni and the defense of Paris. The clash of giants at the First Battle of the Marne.

3. Guns East — Military developments on the various Eastern fronts: Russia invasion of East Prussia checked at Battle of Tannenberg; Austrian offensives in Galicia and two abortive invasions of Serbia. Allied and German intrigues in Constantinople; the flight of the Gaeben and Breslau; Turkey joins the Central Powers.

4. Seeds of Stalemate — Post-Marne military developments on the Western front: Race to the Sea; seige of Antwerp and escape of Belgian Army to a line behind the Yser River; first Ypres and consolidation of the trench line from Switgerland to the North Sea. Eastern Front after Tannenberg. Naval attempt to force the Dardanelles; and the genesis of Gallipoli-Campaign.

5. Spreading Conflict — War in the Far West, in the Pacific, and in Africa. Introduction of gas at Second Ypres. Sinking of the Lusitania brings U.S. to the brink of war; Wilson's campaign for neutrality. Bulgaria joins Central Powers, as Allies land at Salonika in Greece; the defeat of Serbia.

6. Deadlock — the 1915 offensives fail to break the stalemate on the Western Front. THE AMERICAN HERITAGE HISTORY OF WORLD WAR ONE — By the Editors of American Heritage — Narrative by S.L.A. Marshall — Illustrated — 384 pages — New York — American Heritage — distributed by Simon & Schuster $16.-50 — How did World War One really start? What gave rise to the holocaust which drowned Europe, and many other parts of the world, in a flood of fire and death? And gave rise to the modern era of massive warfare?

Colorado Springs has a very large military contingent, and this book therefore will be of special interest.

Brig. Gen. Marshall has been described by Carl Sandburg as "the greatest of writer on modern war." But one would have to pinpoint more exactly why he is a great writer. One of the reasons is that he is not content merely with a description of battles: That has been done. What is of tremendous importance is that Marshall goes behind the scenes to pull out forgotten bits of back-stage shenanigans between politicians, kings, Kaiser, and military men, as well as diplomats and conspirators, and there finds the germ of the conflict which once and for all changed the concepts of war and of power.

One of the main points at which Gen. Marshall hammers without equivocation is that one of the reasons, if not the main reason, for World War One, was the military stance of the great powers, and the commitment of the military mind, for instance, that once the troops have been mobilized, the war must follow automatically and irrevocably.

In this respect, even though the military mind today is always aware of the "military posture," there seems to be a difference between the contemporary world, and the one before World War One. Today, even though the world seems to exist much of the time on the brink of war, a brink from which even the military mind shrinks, and the emphasis today is on "peace" and "prevention" rather than on war as a total tool of national policy.

Whether it is really so or not, probably might depend on the semantics in the case, and whether the "real-politik" of today's power postures can be modified by semantics may remain to the purists a moot point or not, depending on their inclinations.

But that the power posture, or as it is called defense posture, before World War One was different, of that there seems to be little doubt, if one follows the engrossing text by Gen. Marshall in all of its logical and painstakingly researched conclusions.

In those days, it seems, the military mind was still preoccupied with the conviction (or illusion or delusion) that military action could, and would, be the only solution to political questions: It was still a world in which most questions could be divided into black-and-white, choosing the color regardless in which camp the contestant found himself.

As contrast, today's situation seems to have become sophisticated, in that it exists in all kinds of shades not only of gray, but in all the colors of the rainbow, and by some thinkers this may be taken as a step forward into a progressive integration of the world's political kaleidoscope — instead of a deterioration, as others think, when they think of the ultimate danger of the atomic, hydrogen and even worse bombs and germ warfare.

This book should not be confused with the usual run of the mill gift books. Marshall's text alone runs to some 160,000 words, and it is a book in itself. The editors of American Heritage have seen fit to make a big production of it, with profuse illustrations, most of them in color, and the end result is all to the good, for it brings to life scenes which to many people, are merely hearsay, or at best hoary memories.

Gen. Marshall himself served in World War One as a young infantry officer. His writing proves again his reputation as one of America's most brilliant military writers. Certainly, what he writes is not only clear in style, but clear in concept as well. His insights are like bayonet thrusts into the murk of fact and fable, and instead of confining himself to the development of the military picture, the machinations of diplomats and statesmen, their stupidities, their personal corruption and their blunders are uncovered with skillful, surgeon-like precision by Marshall in what otherwise would seem a pile of old forgotten, dry and dustry records.

One reviewer remarked that Marshall shows "strongly original opinions." Strongly original they may be, but we would go further than saying that they are merely opinions, for the word opinions is too close for comfort to opinionated: Rather, we would say that Marshall pulls no punches, and he lets the chips fall where they may.

To some people, of course, it may sound like an "opinion" when he declares that the "deepest villain of the 1914 summer tragedy" was not the Kaiser, but the Austrian Foreign Minister Count Leopold von Berchtold, who deliberately provoked the warring nations for reasons that could only be explained as coming from a stupid Mephistopheles.

To be sure, the Kaiser comes in for his share of opprobrium. But, here is where Marshall's military mind touches that of the psychologist: For he takes into full cognizance the psychological circumstances of individuals in the seats of power, their strong points, as well as their weaknesses, and teh picture which emerges is that, really, of a handful of men, the Kaiser, the Czar, the Emperor, the Cabinet in whose hands the fate of Europe lay, and in whose hands Europe was reduced to shambles.

To be sure, the Kraiser comes

And for this reason, in that duced to shambles.

Marshall provides the psychological glimpses into the secret springs of political and military action, the history of World War One will probably never be the same.

For instance, while he describes the Kaiser, the Czar, and the Austrian Emperor as blundering through the gathering murk, Marshall declares that it was primarily von Berchtold who "betrayed the peace, deliberately lying, deceiving, double-dealing and committing folly unequalled."

Perhaps this will not be a popular view with some historians or war buffs, but Marshall is completely undeterred. He may, also, not be popular with some Anglophiles for not painting the "Hun" in all-black, nor does he ascribe to the Germans, as used to be the case by a reverse admirers of the German military mind, its sinister brilliance (which, incidentally, Hitler used to such good effect in his propaganda.) On the contrary, for instance regarding the famous Schlieffen Plan, Marshall says bluntly that he does not think there was anything specially brilliant in it. As a matter of fact, the Schlieffen Plan eventually became "another strategic concept altogether," by the time it was put into operation.

The point is that Marshall throws into the teeth of former historians the almost superstitious admiration of German perfection. The Germans were not nearly as perfect as even their enemies, believed them to be.

To be sure, the German military masterminded all kinds of plans for the eventualities of war, and perhaps part of their success may lie in the impression of invincibility, which served them sell in several wars from a psychological viewpoint. But, when one examines the evidence of the actual conduct of war, in the face of enemy resistance, one finds that the Germans had to adapt their plans, and had to meet all kinds of situations not expected in their plans, and consequently, not only their plans had to be changed, even improvised, but they also found that even the plans, such as they were, foundered against enemy resistance, when it developed, the most spectacular incidents perhaps to be quoted are the German disasters at Moscow and Stalingrad, to take some examples from World War Two. But in World War One there were also many such cases.

Another myth which Marshall explodes is the single-minded fanaticism of the German military mind. There is the case of the assault on Verdun, for instance, by Gen. Falkenhayn. This is a matter which has been debated ever since the event, and many commentators have attempted to read perfectionist profundity or fanaticism into it. Marshall says drily that Falkenhayn merely wanted to start a Verdun bloodbath so devastating that the nations, and Germany itself, would be shocked into seeking a speedy peace. Ironically, it did not work that way; no more than the invention of the machine gun, or the atomic bomb, stopped warfare, showing once again the erroneousness position that the horrors of war have ever stopped a war.

It did not work, of course, because the military minds on all sides were too deeply committed to war, as can best be illustrated by the military strategy of attrition practiced in the Flanders Fields.

Not that Marshall comes out flatly saying war is useless. The first point he makes is that the situation just before World War One had the main drawback of being inflexible: Once the armies had been mobilized, there was no way to stop them. The second point seems to be that if military steps had to be taken, they were taken with an incredible amount of waste, the kind of waste from which a flexible, military mind, would, or should, recoil. Or, in terms of humor, it is like the man who wants to kill a gnat, and turns a cannon on himself to do it, blowing himself to smithereens.

Not that the troubles of Europe were mosquitoes. But the solution certainly could not be called efficient in any sense of the term.

It in this respect that perhaps today's military mind has been forced, by the atomic threat, to seek more efficient solutions. In other words, one might say that the picture has undergone a sophistication, under pressure of events and conditions, and therefore, at least in this respect, there still might be some hope. In World War One there was no hope, because the rulers and their generals and diplomats did not want any hope.

The book contains some 300 pictures. Many of them are photographs from sources never before published. Also, there are many other aids for the reader, such as fine, clear maps, and the text and pictures are so well coordinated that they aid in the illumination of this very complex subject.

And what is the importance of World War One? In Marshall's words: "World War One destroyed the Old European Society, the old European controls, the stability of the entire World Structure." But, it might be argued, this does not concern the average American reader too much. Marshall proceeds with a stronger indictment: "All that has happened since, the rise of monstrous dictatorships, the collapse of colonial empires, the Second War, was the uneasy time in which a world that has lost its equilibrium struggles so painfully and at such mortal risks to find a new equilibrium, all of these things (and Communism, too) followed inexhorably World War One."

Childs Out of Consideration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Asst. Secretary of the Interior John M. Kelly said Friday that Dr. Orlo E. Childs, president of the Colorado School of Mines, has removed himself from consideration to be appointed director of the Bureau of Mines.

Kelly told a reporter that Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall had asked Childs to permit his name to be placed among those to be considered for the job.

Childs has declined, Kelly said on grounds that he is just beginning to get his program established at the college, where he is in his second year as president.

Childs is a member of the secretary's Oil Shale Advisory Board. The post of director of the Bureau of Mines has been vacant since the retirement in late December of Marling J. Ankeny.

Area High School Student Has Chance for UN Trip

A teen-age high school student from this district will be selected by competition to take part in the 16th Annual United Nations Pilgrimage for Youth sponsored by the Independent Order of Odd fellows and its sister organization, the Rebekahs. The student selected to receive this award will attend United Nations headquarters for one week, as an observer.

Students eligible to take part in the contest are those who are at present sophomores or juniors; they must be 16 or 17 years of age at the time of the Pilgrimage, and be in good health. Scholarship, leadership, interest in community welfare, concern in world affairs, and general fitness to take part in the project will be taken into account in making the selection.

Interested students may enroll for the contest by filling out a "candidate's experience sheet" (these may be obtained by writing to Mrs. Irene Manning, 31 Waltham Ave., Manitou Springs) and writing an essay of approximately 500 words on either UNESCO or UNESCEF. The essay and experience sheet must be returned to Mrs. Manning no later than February 1, 1965. All contestants will be required to take a 100-question examination on the United Nations which will be given on February 27, 1965 at the Oddfellows Temple, 128 North Nevada Ave., Colorado Springs, Colorado.

While at the UN, the delegates will study and observe the UN in action, tour the buildings, listen to behind-the-scenes explanations of various departments and agencies, hear business conducted in the five official languages, have meals in the UN Delegates' Dining Room, and interview representatives of member nations.

They will also visit International House where graduate students from more than 80 countries live under one roof. For the second year the program will feature a day at the 1964-1965 New York World's Fair.

The trip to the UN will be by bus with visits to such places as Washington D. C.; Mount Vernon; Valley Forge; Philadelphia; Gettysburg; Niagara Falls; Ontario, Canada, among others. Three adult leaders will accompany the young people.

SMART THIEF

OAKLAND, Calif. (UPI)—Police said today that Michael Dennis Whitechat, 27, an ex-convict, has found a new way to get caught for bank robbery.

They said Whitechat gave his right name in borrowing a car from a dealer, robbed a bank and then left the holdup note in the car when he returned it.

Boycott of South Africa Being Urged

CAIRO (AP)—The Organization of African Unity's economic commission today urged all African nations to tighten the trade boycott against South Africa for its race segregation policies.

Noting that some African governments had increased trade with South Africa, the commission asked that every measure be taken to make the boycott more effective.

Communist Chinese Ambassador Chen Chia Kang denied a claim by the Kenyan delegation that Red China had increased trade with South Africa during 1963.

PFC Rules on Natural Gas Rate in Wyoming

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Federal Power Commission examiner ruled Friday that some independent producers selling natural gas from fields in Wyoming should be limited to an initial pride of 15.384 rents a thousand cubic feet.

The producers had proposed initial prices ranging from 16.41 cents to 17.5 cents, and have been selling gas at the proposed rates under temporary authorizations granted by the commission between October 1962 and April 1964.

Examiner Harry C. Shriver held that producers should be required to refund excess amounts collected, plus interest at 7 per cent annually.

His decision will become a final commission order if no review is initiated within 40 days.

Involved is gas sold from fields in Fremont, Sweetwater and Sublette counties. The producers are: The Atlantic Refining Co., Dallas; W. S. Kilroy (operator), Houston; and Graham B. Morrison and Glen W. Pryor, trustees, Denver. The gas is sold to Montana-Dakota Utilities Co., Colorado Interstate Gas Co., and El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Boycott of South Africa Being Urged

CAIRO (AP)—The Organization of African Unity's economic commission today urged all African nations to tighten the trade boycott against South Africa for its race segregation policies.

Noting that some African governments had increased trade with South Africa, the commission asked that every measure be taken to make the boycott more effective.

Communist Chinese Ambassador Chen Chia Kang denied a claim by the Kenyan delegation that Red China had increased trade with South Africa during 1963.

PFC Rules on Natural Gas Rate in Wyoming

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Federal Power Commission examiner ruled Friday that some independent producers selling natural gas from fields in Wyoming should be limited to an initial pride of 15.384 rents a thousand cubic feet.

The producers had proposed initial prices ranging from 16.41 cents to 17.5 cents, and have been selling gas at the proposed rates under temporary authorizations granted by the commission between October 1962 and April 1964.

Examiner Harry C. Shriver held that producers should be required to refund excess amounts collected, plus interest at 7 per cent annually.

His decision will become a final commission order if no review is initiated within 40 days.

Involved is gas sold from fields in Fremont, Sweetwater and Sublette counties. The producers are: The Atlantic Refining Co., Dallas; W. S. Kilroy (operator), Houston; and Graham B. Morrison and Glen W. Pryor, trustees, Denver. The gas is sold to Montana-Dakota Utilities Co., Colorado Interstate Gas Co., and El Paso Natural Gas Co.

Fast-Paced LBJ Week Preceded Hospitalization

By FRANCES LEWINE

WASHINGTON (AP) — A fast-paced inaugural week of work, ceremonies and parties preceded President Johnson's entrance into the hospital early Saturday.

Johnson, now suffering from what his doctor described as a "respiratory disease," had refrained from wearing a topcoat during his oath-taking at the Capitol in chill weather Wednesday and stood for almost three hours on the parade reviewing stand in his suit coat and without a hat.

Both places were warmed by electric heaters, but were still cold and drafty. The reviewing stand was cool enough that Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey, standing beside Jihnson, did don his coat and scarf for awhile.

The President also stopped his motorcade returning from the Capitol to hop out on Constitution Avenue and walk briskly over to greet the members of the band from his alma mater, Southwest Texas State College, who were marching in the parade.

He had capped Wednesday's festivities by going to — and dancing at — each of five inaugural balls.

The President, who suffered a heart attack in 1955, had even assisted Margaret Truman Daniel in clambering over the rail of a ballroom box so the daughter of the former president could dance with him at the Mayflower Hotel.

There, he changed partners 10 times, as he danced to old Glenn Miller favorites played by an Air Force Band.

He had been up early to get to 9 a.m. interfaith church services on inaugural day and it was almost 12:30 a.m. when he returned to the White House for the night.

This was almost typical of the entire week for the President, who contends he does not need much sleep and usually rises early.

Johnson was engaged during the early part of the week, working on his inaugural address, the forthcoming budget message and economic reports.

The inaugural whirl began Monday night. In the early evening, the President and Mrs. Johnson drove to the Shoreham and Sheraton Park hotels for brief stops at dinners of the Presidents Club, made up of persons who contributed $1,000 or more to the 1964 campaign.

For the rest of the week he was on the go.

Before he left the last inaugural ball, he jokingly urged everyone not to stay up too late because there was work to be done to get on toward his "Great Society." Johnson confided that he himself planned to be back at work in the White House early.

Evidently he was, and he summoned legislative leaders to the White House to discuss domestic and international affairs with them during the day.

Toward evening, he invited the heads of House committees for an informal get-together in the Executive Mansion. Although the White House said Johnson began to feel the effects of a cold at 4 p.m. Friday, he had scheduled a similar informal discussion of legislative matters with Senate committee chairmen at 5:30 p.m. at the White House.

Even in the hospital, Johnson was still thinking about his inauguration. Word was sent back after 4 a.m. to Reedy's secretary in the White House that the President wanted a precise count of the number of words in his inaugural address.

Air Force's Falcons Cut Down Towering Chiefs, 86-74

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

They say that trouble often breeds unity and the problem-plauged Air Force Academy underlined that fact Saturday night with a jet-smooth performance that toppled towering Oklahoma University 86-74 before 1,550 approving fans at the Cadet Gymnasium.

The cheating scandel which has ravaged the Academy's student population during the past week had definitely not invaded the basketball forces as late as Saturday. While a heavy Cadet turnout roared in appreciation, jacked-up sagging prestige with an almost flawless performance that reduced Oklahoma City's hearalded heighth to just so much ineffective machinery.

The Air Force, ignoring the Chiefs' skyscraping front line, took charge of the backboards from the opening tip and bombarded the visitors with a spectacular display of outcourt shooting that had buried Oklahoma City beneath an almost insurmountable deficit before halftime.

With four Air Force marksmen splitting the nets for double figures, the Falcons junked their patented ball control game and ripped apart the ragged Oklahoma City defense with a running attack that had the gangling Chiefs dizzy from just attempting to follow the flight of the ball. Swift Pete Hugdahl, possibly the finest trigger man the Air Force has had for its sparely-used fast break, sliced up the sagging Chiefs with bulls-eye passes as the Falcons flashed in for one easy goal after another in the early minutes.

When Hugdahl was not firing his crowd-pleasing feeds, the Air Force was pounding the Oklahoma City defense with a deadly display of shooting from outcourt. Sam Peshut, Scott Etnyre, Ed Sullivan, and Fred Budinger all held heavy hands in this phase of the warfare with Peshut eventually leading the scorers with 20 points. Etnyre finished with 19 and Budinger and Sullivan had 18 apiece.

Included in the blitz was a leathal display from the free throw line by Budinger and Peshut. The former dropped 10 and 11 attempts and Peshut contributed 12 of 14.

Oklahoma City's lengthy frontliners rattled the rims with a whopping 81 shot attempts but the well-drilled Falcons overcame a sizeable edge in that department with their sizzling display of accuracy. The Air Force converted 52.6 per cent of its 57 tried while the Chiefs were connecting only 35.8. In addition the Cadets turned with a surprising 48-47 edge on the backboards, a result of intense hustle and cleverly-executed position.

Jerry Wells, a midget 6-1 guard in the Chiefs' arsenal of big men, led a three-pronged Oklahoma City attack with 21 points. Charlie "Big Game" Hunter, a clever 6-5 forward who gave the Falcons no end of trouble, had 18 as did Jim War. But 7-0 Eddie Jackson and 6-10 Gary Hape were little more than ornaments as the smaller Falcons whizzed by on their way to one of the season's sweetest victories.

The crowd, which had come to cheer, had few anxious moments as the Falcons wrested control of the backboards at the start and sped on the way to a commanding lead in the first few minutes of action. The Chiefs had a brief 5-2 advantage with less than two minutes gone before the Falcons tucked away nine straight points in a burst that all but decided it. Peshut contributed the first bucket in that barrage and then knotted the score with a free throw before Etnyre took a feed from Budinger and deposited the go-ahead points. Hugdahl and Sullivan followed with jumpers from outcourt and the Falcons were on their way.

Another seven point spree after a Wells jump shot spurted the Air Force into an 18-7 lead with 14:27 to go in the first half and still another seven point burst several minutes later bounced the home club into a 15

Finger of Suspicion

At least in this region, nearly everything else has been pushed into the background by the cheating scandal at the Air Force Academy and the speculation that many of the football players and other athletes on the Falcons teams may be involved.

Also in the Dark

There was a lot of guesswork going on since the Academy first made public early in the week that exam materials had been illegally obtained by a group of the cadets. And it pretty well came to a head on Saturday when the Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert made an official announcment from Washington to the effect that more than 100 cadets are in on the cribbing and that "about 30" were on the football team..

This confirmed the estimate from some people close to the AFA this week, but there are few other details coming from the closed-mouth officials at the newest military academy in this country. If true, and there is no reason to doubt the word of Zuckert, it would nearly equal the similar scandal that floored the Army football team back in 1951 when 43 members of the squad were kicked out of school.

Of course, not all of those who face the decision at the Air Academy of court martial or resignation for cheating will be directly in on the ring that was stealing and selling examination material. Under the "honor system" code, even those who knew about it and didn't report it will be just as guilty.

Naturally it's a cloak-and-dagger affair right now, as the investigation is still in progress, but what of it after all the facts are known? The latest word is that the Academy will not announce the names of those involved because it is the normal routine not to devulge names of anyone who leaves the AFA for any reason.

This is hardly a "normal" situation, however.

If the Air Force Academy really believes in the honesty it preaches, then why not give out the names of those involved—or at least the athletes, and from the general reaction to this whole thing there is little concern over 70 or so cheaters who weren't athletes.

They must know that sooner or later the names will be found out. It's a simple operation to check the rosters of last year against those who will be still around when spring practice starts (if enough are still available) or at the start of regular practice next fall. Otherwise, anyone missing will be under the finger of suspicion.

If nothing else, the AFA should try to protect the innocent. There will be no easy way out of this and I think they would be better off coming clean with the public. If memory serves, the football players booted from the Army team back in 1951 were made known.

As is, only wild guesses could be made for the Academy is adamant on whithholding the names of the guilty—for even those 29 who have already resigned. Even Coach Ben Martin says he has no idea of which of his football players are involved, although he may have a pretty good idea for the intimacy of the sport has a way of bringing out the true nature of any man.

It's hard to tell who may have cried or knew about the illegal exam info. It could be someone trying to squeeze through and barely passing, or someone trying any method of getting the highest possible marks, or even a cadet getting mediocre grades but figuring this is an easy way out of the labor it takes to get through the rugged curriculum.

Just setting things straight, the service academies like Air Force and Army aren't the only schools that get tangled in this sort of mess. It happens just about every year at any major higher educational institution in the country. You just don't hear about most of those.

That is not to say it's excusable by any means. It's deplorable that men—and I use the word advisedly—will cheat on their colleagues whether it be in the classroom, business, politics or everyday living. Only in love and war the cliche tells us, and I guess at the Academy they are supposed to be learning one of these specialities—and some of the young gals in the area aren't sure which.

If you would check at most any unversity there could be found fat files on most of the examinations given. And like the cadets who reportedly were charging their classmates for the information, usually in other schools it takes a fee like fraternity dues for the inside scoop.

One reason there's little ballyhoo about other schools is that they are generally not so widespread. And a reason for this is that the honor of their "honor system" usually doesn't absorb those who are just in the know. If another school had 100 or more given their walking papers they too would make the headlines.

Still, unless athletes were involved, there would be little excitement caused. For the non-athletic classroom type, other than the parents and close friends, everyone else could care less whether he stays in school or not. But that's not so for those who are publicly defending the colors of the alma mater or providing the nation's favorite entertainment.

It's also only speculation as to how this will effect the future

Michigan Sweeps Series From CC

NCAA Champs Win in Comeback

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

Another come-from-behind effort by the defending NCAA champions from the University of Michigan earned them a sweep of their Western Collegiate Hockey Association two-game series with Colorado College Saturday night at the Broadmoor World Arena.

The Wolverines of the Big Ten Conference scored a pair of goals within 43 seconds early in the third period to break a 1-1 tie and then they added still another on an open CC net in the last minute of play when the Tigers pulled their goalie.

The 4-1 triumph for Michigan, coupled with Friday night's 7-5 verdict over the Tigers, gave the Wolverines an even 4-4 record in WCHA games thus far in the season. That moved them into a knot with Minnesota and Michigan State for third place in the standings.

It was CC's fifth loss is five league games and Coach Bob Johnson's Bengals continue to hug the bottom of the standings. Overall, CC has a 6-9 mark and Michigan stands at 10-5-1 for the entire season.

A 40-foot screen shot by Barry MacDonald gave the Wolverines the lead with more than 15 minutes still to be played. Then 43 seconds later little Mel Wakabayashi gave Michigan a two-goal cushion, and the final tally by Wilfred Martin came at the 19:43 mark of the third period on the naked net.

In the only other league games of Saturday evening saw Denver and Michigan Tech battle to a 3-3 overtime tie after Tech had captured Friday's game 3-2, and Minnesota evened its series with Michigan State with a 6-5 win over State had won Friday's contest 7-5.

For a second straight night the two usually explosive offensive teams sparred with each other in a duel of defense for the first two periods. And again the penalties were far less frequent than the obvious violations from both sides as referee Frank Larson grudgingly called but three penalties through the first 40 minutes.

The Tigers took the initial lead, just as they had done in Friday's series opener, and they would have had a shutout going except for a second period glaring mistake by goalie Bill Howard.

Centerman Warren Foydyce put the Tigers ahead in the first chapter on a deflect at the corner of the Michigan net with just 4:35 left to play. Linemate Bob Magie sent a high shot toward the goal, and Fordyce's tip-in bounced in off goalie Greg Page's pads.

That was it for the first period, although each team had several good chances with CC's best shot at increasing the margin coming in the last minutes of the period with Michigan shorthanded via the first penalty.

The Wolverines had a similar opportunity two minutes deep in the second period with the Tigers detected for holding. The Tiger defense stood up well and near the end of the penalty CC's Bob Lindberg broke out on a solo rush despite his team being short, but his point blank shot was stopped on a great save.

Then with 8:32 past in the period, Michigan got the tying goal—although at least part credit had to go to the CC goal tender. The Wolverines' Dean Lucier banged in a slap shot from 50 feet, and the puck seemed headed wide of the goal. But Howard came to the edge of the cage and the disc bounced off his stick and right into the net. No one was even close to the goal cage at the time besides Howard.

The teams continued to dual on even terms through the rest of the period with the defense holding each other at bay. On one occasion, though, the Tigers were on the lucky side as Michigan had a clear shot at the goal with Howard flat on his back and two other players lying in the crease, but the puck was hit right into the goalie's pads and fell back harmless.

With 4:26 gone in the third period, Michigan took the lead for the first time in the game. MacDonald blazed in a long slap that was screened from goalie Howard and it sailed into the opposite side of the net on the left side.

Then, less than a minute later and before the Tigers had a chance to recover from the last one, stubby winger Wakabayashi put in the clincher. This time the CC goalie was down flat on the ice after making a stop, and the Wolverine forward lifted the puck over his body on a backhand flip and went into the open upper half of the net.

CC put on a furious drive in the closing minutes in what turned into a rough and somewhat ragged ending to the game, but they were unable to get in the needed two goals. And with 17 seconds left, Michigan scored its final tally with Martin hitting an open net with the CC pulling its goalie in an effort to get an extra forward on the ice.

Next Friday and Saturday nights Colorado College takes on bitter rival Denver University in a home-and-home series with the first of the set at the Broadmoor World Arena and Saturday's followup in the DU Arena. The two Colorado teams will be battling to get out of the cellar in the WCHA, but near sell-out crowds are expected both nights.

Japanese Grapplers Dominate Match With Team From Wasson-Palmer

By CURT KRAUSHAAR

The Japanese wrestlers garnered seven out of eight matches while the Springs wrestlers took only one decision.

The Wasson matmen, coached by George Kalber, wrestled the four lower weights and the four Palmer-men, under the supervision of Glenn Bragg, had the four heavier positions.

Mike Risk, Palmer's 168 pounder, was the only Colorado Springs wrestler to win a bout. He scored a 4-1 decision over his Japanese opponent Yoshito Ito.

The Japanese matmen won the first seven of the eight matches. They received out-standing performances from Ken Nakamura, Suji Yamagata, and Noboru Nakamura, all of whom scored pins.

The T-Bird-Terror team received an outstanding performance from Wasson's Jim Ranals who lost a hard-fought 3-1 decision to Takashi Watanabe. Archie Martinez was also a standout in his bout with Japan's 130 pound Koji Shihaki. Martinez lost by a score of 4-0.

The Japanese squad decisioned the first three matches and pinned the next three to put the match well out of reach of the T-Bird-Terror squad.

The Japanese squad is scheduled for another dual match on their Colorado tour when they journey to Golden Monday night

Tribe Trims Miners

TRINIDAD — Palmer played a stalling game for most of the second half Saturday night and came away with a 39-33 South Central League victory over Trinidad's Miners.

The revamped Terror squad gave a good account of itself the first half, but lost John Knudsen on fouls with 3:48 left in the second period. To that point Knudsen had scored ten points and had 11 rebounds.

The Terrors couldn't keep pace with the outside sets off Miner hands and went into its half-court stall at 4:38 of the third quarter, staying in it the rest of the way.

Palmer had fashioned a 20-15 halftime lead on the work of Knudsen and sophomore Ron Travis, playing his first varsity game. Travis had 10 points, with Knudsen the high point man for Palmer, and hauled off six rebounds.

The Terrors fired well from the field, getting 36 per cent of its shots through the ropes. They sank 61 per cent of their free throws. Trinidad could hit only 18 per cent of its field shots.

Coach Roger O'Neil felt his team performed well in the first half, noting that his wide stall also worked nicely against the less-talented Miners.

Palmer pulled its SCL record up to an even 2-2 mark and brought its overall mark to 5-5. It was the lowest total shot by a Terror team this year.

Trinidad lost its fifth SCL outing.

Air Force's Falcons Cut Down Towering Chiefs, 86-74

By TOM CUSHMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

They say that trouble often breeds unity and the problem-plauged Air Force Academy underlined that fact Saturday night with a jet-smooth performance that toppled towering Oklahoma University 86-74 before 1,550 approving fans at the Cadet Gymnasium.

The cheating scandel which has ravaged the Academy's student population during the past week had definitely not invaded the basketball forces as late as Saturday. While a heavy Cadet turnout roared in appreciation, jacked-up sagging prestige with an almost flawless performance that reduced Oklahoma City's hearalded heighth to just so much ineffective machinery.

The Air Force, ignoring the Chiefs' skyscraping front line, took charge of the backboards from the opening tip and bombarded the visitors with a spectacular display of outcourt shooting that had buried Oklahoma City beneath an almost insurmountable deficit before halftime.

With four Air Force marksmen splitting the nets for double figures, the Falcons junked their patented ball control game and ripped apart the ragged Oklahoma City defense with a running attack that had the gangling Chiefs dizzy from just attempting to follow the flight of the ball. Swift Pete Hugdahl, possibly the finest trigger man the Air Force has had for its sparely-used fast break, sliced up the sagging Chiefs with bullseye passes as the Falcons flashed in for one easy goal after another in the early minutes.

When Hugdahl was not firing his crowd-pleasing feeds, the Air Force was pounding the Oklahoma City defense with a deadly display of shooting from outcourt. Sam Peshut, Scott Etnyre, Ed Sullivan, and Fred Budinger all held heavy hands in this phase of the warfare with Peshut eventually leading the scorers with 20 points. Etnyre finished with 19 and Budinger and Sullivan had 18 apiece.

Included in the blitz was a leathal display from the free throw line by Budinger and Peshut. The former dropped 10 and 11 attempts and Peshut contributed 12 of 14.

Oklahoma City's lengthy frontliners rattled the rims with a whopping 81 shot attempts but the well-drilled Falcons overcame a sizeable edge in that department with their sizzling display of accuracy. The Air Force converted 52.6 per cent of its 57 tried while the Chiefs were connecting only 35.8. In addition the Cadets turned with a surprising 48-47 edge on the backboards, a result of intense hustle and cleverly-executed position.

Jerry Wells, a midget 6-1 guard in the Chiefs' arsenal of big men, led a three-pronged Oklahoma City attack with 21 points. Charlie "Big Game" Hunter, a clever 6-5 forward who gave the Falcons no end of trouble, had 18 as did Jim War. But 7-0 Eddie Jackson and 6-10 Gary Hape were little more than ornaments as the smaller Falcons whizzed by on their way to one of the season's sweetest victories.

The crowd, which had come to cheer, had few anxious moments as the Falcons wrested control of the backboards at the start and sped on the way to a commanding lead in the first few minutes of action. The Chiefs had a brief 5-2 advantage with less than two minutes gone before the Falcons tucked away nine straight points in a burst that all but decided it. Peshut contributed the first bucket in that barrage and then knotted the score with a free throw before Etnyre took a feed from Budinger and deposited the go-ahead points. Hugdahl and Sullivan followed with jumpers from outcourt and the Falcons were on their way.

Another seven point spree after a Wells jump shot spurted the Air Force into an 18-7 lead with 14:27 to go in the first half and still another seven point burst several minutes later bounced the home club into a 15

NCAA Champs Win in Comeback

By LOY HOLMAN
Gazette Telegraph Sports Editor

Another come-from-behind effort by the defending NCAA champions from the University of Michigan earned them a sweep of their Western Collegiate Hockey Association two-game series with Colorado College Saturday night at the Broadmoor World Arena.

The Wolverines of the Big Ten Conference scored a pair of goals within 43 seconds early in the third period to break a 1-1 tie and then they added still another on an open CC net in the last minute of play when the Tigers pulled their goalie.

The 4-1 triumph for Michigan, coupled with Friday night's 7-5 verdict over the Tigers, gave the Wolverines an even 4-4 record in WCHA games thus far in the season. That moved them into a knot with Minnesota and Michigan State for third place in the standings.

It was CC's fifth loss is five league games and Coach Bob Johnson's Bengals continue to hug the bottom of the standings. Overall, CC has a 6-9 mark and Michigan stands at 10-5-1 for the entire season.

A 40-foot screen shot by Barry MacDonald gave the Wolverines the lead with more than 15 minutes still to be played. Then 43 seconds later little Mel Wakabayashi gave Michigan a two-goal cushion, and the final tally by Wilfred Martin came at the 19:43 mark of the third period on the naked net.

In the only other league games of Saturday evening saw Denver and Michigan Tech battle to a 3-3 overtime tie after Tech had captured Friday's game 3-2, and Minnesota evened its series with Michigan State with a 6-5 win over State had won Friday's contest 7-5.

For a second straight night the two usually explosive offensive teams sparred with each other in a duel of defense for the first two periods. And again the penalties were far less frequent than the obvious violations from both sides as referee Frank Larson grudgingly called but three penalties through the first 40 minutes.

The Tigers took the initial lead, just as they had done in Friday's series opener, and they would have had a shutout going except for a second period glaring mistake by goalie Bill Howard.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Finger of Suspicion

At least in this region, nearly everything else has been pushed into the background by the cheating scandal at the Air Force Academy and the speculation that many of the football players and other athletes on the Falcons teams may be involved.

There was a lot of guesswork going on since the Academy first made public early in the week that exam materials had been illegally obtained by a group of the cadets. And it pretty well came to a head on Saturday when the Secretary of the Air Force Eugene M. Zuckert made an official announcement from Washington to the effect that more than 100 cadets are in on the cribbing and that "about 30" were on the football team..

This confirmed the estimate from some people close to the AFA this week, but there are few other details coming from the closed-mouth officials at the newest military academy in this country. If true, and there is no reason to doubt the word of Zuckert, it would nearly equal the similar scandal that floored the Army football team back in 1951 when 43 members of the squad were kicked out of school.

Of course, not all of those who face the decision at the Air Academy of court martial or resignation for cheating will be directly in on the ring that was stealing and selling examination material. Under the "honor system" code, even those who knew about it and didn't report it will be just as guilty.

Naturally it's a cloak-and-dagger affair right now, as the investigation is still in progress, but what of it after all the facts are known? The latest word is that the Academy will not announce the names of those involved because it is the normal routine not to devulge names of anyone who leaves the AFA for any reason.

This is hardly a "normal" situation, however.

If the Air Force Academy really believes in the honesty it preaches, then why not give out the names of those involved—or at least the athletes, and from the general reaction to this whole thing there is little concern over 70 or so cheaters who weren't athletes.

They must know that sooner or later the names will be found out. It's a simple operation to check the rosters of last year against those who will be still around when spring practice starts (if enough are still available) or at the start of regular practice next fall. Otherwise, anyone missing will be under the finger of suspicion.

If nothing else, the AFA should try to protect the innocent. There will be no easy way out of this and I think they would be better off coming clean with the public. If memory serves, the football players booted from the Army team back in 1951 were made known.

As is, only wild guesses could be made for the Academy is adamant on whithholding the names of the guilty—for even those 29 who have already resigned. Even Coach Ben Martin says he has no idea of which of his football players are involved, although he may have a pretty good idea for the intimacy of the sport has a way of bringing out the true nature of any guy.

It's hard to tell who may have cited or know about the Illegal exam info. It could be someone trying to squeeze through and barely passing, or someone trying any method of getting the highest possible marks, or even a cadet getting mediocre grades but figuring this is an easy way out of the labor it takes to get through the rugged curriculum.

Just setting things straight, the service academies like Air Force and Army aren't the only schools that get tangled in this sort of mess. It happens just about every year at any major higher educational institution in the country. You just don't hear about most of those.

That is not to say it's excusable by any means. It's deplorable that men—and I use the word advisedly—will cheat on their colleagues whether it be in the classroom, business, politics or everyday living. Only in love and war the cliche tells us, and I guess at the Academy they are supposed to be learning one of these specialities—and some of the young gals in the area aren't sure which.

If you would check at most any unversity there could be found fat files on most of the examinations given. And like the cadets who reportedly were charging their classmates for the information, usually in other schools it takes a fee like fraternity dues for the inside scoop.

One reason there's little ballyhoo about other schools is that they are generally not so widespread. And a reason for this is that the honor of their "honor system" usually doesn't absorb those who are just in the know. If another school had 100 or more given their walking papers they too would make the headlines.

Still, unless athletes were involved, there would be little excitement caused. For the non-athletic classroom type, other than the parents and close friends, everyone else could care less whether he stays in school or not. But that's not so for those who are publicly defending the colors of the alma mater or providing the nation's favorite entertainment.

It's also only speculation as to how this will effect the future

76ers Stop Celtics

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The Philadelphia 76ers, stiffling a late Boston rally, stopped the Celtics' 16-game winning streak 104-100 Saturday night in the National Basketball Association.

The loss kept the Celtics from tying an NBA record of 17 consecutive victories, set by the Washington Capitols in 1946 and tied by the Celtics in 1959. Red Auerbach, the Celtics' present coach, coached both teams at the time they won 17 straight.

Against the 76ers, though, he only could sit by and watch a desperate Boston rally, sparked by Sam Jones, fall short.

Down 90-82 in the fourth quarter, the Celtics got three jump shots from Jones and two free throws from John Havlicek, cutting the 76ers' margin to 93-90 with 5:18 to play.

But Lucious Jackson's four free throws and Wilt Chamberlain's jumper off set two more field goals by Jones and put Philadelphia ahead 99-94. The Celtics got no closer than three points the rest of the way.

Japanese Grapplers Dominate Match With Team From Wasson-Palmer

By CURT KRAUSHAAR

The Japanese wrestlers garnered seven out of eight matches while the Springs wrestlers took only one decision.

The Wasson matmen, coached by George Kalber, wrestled the four lower weights and the four Palmer-men, under the supervision of Glenn Bragg, had the four heavier positions.

Mike Risk, Palmer's 168 pounder, was the only Colorado Springs wrestler to win a bout. He scored a 4-1 decision over his Japanese opponent Yoshito Ito.

The Japanese matmen won the first seven of the eight matches. They received out-standing performances from Ken Nakamura, Suji Yamagata, and Noboru Nakamura, all of whom scored pins.

The T-Bird-Terror team received an outstanding performance from Wasson's Jim Ranals who lost a hard-fought 3-1 decision to Takashi Watanabe. Archie Martinez was also a standout in his bout with Japan's 130 pound Koji Shihaki. Martinez lost by a score of 4-0.

The Japanese squad decisioned the first three matches and pinned the next three to put the match well out of reach of the T-Bird-Terror squad.

The Japanese squad is scheduled for another dual match on their Colorado tour when they journey to Golden Monday night

Tribe Trims Miners

TRINIDAD — Palmer played a stalling game for most of the second half Saturday night and came away with a 39-33 South Central League victory over Trinidad's Miners.

The revamped Terror squad gave a good account of itself the first half, but lost John Knudsen on fouls with 3:48 left in the second period. To that point Knudsen had scored ten points and had 11 rebounds.

The Terrors couldn't keep pace with the outside sets off Miner hands and went into its half-court stall at 4:38 of the third quarter, staying in it the rest of the way.

Palmer had fashioned a 20-15 halftime lead on the work of Knudsen and sophomore Ron Travis, playing his first varsity game. Travis had 10 points, with Knudsen the high point man for Palmer, and hauled off six rebounds.

The Terrors fired well from the field, getting 36 per cent of its shots through the ropes. They sank 61 per cent of their free throws. Trinidad could hit only 18 per cent of its field shots.

Coach Roger O'Neil felt his team performed well in the first half, noting that his wide stall also worked nicely against the less-talented Miners.

Palmer pulled its SCL record up to an even 3-3 mark and brought its overall mark to 5-5. It was the lowest total shot by a Terror team this year.

Trinidad lost its fifth SCL outing.

Michigan Bombs Purdue in Big 10

By BERNIE KENNEDY
Associated Press Sports Writer

ANN ARBOR (AP) — Michigan broke open a tight game midway through the first half and raced to a 103-84 Big Ten basketball victory over Purdue Saturday.

The Wolverines, in scoring their third straight conference victory without a loss, knocked the Boilermakers out of second place.

The second-ranked Wolverines were placed by Oliver Darden, who turned in his best game as a collegian in scoring 27 points.

Darden spearheaded Michigan's first half surge, scoring nine of the team's first 15 points and ending up with 17 in the first 20 minutes as the Wolverines took a 51-38 halftime lead.

Purdue kept the contest close until Cazzie Russell, The Big Ten scoring leader, got his first basket just past the midpoint of the first half. That gave the Wolverines a 21-18 lead and they went on from there to lead by as many as 15 points.

Dave Schellhase, Purdue's scoring ace and second to Russell in league scoring, was held to 15 points. Bill Jones was high for the losers with 23 points while Bob Purkhiser added 19.

of the Air Force Academy. But anytime a team loses the service of some 30 players it's bound to be felt. It certainly was at Army after '51, and for years afterward.

Until the actual players involved are known, it's hard to tell how the AFA team—or teams—will fare. It depends on who they are.

Some of the reported 30 off the football squad could be among the 21 seniors on last fall's varsity squad who have already finished their eligibility. Also on that varsity list, however, were 17 juniors and 15 sophomores who are to form the nucleus of the Falcons' team for the next two years.

It could be that some are also among this year's freshman class, and if so this could cause a void for the next three years. Some may have never made the varsity anyway, however. Or they could also come from the Junior Varsity squad which numbered around 40, and for the most part were juniors and sophomores counted on to fill several of the vacancies to be created by graduation of seniors on the varsity.

No matter who they are, there is bound to be a huge hole in the squad come this spring . . . even though we may have to wait until then to name names. But perhaps the greatest blow to the Academy athletics will be over the next couple years when coaches attempt to recruit. This is definitely a black mark that will be difficult to erase and only time will do the job, as in the case of Army.

Those rather sketchy official reports say that none of the AFA's coaching staff—in football or otherwise—were in on the cheating. However, with a rather bleak future ahead it could definitely influence those who may be making a decision to stay or look for greener pastures in the fickle field of athletic leadership.

Harrison, Academy Tie for WRL Lead

Panthers Slip Past Gladiators

By BOB HUTTON

A thrill - packed second half rally by Coach Gary Richardson's Widefield five fell one point short of giving the Gladiators an upset victory over touted Harrison in Will Rogers League action at the Colorado Springs City Auditorium Saturday night.

The Panthers, who had scored 78 points in defeating Canon City on Friday, managed only 37 tallies while allowing their opponents a nearly fatal 36.

Careless passes and violations cost the winners the ball more than 20 times during the evening as an alert Widefield defense snared numerous stray tosses. The victory was a crucial one for the Panthers, who are now tied with Academy High at the top of the WRL. The latter team edged Cheyenne Mountain 69-65 to leave the Indians 2-2 in league competition, one and a half games behind the leaders, who now boast 3-0 records.

Widefield, now 0-3, was forced to join Canon City in the conference cellar. The Gladiators' latest defeat was especially hard to take since they had suffered two other close losses in previous league tilts. Only six points in excess of their total have been scored by their three WRL opponents.

Neither team hit the basket with any consistency, resulting in shooting averages of only about 30 per cent. Free throws contributed more than one-third of each team's total points.

Harrison's Eddie Hook opened the scoring with a bucket 30 seconds into the first period, but Widefield had raced to a 9-4 advantage with four minutes showing on the clock.

The Panthers, however, sank five baskets, two of which came from game-high scorer Mike Obert, in the last three minutes of the quarter to take a 17-14 first stanza lead.

The game appeared to be well on its way to the expected Harrison victory by halftime as the Gladiators attempted 12 field goals, none of which found their target. The Widefield club thus managed only three points from the free throw line while their opponents were adding nine tallies to their first quarter total.

The beginning of the second half thus saw the Glads facing a 26-17 deficit. This time, however, it was the Panthers who found the hoop evasive, hitting only two of 15 attempts. Widefield pumped the net for four of 11 shots and gained three points on their foes going into the final stanza.

Still sporting a six point lead, Harrison's roundballers were less cautious than proved safe. The Gladiators picked off several passes and controlled the ball to get the good shot. Two buckets and a charity toss trimmed the margin to 33-32 with 4:15 left.

The Panthers refused to be overtaken, however, and expanded their advantage to 37-32 with just over two minutes remaining in the game. The Glads used all five of their time outs in the last period — apparently to considerable benefit.

Using their last time out, the Gladiators planned their strategy. They had fifteen seconds left and attempted several shots, but could not find the goal as their hopes were cancelled by the final buzzer.

Cheyenne, Castle Rock Net Mat Wins

Castle Rock defeated Fountain, 32-18.

In the Cheyenne - Widefield match, the Indians' heavyweight Marty Stafanic pulled out the victory when he decisioned Widefield's Roy Hagan, 4-2, in the final match.

Fountain's Don Synder, Doug Stanley and Mike Watkins defeated their Castle Rock opponents via pin falls.

Unbeaten T-Bird Swim Team Tops Denver South

Despite the fact that South's Tom Chamberlain established two new pool records, the T-Birds overwhelmed their northern visitors. Chamberlain broke the 200-Yard Freestyle when he was clocked 1:54.8 and the Denver South tanker broke Bruce Teschner's 10—Yard Freestyle record by posting a time of 51.9. The old mark by Teschner was 53.7.

The T-Birds journey to Denver this Saturday for a relay meet which will draw 12 teams at the George Washington High School pool.

After winning his first five racts, Hempen ran 10th and last in the Garden State.

Blanchard Battles Tribe on Boards

By MORRIS FRASER
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Air Academy High's platoon system got its test Saturday night and passed by only four hard-earned points, 69-65, over Cheyenne Mountain. The Kadets thus set up a battle for the Will Rogers League lead Friday night against Harrison.

Both Harrison and Air Academy have 3-0 league records.

Cheyenne played a game of catch-up during the second period, made it in the third quarter and worked valiantly but futilly the last period to gain its third WRL win.

Tony Blanchard, tallest player for the Big Blue, turned in an outstanding rebounding game against Cheyenne board aces Ron Graham and Bill Massarand. Blanchard had 14 rebounds, 11 in the second half which finally turned the tide in AAH's favor.

The Kadets shot out to a 19-10 first quarter lead and bottled Cheyenne's big men almost entirely. But Massarand broke loose on three fast breaks the second period and carried the Indians as close as 26-24 before AAH coach John Delventhal could replace his second five. The half ended, 32-28, for the Kadets as Vance Wilson and Blanchard hit cushion buckets.

Cheyenne finally tied the count, 34-34, with slightly more than two minutes gone in the second half. But the Kadets pulled out in the final 2:37.

Cheyenne came back strong in the last eight minutes to tie the score, 53-53, on a pair of free throws by Dick Miller. Scott McLeod, hitting all of his five buckets in the last quarter, started the see-saw rocking on a fast break. The score was tied successively at 55-55, 57-57, and 59-59, before McLeod hit the go-ahead bucket on a 30-foot shot.

Bert Spear hit on a drive to bring the Big Blue within one piont at 62-61 before McLeod hit his final bucket for a three-point Cheyenne lead. Spear dropped in another bucket and Blanchard took a rebound off a Spear shot and laid it back up, sending the Kadets ahead, 65-64, with 2:15 left. Mark Baker added a keyhole jumper to pull two points out at 67-65.

AAH went into a stall at 1:18, but lost it on a traveling violation. But Cheyenne threw the ball out of bounds and the Kadets took it back and held on until Mike Gibbs fired in a lay-up unchallenged.

Massarand, mainly on his rebounding and fast break ability, earned high points honors with 19 markers. Graham, stymied almost entirely the first half by an aggressive defense, had 14.

Blanchard and Spear each had 14 points for the home - standing victors.

Losing Cage Team Scores 748 Points

LAKEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The basketball game went into overtime, but the victors gave the losers a shellacking they won't soon forget — 928 to 748.

Then the 10 Lakewood High School students went home and soaked their feet. They had played for 12 straight hours.

Wayne Caley, 16, captain of the winning team, said he and the other nine hit upon the marathon game after hearing about a 10-hour stint in Ohio.

"We wanted to show the older generation that some of the kids today aren't so soft," he said.

The boys started at 7 p.m.. Friday night, took a 15-minute "halftime" at 1 a.m. and finished the game at 7 a.m.. Saturday. No substitutions were allowed.

OVER THERE COACH — George Janzen, an official from the Denver area, points out a suggested seat on the bench for Oklahoma City coach, Abe Lemons during the Air Force battle with the Chiefs Saturday night. Lemons, who was unhappy with the officiating during much of the contest, eventually drew a technical when his protests grew a little strong. He still was unhappy at the conclusion as his club suffered an 86-74 setback at the hands of the hot-shoot-Falcons. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

Harrison, Academy Tie for WRL Lead

Michigan Bombs Purdue in Big 10

By BERNIE KENNEDY
Associated Press Sports Writer

ANN ARBOR (AP) — Michigan broke open a tight game midway through the first half and raced to a 103-84 Big Ten basketball victory over Purdue Saturday.

The Wolverines, in scoring their third straight conference victory without a loss, knocked the Boilermakers out of second place.

The second-ranked Wolverines were placed by Oliver Darden, who turned in his best game as a collegian in scoring 27 points.

Darden spearheaded Michigan's first half surge, scoring nine of the team's first 15 points and ending up with 17 in the first 20 minutes as the Wolverines took a 51-38 halftime lead.

Purdue kept the contest close until Cazzie Russell, The Big Ten scoring leader, got his first basket just past the midpoint of the first half. That gave the Wolverines a 21-18 lead and they went on from there to lead by as many as 15 points.

Bill Buntin trailed Darden in scoring for Michigan with 20 points while Russell chipped in 18.

Dave Schellhase, Purdue's scoring ace and second to Russell in league scoring, was held to 15 points. Bill Jones was high for the losers with 23 points while Bob Purkhiser added 19.

Panthers Slip Past Gladiators

By BOB HUTTON

A thrill - packed second half rally by Coach Gary Richardson's Widefield five fell one point short of giving the Gladiators an upset victory over touted Harrison in Will Rogers League action at the Colorado Springs City Auditorium Saturday night.

The Panthers, who had scored 78 points in defeating Canon City on Friday, managed only 37 tallies while allowing their opponents a nearly fatal 36.

Careless passes and violations cost the winners the ball more than 20 times during the evening as an alert Widefield defense snared numerous stray tosses. The victory was a crucial one for the Panthers, who are now tied with Academy High at the top of the WRL. The latter team edged Cheyenne Mountain 69-65 to leave the Indians 2-2 in league competition, one and a half games behind the leaders, who now boast 3-0 records.

Widefield, now 0-3, was forced to join Canon City in the conference cellar. The Gladiators' latest defeat was especially hard to take since they had suffered two other close losses in previous league tilts. Only six points in excess of their total have been scored by their three WRL opponents.

Neither team hit the basket with any consistency, resulting in shooting averages of only about 30 per cent. Free throws contributed more than one-third of each team's total points.

Harrison's Eddie Hook opened the scoring with a bucket 30 seconds into the first period, but Widefield had raced to a 9-4 advantage with four minutes showing on the clock.

The Panthers, however, sank five baskets, two of which came from game-high scorer Mike Obert, in the last three minutes of the quarter to take a 17-14 first stanza lead.

The game appeared to be well on its way to the expected Harrison victory by halftime as the Gladiators attempted 12 field goals, none of which found their target. The Widefield club thus managed only three points from the free throw line while their opponents were adding nine tallies to their first quarter total.

The beginning of the second half thus saw the Glads facing a 26-17 deficit. This time, however, it was the Panthers who found the hoop evasive, hitting only two of 15 attempts. Widefield pumped the net for four of 11 shots and gained three points on their foes going into the final stanza.

Still sporting a six point lead, Harrison's roundballers were less cautious than proved safe. The Gladiators picked off several passes and controlled the ball to get the good shot. Two buckets and a charity toss trimmed the margin to 33-32 with 4:15 left.

The Panthers refused to be overtaken, however, and expanded their advantage to 37-32 with just over two minutes remaining in the game. The Glads used all five of their time outs in the last period — apparently to considerable benefit.

Using their last time out, the Gladiators planned their strategy. They had fifteen seconds left and attempted several shots, but could not find the goal as their hopes were cancelled by the final buzzer.

Blanchard Battles Tribe on Boards

By MORRIS FRASER
Gazette Telegraph Sports Writer

Air Academy High's platoon system got its test Saturday night and passed by only four hard-earned points, 69-65, over Cheyenne Mountain. The Kadets thus set up a battle for the Will Rogers League lead Friday night against Harrison.

Both Harrison and Air Academy have 3-0 league records.

Cheyenne played a game of catch-up during the second period, made it in the third quarter and worked valiantly but futilely the last period to gain its third WRL win.

Tony Blanchard, tallest player for the Big Blue, turned in an outstanding rebounding game against Cheyenne board aces Ron Graham and Bill Massarand. Blanchard had 14 rebounds, 11 in the second half which finally turned the tide in AAH's favor.

The Kadets shot out to a 19-10 first quarter lead and bottled Cheyenne's big men almost entirely. But Massarand broke loose on three fast breaks the second period and carried the Indians as close as 26-24 before AAH coach John Delventhal could replace his second five. The half ended, 32-28, for the Kadets as Vance Wilson and Blanchard hit cushion buckets.

Cheyenne finally tied the count, 34-34, with slightly more than two minutes gone in the second half. But the Kadets pulled out in the final 2:37.

Cheyenne came back strong in the last eight minutes to tie the score, 53-53, on a pair of free throws by Dick Miller. Scott McLeod, hitting all of his five buckets in the last quarter, started the see-saw rocking on a fast break. The score was tied successively at 55-55, 57-57, and 59-59, before McLeod hit the go-ahead bucket on a 30-foot shot.

Bert Spear hit on a drive to bring the Big Blue within one piont at 62-61 before McLeod hit his final bucket for a three-point Cheyenne lead. Spear dropped in another bucket and Blanchard took a rebound off a Spear shot and laid it back up, sending the Kadets ahead, 65-64, with 2:15 left. Mark Baker added a keyhole jumper to pull two points out at 67-65.

AAH went into a stall at 1:18, but lost it on a traveling violation. But Cheyenne threw the ball out of bounds and the Kadets took it back and held on until Mike Gibbs fired in a lay-up unchallenged.

Massarand, mainly on his rebounding and fast break ability, earned high points honors with 19 markers. Graham, stymied almost entirely the first half by an aggressive defense, had 14.

Blanchard and Spear each had 14 points for the home - standing victors.

Losing Cage Team Scores 748 Points

LAKEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The basketball game went into overtime, but the victors gave the losers a shellacking they won't soon forget — 928 to 748.

Then the 10 Lakewood High School students went home and soaked their feet. They had played for 12 straight hours.

Wayne Caley, 16, captain of the winning team, said he and the other nine hit upon the marathon game after hearing about a 10-hour stint in Ohio.

"We wanted to show the older generation that some of the kids today aren't so soft," he said.

The boys started at 7 p.m.. Friday night, took a 15-minute "halftime" at 1 a.m. and finished the game at 7 a.m.. Saturday. No substitutions were allowed.

Jockey John Ralph Adams is a son of former rider and trainer John H. Adams, three times the nation's leading rider.

Despite the fact that South's Tom Chamberlain established two new pool records, the T-Birds overwhelmed their northern visitors. Chamberlain broke the 200-Yard Freestyle when he was clocked 1:54.8 and the Denver South tanker broke Bruce Teschner's 10—Yard Freestyle record by posting a time of 51.9. The old mark by Teschner was 53.7.

The T-Birds journey to Denver this Saturday for a relay meet which will draw 12 teams at the George Washington High School pool.

Deaf and Blind Edges Kiowa in Last Period

Deaf and Blind scored seven straight points at the start of the final period to hand Kiowa a 46-45 Black Forest League victory Saturday night.

Danny Ward led the balanced D&B attack with 12 points. Terry Copper and John Staley each had 13 for Kiowa.

Cheyenne, Castle Rock Net Mat Wins

Castle Rock defeated Fountain, 32-18.

In the Cheyenne - Widefield match, the Indians' heavyweight Marty Stafanic pulled out the victory when he decisioned Widefield's Roy Hagan, 4-2, in the final match.

Fountain's Don Synder, Doug Stanley and Mike Watkins defeated their Castle Rock opponents via pin falls.

OVER THERE COACH — George Janzen, an official from the Denver area, points out a suggested seat on the bench for Oklahoma City coach, Abe Lemons during the Air Force battle with the Chiefs Saturday night. Lemons, who was unhappy with the officiating during much of the contest, eventually drew a technical when his protests grew a little strong. He still was unhappy at the conclusion as his club suffered an 86-74 setback at the hands of the hot-shoot-Falcons. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

Rookie Golfer Fires 68

Thompson Leads Crosby Tournament

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Rocky Thompson, a rookie pro, surprised everyone at the storm-battered Bing Crosby Golf Tournament Saturday and took the third round lead with a three-under-par 68 and a 54-hole total of 212.

The 25-year-old Wichita Falls, Tex. pro, who financed his chance on the pro tour last summer by selling shares of stock in himself, holed five birdies on putts ranging from two feet to one of 66, which pleased him so much he stepped off the distance to make sure of the length.

A raw wind, with gusts up to 60 miles per hour, whipped up after Thompson had finished 11 holes and he lost two strokes to par after that. Still, his early start was a big break as those who began later had to battle the elements the full distance, including rain in the late afternoon.

Storm warnings were posted for Sunday when the low 70 pros and 40 pro-amateur teams play the final 18 holes at Pebble Beach. The forecast was for clearing later in the day.

Two strokes back of Thompson at 214 were Harold Kneece of Aiken, S.C., and Bobby Harris of Winnetka, Ill.

Under the Crosby format, each player tours each of the three courses during the first three rounds of the $84,500 tourney.

Nicklaus had a 217 total for the three rounds and Palmer 222. U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi, also with a 77, had 233 and was cut from further individual pro competition.

Bill Collins and Charley Sifford, tied for second behind British Open champ Lema after the second round, also soared Saturday. Collins had a 78 for a 217 total and Sifford 83 for 222. Both played the 6,747-yard Pebble Beach course bordering the ocean.

It was so windy that long-hitting Paul Harney hit two wood shots, both with his driver, on the 367-yard 17th hole at Cypress Point and still wound up 30 yards short of the green.

Sunstruck Pulls Upset

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Sunstruck rushed into the lead soon after the start and won the $30,900 Royal Palm handicap at Hialeah Park Saturday as Chateaugay, 7-5 favorite with the crowd of 24,035, finished fifth.

Sunstruck, bearing 118 pounds with William Boland booting him in, ran the seven furlongs in 1:23 1-5 on a fast track and finished five lengths in front.

Joseph M. Roebling's Rainy Lake was second, Harbor View Farm's Morry E. was third and Knightly Manner was fourth in the field of eight.

Sunstruck, running as an entry with Big End, paid 11.20, $6.20 and $4.80. Rainy Lake was $8.80 and $6.00, while the show price on Morry E. was $6.

Chateaugay, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes in 1963 but out most of last season with a recurring ankle injury, was making his second start of the winter. He shouldered 126 pounds after winning a six-furlong allowance race last Saturday.

With Ray Broussard substituting for suspended jockey Braulio Baeza, Chateaugay's regular rider, the chestnut horse was seventh until they turned into the stretch. He showed some run to the finish line but was more than eight lengths behind the winner.

Fractional times were :23, :45 3-5 and 1:01 1-5, and Sunstruck earned $20,085 for his brief effort.

Jack J. Dreyfus, owner of Sunstruck, bought the horse last April for $18,000. The 5-year-old bay son of Tim Tam out of Sienna II by Combat raced 26 times last year and was in the money 17 of them, earning $63,690.

Dark King, going for his sixth straight after winning last week's Royal Poinciana, made a race of it for the first half mile, but faded in the drive to the wire and finished seventh, behind Big End and in front of Ocean Motion.

Gators Topple Kentucky

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A giant-sized Florida basketball team ended 31 years of frustration Saturday by whipping Kentucky 84-68 and became a contender for the Southeastern Conference title.

The Florida Gators, who had not beaten Kentucky since 1934, powered over the undersized Wildcats with 6-foot-9 Gary Keller and 6-10 Jeff Ramsey and forced Kentucky to scrap.

This brought the decision to the foul lines where Florida canned 34 points to Kentucky's 22.

Dick Tomlinson,, a 6-5 companion to Keller and Ramsey in the Florida front line, hit 19 points and Brooks Henderson scored 20 to lead scoring. Keller scored 20 and Ramsey 10.

Trying to use aggressive play to make up for lack of size, Kentucky stayed in contention until the last five minutes although four of its regulars got into early foul trouble.

By halftime, Tommy Kron had four personals. Pat Riley, John Adams and Terry Mobley, each had three.

Kentucky led the early stages by as much as five points but Florida went out in front 37-31 at halftime and stayed ahead the rest of the way.

Terry's Secret, a Terrang colt, won three straight California stakes but ran sixth in the Garden State. It was his first race over the New Jersey track. He missed Trial due to a fever.

D&B Grapplers South Park Mat Team

SOUTH PARK — Deaf and Blind defeated South Park, 43-8, Saturday afternoon in a wrestling match. Five of D&B's wins came by forfeit.

Iowa State Upsets Kansas, 64-58

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Iowa State upset Kansas 64-58 Saturday and dealt a crippling blow to the Jayhawk Big Eight Conference basketball title hopes.

The Cyclones used a control offense to excellent advantage in defeating a Kansas team which had won two previous games against the Iowans this season.

Iowa State got 22 of its points on free throws, 19 of them in the second half. The Cylcones got only one field goal in the final seven minutes of the game, but scored 14 free throws in that period in holding onto their lead.

Iowa State pulled ahead 50-40 with 5:55 left, and after Kansas narrowed the margin to 57-53 with 1:40 to go, the CYCLONES SAVED THE DAY ON FREE THROWS.

Kansas is 3-3 in Big Eight play and 11-6 for the season. Iowa State is 2-4 in the league and 4-13 over-all.

High scorer for the Cyclones was Dave Fleming with 19 points.

Walter Wesley of Kansas, the league's leading scorer, fouled out with 6:45 to go and wound up with 15 points. He has been averaging 21.3 a game.

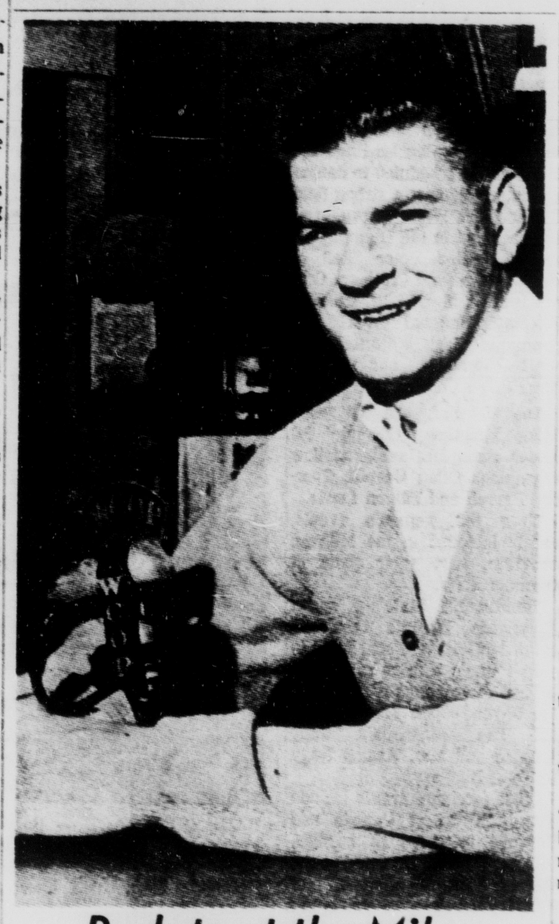
FOUND DEAD

OLDSMAR, Fla. (AP) — Louis London, 80, former entertainer and half-brother of the late author Jack London was found dead Sunday in his home here.

City Marshal Clarence Bailey said London died of self-inflicted gunshot wounds. He had been shot in the head with a pistol, apparently sometime Saturday night.

'Professor' Puts Aside the Einstein Theory to Discuss AAU-NCAA Feud



Radatz at the Mike

GEM OF THE RED SOX BULLPEN — Dick Radatz, star relief pitcher of the Boston Red Sox, as he sits at the mike before his sports broadcast on a Boston radio station. Radatz, who signed his 1965 contract with the Red Sox, said, "I'm in my best shape in my five years in baseball. I foresee my best season." Although the figures were not made public, Radatz received a substantial raise. (AP Wirephoto)

'Student' Asks What's Feud About

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — "We will put aside the Einstein Theory today," the professor said, "and delve into a more complicated subject, the AAU-NCAA fued.

"Any questions?"

Q. Yes, sir, what is the feud all about?

A. It's quite simple. The Amateur Athletic Union controls track and field in the United States. The colleges— collectively they're the NCAA—think the AAU is doing a bad job. They want to take over.

Q. Why can't they? Where does the AAU get its license to full control?

A. That's a long story. It started back in 1912. That's when the AAU was formed and became a member of the International Amateur Athletics Federation—IAAF—with the right to sanction both domestic and international meets in this country.

Q. That word "sanction"— I've heard a lot about it lately. What does it mean?

A. It's just another word for "okay" or "approval." Somebody has to see that meets are run in accordance with the rules. That's the job of the AAU.

Q. Good. What do the colleges care? Why do they want all this responsibility?

A. The colleges contend that they provide the bulk of the athletes for these big meets and so they, the colleges, not some other agency should see to it that these athletes get fair treatmen.

Q. Is it true that the colleges feed most of the talent into these meets?

A. Not exactly; that's a debatable point. In the Olympic Games at Tokyo last year, for instance, there were 69 men on the track and field team of the United States. Twenty of these were college men, eight were from the armed services and the other 41 were in what you call the "open class"— that is, they were schoolboys or working men.

Q. Somebody said the college boys won the Olympics for us — is that right?

A. That's an exaggeration. Sure, the colleges made a great contribution with medal winners such as Bob Hayes, Henry Carr and Bob Schul, but you have to remember there was a great show by veterans such as Al Oerter, Dallas Long, Billy Mills and Mike Larrabee.

Q. Then this really is a unified effort of schoolboys, collegians, military and professional men. Why isn't there an organization covering all of them?

A. There is—at least, supposedly. It's the AAU, which is supposed to blanket all amateurs.

Q. Then, again, what is the college beef?

A. Well, the colleges figure they aren't given enough voice for their contribution. They want more control.

Q. Even over athletes who are not undergraduates?

A. Yes, actually. The colleges would like to set up an organization in direct competition to the AAU and get recognition from the IAAF, such as the AAU has. That's why the USTFF—or the U.S. Track and Field Federation—was formed right after the Olympics in 1960.

Q. The NCAA, USTFF, AAU— all these alphabet things confuse me. Can you straighten them out?

A. It's tough, but I can try. The NCAA is the policy-making body of most of the colleges, some 600 of them. The USTFF is a separate arm. The AAU says the USTFF is just a puppet of the NCAA but the NCAA says the USTFF is an autonomous body of which the NCAA is just a member.

Q. Who's right?

A. You pay pour money and you takes your choice. This a source of some of the trouble.

Q. As I remember the controversy came to a head in the winter of 1962-63. Can you explain what happened?

A. Yes, the colleges at their annual convention adopted a four-point policy that: 1, No NCAA man could serve on an AAU committee. 2, No college facilities could be used for AU meets. 3, No NCAA members could be a member of the AAU. 4, No NCAA athletes could com- 4, No NCAA athletes could compete in AAU meets without USTFF sanction.

Q. What was the AAU reaction?

A. The reaction was announcement that any athlete who competed in a meet not sanctioned by the AAU would be automatically suspended.

Q. You mean that these athletes couldn't even try out for the Olympic team?

A. That's correct. As the certified sanctioning agent of the IAAF, the AAU—and only the AAU—had the right to approve athletes for international competition, including the Olympics.

Q. This must have been where the late President Kennedy and the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur got into the act.

A. Right. Fearing that the U.S. Olympic team might be damaged, General MacArthur banged the heads of the two factions together and got an uneasy peace Jan. 19, 1963.

Q. What was that?

A. The colleges were asked to throw out their four-point program and the AAU was asked to give amnesty to any athlete that might have been suspended as a result of the feud. Also the AAU was recognized as the sole sanctioning agent for open and international meets while the USTFF, or NCAA, could control strictly college events.

World Figure Skating Meet Slated For Broadmoor Arena

More than 120 of the best amateur skaters from 17 countries will compete for gold, silver and bronze medals of the International Skating Union. Twenty-two men, 27 ladies, 17 pairs and 19 dance pairs will compete for these titles: Champion of the World in Figure Skating for 1965, Lady Champion of the World in Figure Skating for 1965, Champions of the World in Figure Skating for Pairs for 1965, and Champions of the World in Ice Dancing for 1965.

The 1964 World Championships were held at Dortmund, West Germany, and this is the first time the event has been held in the United States since 1959 when it was also at the Broadmoor, as it was in 1957. They have been held only one other time in the United States, at Lake Placid, New York, in 1930.

Months of preparation have already been devoted to the event and the pace will accelerate rapidly in the next few weeks.

The World Championships are open to amateurs of all countries whose national associations or clubs are affiliated with the I.S.U., governing body of the competitions.

The ABC Television Network will video tape highlights of the championships for telecast on "ABC's Wide World of Sports" on Sunday, March 7. ABC program officials state that the public's tremendous interest in figure skating as indicated by past programs and ABC's coverage of the Winter Olympics prompted the network to program the World Championships at a prime-time hour.

Foreign skaters who have starred in recent Broadmoor Ice Revues will be familiar to local spectators. They are Alaim Calmat, French and European Champion, Sepp Schonmetzler of West Germany, and Eva and Pavel Roman, 1964 World Dance Champions from Czechoslovakia. Scott Ethan Allen, young American skating sensation who won the Olympic Bronze medal at Innsbruck in 1964 and starred in last summer's Ice Revue will also compete.

Broadmoor Skating Club members hoping for berths on the World Team are Christine Haigler and Duane Maki. Miss Haigler has been a U.S. World Team member for the past two years. In order to qualify for the World Team, U.S. skaters must capture one of the three top positions in the Senior Divisions of the National Championships taking place at Lake Placid, Feb. 9-12.

Broadmoor skaters Jerry and Judianne Fotheringill, 1964 National Pair Champions, and World Team members, retired this year to devote themselves to their studies at Colorado College. Expected to move into top position in U.S. Pair skating are Vivian and Ronald Joseph who were runners-up in 1964 Nationals.

Sjoukje Dijkstra, 1964 Olympic and World Ladies Singles Champion, from the Netherlands, and Manfred Schnelldorfer, West German Olympic and World Champion, have turned pro, leaving the top amateur positions wide open.

Marika Kilues and Hans-Jurgen Baumler of West Germany, 1964 World Pair Champs, have retired, but Olympic Champions Ljudmilla Delousova and Oleg Protopopov of Russia will be competing and are considered to be the most formidable contenders for the Pair title. Eva and Pavel Roman will be defending the World Dance crown they have won for the past three years.

Single or series tickets for the five days of competition are on sale now at the Broadmoor World Arena. Tickets may also be purchased for the Awards Banquet set for 7 p.m. on Sunday, March 7.

Olympic Bronze Medalist Winner.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By Bob Foss

Who would you say are the greatest basketball players of all-time? . . . Well, a national sportswriter recently picked two All-Time, All-Star Teams . . . Since the game today is much different than it used to be, he picked one team of players who graduated college before 1950 and another of players who graduated since . Here are his greatest players among the old-timers: Hank Luisetti . . . George Mikan . . . Charley Hyatt . . . Nat Holman . . . Vic Hanson . . . And, here are the five greatest of the modern era . . . Bob Cousy . . . Wilt Chamberlain . . . Bill Russell . . Bob Pettit . . . Oscar Robertson.

Ever wonder what is the roughest sport in the world? . . . A sports service recently took a survey and they report that most experts said that water polo for many years was the roughest . . . But, water polo rules have been changed and it is not as rough as it once was . . . The sport viewed as the roughest in the world today is Gaelic football.

What was the longest fight on record? . . . Most boxing records show that the longest glove fight ever was between Andy Bowen and Jack Burke in New Orleans in 1893 . . .Their bout lasted 110 rounds, or 7 hours and 19 minutes! . . . It ended in a draw as neither man could continue.

Rookie Golfer Fires 68

Thompson Leads Crosby Tournament

By JACK STEVENSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Rocky Thompson, a rookie pro, surprised everyone at the storm-battered Bing Crosby Golf Tournament Saturday and took the third round lead with a three-under-par 68 and a 54-hole total of 212.

The 25-year-old Wichita Falls, Tex. pro, who financed his chance on the pro tour last summer by selling shares of stock in himself, holed five birdies on putts ranging from two feet to one of 66, which pleased him so much he stepped off the distance to make sure of the length.

A raw wind, with gusts up to 60 miles per hour, whipped up after Thompson had finished 11 holes and he lost two strokes to par after that. Still, his early start was a big break as those who began later had to battle the elements the full distance, including rain in the late afternoon.

Storm warnings were posted for Sunday when the low 70 pros and 40 pro-amateur teams play the final 18 holes at Pebble Beach. The forecast was for clearing later in the day.

Two strokes back of Thompson at 214 were Harold Kneece of Aiken, S.C., and Bobby Harris of Winnetka, Ill.

Under the Crosby format, each player tours each of the three courses during the first three rounds of the $84,500 tourney.

Nicklaus had a 217 total for the three rounds and Palmer 222. U.S. Open champion Ken Venturi, also with a 77, had 233 and was cut from further individual pro competition.

Bill Collins and Charley Sifford, tied for second behind British Open champ Lema after the second round, also soared Saturday. Collins had a 78 for a 217 total and Sifford 83 for 222. Both played the 6,747-yard Pebble Beach course bordering the ocean.

It was so windy that long-hitting Paul Harney hit two wood shots, both with his driver, on the 367-yard 17th hole at Cypress Point and still wound up 30 yards short of the green.

Sunstruck Pulls Upset

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Sunstruck rushed into the lead soon after the start and won the $30,900 Royal Palm handicap at Hialeah Park Saturday as Chateaugay, 7-5 favorite with the crowd of 24,035, finished fifth.

Sunstruck, bearing 118 pounds with William Boland booting him in, ran the seven furlongs in 1:23 1-5 on a fast track and finished five lengths in front.

Joseph M. Roebling's Rainy Lake was second, Harbor View Farm's Morry E. was third and Knightly Manner was fourth in the field of eight.

Sunstruck, running as an entry with Big End, paid 11.20, $6.20 and $4.80. Rainy Lake was $8.80 and $6.00, while the show price on Morry E. was $6.

Chateaugay, winner of the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Stakes in 1963 but out most of last season with a recurring ankle injury, was making his second start of the winter. He shouldered 126 pounds after winning a six-furlong allowance race last Saturday.

With Ray Broussard substituting for suspended jockey Braulio Baeza, Chateaugay's regular rider, the chestnut horse was seventh until they turned into the stretch. He showed some run to the finish line but was more than eight lengths behind the winner.

Fractional times were :23, :45 3-5 and 1:01 1-5, and Sunstruck earned $20,085 for his brief effort.

Jack J. Dreyfus, owner of Sunstruck, bought the horse last April for $18,000. The 5-year-old bay son of Tim Tam out of Sienna II by Combat raced 26 times last year and was in the money 17 of them, earning $63,690.

Dark King, going for his sixth straight after winning last week's Royal Poinciana, made a race of it for the first half mile, but faded in the drive to the wire and finished seventh, behind Big End and in front of Ocean Motion.

Radatz at the Mike

GEM OF THE RED SOX BULLPEN — Dick Radatz, star relief pitcher of the Boston Red Sox, as he sits at the mike before his sports broadcast on a Boston radio station. Radatz, who signed his 1965 contract with the Red Sox, said, "I'm in my best shape in my five years in baseball. I foresee my best season." Although the figures were not made public, Radatz received a substantial raise. (AP Wirephoto)

'Student' Asks What's Feud About

By WILL GRIMSLEY

NEW YORK (AP) — "We will put aside the Einstein Theory today," the professor said, "and delve into a more complicated subject, the AAU-NCAA fued.

"Any questions?"

Q. Yes, sir, what is the feud all about?

A. It's quite simple. The Amateur Athletic Union controls track and field in the United States. The colleges— collectively they're the NCAA—think the AAU is doing a bad job. They want to take over.

Q. Why can't they? Where does the AAU get its license to full control?

A. That's a long story. It started back in 1912. That's when the AAU was formed and became a member of the International Amateur Athletics Federation—IAAF—with the right to sanction both domestic and international meets in this country.

Q. That word "sanction"—I've heard a lot about it lately. What does it mean?

A. It's just another word for "okay" or "approval." Somebody has to see that meets are run in accordance with the rules. That's the job of the AAU.

Q. Good. What do the colleges care? Why do they want all this responsibility?

A. The colleges contend that they provide the bulk of the athletes for these big meets and so they, the colleges, not some other agency should see to it that these athletes get fair treatmen.

Q. Is it true that the colleges feed most of the talent into these meets?

A. Not exactly; that's a debatable point. In the Olympic Games at Tokyo last year, for instance, there were 69 men on the track and field team of the United States. Twenty of these were college men, eight were from the armed services and the other 41 were in what you call the "open class"— that is, they were schoolboys or working men.

Q. Somebody said the college boys won the Olympics for us — is that right?

A. That's an exaggeration. Sure, the colleges made a great contribution with medal winners such as Bob Hayes, Henry Carr and Bob Schul, but you have to remember there was a great show by veterans such as Al Oerter, Dallas Long, Billy Mills and Mike Larrabee.

Q. Then this really is a unified effort of schoolboys, collegians, military and professional men. Why isn't there an organization covering all of them?

A. There is—at least, supposedly. It's the AAU, which is supposed to blanket all amateurs.

Q. Then, again, what is the college beef?

A. Well, the colleges figure they aren't given enough voice for their contribution. They want more control.

Q. Even over athletes who are not undergraduates?

A. Yes, actually. The colleges would like to set up an organization in direct competition to the AAU and get recognition from the IAAF, such as the AAU has. That's why the USTFF—or the U.S. Track and Field Federation—was formed right after the Olympics in 1960.

Q. The NCAA, USTFF, AAU—all these alphabet things confuse me. Can you straighten them out?

A. It's tough, but I can try. The NCAA is the policy-making body of most of the colleges, some 600 of them. The USTFF is a separate arm. The AAU says the USTFF is just a puppet of the NCAA but the NCAA says the USTFF is an autonomous body of which the NCAA is just a member.

Q. Who's right?

A. You pay pour money and you takes your choice. This a source of some of the trouble.

Q. As I remember the controversy came to a head in the winter of 1962-63. Can you explain what happened?

A. Yes, the colleges at their annual convention adopted a four-point policy that: 1, No NCAA man could serve on an AAU committee. 2, No college facilities could be used for AU meets. 3, No NCAA members could be a member of the AAU. 4, No NCAA athletes could com- 4, No NCAA athletes could compete in AAU meets without USTFF sanction.

Q. What was the AAU reaction?

A. The reaction was announcement that any athlete who competed in a meet not sanctioned by the AAU would be automatically suspended.

Q. You mean that these athletes couldn't even try out for the Olympic team?

A. That's correct. As the certified sanctioning agent of the IAAF, the AAU—and only the AAU—had the right to approve athletes for international competition, including the Olympics.

Q. This must have been where the late President Kennedy and the late Gen. Douglas MacArthur got into the act.

A. Right. Fearing that the U.S. Olympic team might be damaged, General MacArthur banged the heads of the two factions together and got an uneasy peace Jan. 19, 1963.

Q. What was that?

A. The colleges were asked to throw out their four-point program and the AAU was asked to give amnesty to any athlete that might have been suspended as a result of the feud. Also the AAU was recognized as the sole sanctioning agent for open and international meets while the USTFF, or NCAA, could control strictly college events.

Iowa State Upsets Kansas, 64-58

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Iowa State upset Kansas 64-58 Saturday and dealt a crippling blow to the Jayhawk Big Eight Conference basketball title hopes.

The Cyclones used a control offense to excellent advantage in defeating a Kansas team which had won two previous games against the Iowans this season.

Iowa State got 22 of its points on free throws, 19 of them in the second half. The Cylcones got only one field goal in the final seven minutes of the game, but scored 14 free throws in that period in holding onto their lead.

Iowa State pulled ahead 50-40 with 5:55 left, and after Kansas narrowed the margin to 57-53 with 1:40 to go, the CYCLONES SAVED THE DAY ON FREE THROWS.

Kansas is 3-3 in Big Eight play and 11-6 for the season. Iowa State is 2-4 in the league and 4-13 over-all.

High scorer for the Cyclones was Dave Fleming with 19 points.

Walter Wesley of Kansas, the league's leading scorer, fouled out with 6:45 to go and wound up with 15 points. He has been averaging 21.3 a game.

FOUND DEAD

OLDSMAR, Fla. (AP) — Louis London, 80, former entertainer and half-brother of the late author Jack London was found dead Sunday in his home here.

City Marshal Clarence Bailey said London died of self-inflicted gunshot wounds. He had been shot in the head with a pistol, apparently sometime Saturday night.

Gators Topple Kentucky

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A giant-sized Florida basketball team ended 31 years of frustration Saturday by whipping Kentucky 84-68 and became a contender for the Southeastern Conference title.

The Florida Gators, who had not beaten Kentucky since 1934, powered over the undersized Wildcats with 6-foot-9 Gary Keller and 6-10 Jeff Ramsey and forced Kentucky to scrap.

This brought the decision to the foul lines where Florida canned 34 points to Kentucky's 22.

Dick Tomlinson,, a 6-5 companion to Keller and Ramsey in the Florida front line, hit 19 points and Brooks Henderson scored 20 to lead scoring. Keller scored 20 and Ramsey 10.

Trying to use aggressive play to make up for lack of size, Kentucky stayed in contention until the last five minutes although four of its regulars got into early foul trouble.

By halftime, Tommy Kron had four personals. Pat Riley, John Adams and Terry Mobley, each had three.

Kentucky led the early stages by as much as five points but Florida went out in front 37-31 at halftime and stayed ahead the rest of the way.

Terry's Secret, a Terrang colt, won three straight California stakes but ran sixth in the Garden State. It was his first race over the New Jersey track. He missed Trial due to a fever.

D&B Grapplers South Park Mat Team

SOUTH PARK — Deaf and Blind defeated South Park, 48-8, Saturday afternoon in a wrestling match. Five of D&B's wins came by forfeit.

Deaf and Blind lost Friday night to Crowley County, 33-11.

More than 120 of the best amateur skaters from 17 countries will compete for gold, silver and bronze medals of the International Skating Union. Twenty-two men, 27 ladies, 17 pairs and 19 dance pairs will compete for these titles: Champion of the World in Figure Skating for 1965, Lady Champion of the World in Figure Skating for 1965, Champions of the World in Figure Skating for Pairs for 1965, and Champions of the World in Ice Dancing for 1965.

The 1964 World Championships were held at Dortmund, West Germany, and this is the first time the event has been held in the United States since 1959 when it was also at the Broadmoor, as it was in 1957. They have been held only one other time in the United States, at Lake Placid, New York, in 1930.

Months of preparation have already been devoted to the event and the pace will accelerate rapidly in the next few weeks.

The World Championships are open to amateurs of all countries whose national associations or clubs are affiliated with the I.S.U., governing body of the competitions.

The ABC Television Network will video tape highlights of the championships for telecast on "ABC's Wide World of Sports" on Sunday, March 7. ABC program officials state that the public's tremendous interest in figure skating as indicated by past programs and ABC's coverage of the Winter Olympics prompted the network to program the World Championships at a prime-time hour.

Foreign skaters who have starred in recent Broadmoor Ice Revues will be familiar to local spectators. They are Alaim Calmat, French and European Champion, Sepp Schonmetzler of West Germany, and Eva and Pavel Roman, 1964 World Dance Champions from Czechoslovakia. Scott Ethan Allen, young American skating sensation who won the Olympic Bronze medal at Innsbruck in 1964 and starred in last summer's Ice Revue will also compete.

Broadmoor Skating Club members hoping for berths on the World Team are Christine Haigler and Duane Maki. Miss Haigler has been a U.S. World Team member for the past two years. In order to qualify for the World Team, U.S. skaters must capture one of the three top positions in the Senior Divisions of the National Championships taking place at Lake Placid, Feb. 9-12.

Broadmoor skaters Jerry and Judianne Fotheringill, 1964 National Pair Champions, and World Team members, retired this year to devote themselves to their studies at Colorado College. Expected to move into top position in U.S. Pair skating are Vivian and Ronald Joseph who were runners-up in 1964 Nationals.

Sjoukje Dijkstra, 1964 Olympic and World Ladies Singles Champion, from the Netherlands, and Manfred Schnelldorfer, West German Olympic and World Champion, have turned pro, leaving the top amateur positions wide open.

Marika Kilues and Hans-Jurgen Baumler of West Germany, 1964 World Pair Champs, have retired, but Olympic Champions Ljudmilla Delousova and Oleg Protopopov of Russia will be competing and are considered to be the most formidable contenders for the Pair title. Eva and Pavel Roman will be defending the World Dance crown they have won for the past three years.

Single or series tickets for the five days of competition are on sale now at the Broadmoor World Arena. Tickets may also be purchased for the Awards Banquet set for 7 p.m. on Sunday, March 7.

SCOTT ETHAN ALLEN
Olympic Bronze Medalist Winner.

SPORTS FANS!

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

By Bob Foss

Who would you say are the greatest basketball players of all-time? . . . Well, a national sportswriter recently picked two All-Time, All-Star Teams . . . Since the game today is much different than it used to be, he picked one team of players who graduated college before 1950 and another of players who graduated since . Here are his greatest players among the old-timers: Hank Luisetti . . . George Mikan . . . Charley Hyatt . . . Nat Holman . . . Vic Hanson . . . And, here are the five greatest of the modern era . . . Bob Cousy . . . Wilt Chamberlain . . . Bill Russell . . Bob Pettit . . . Oscar Robertson.

Ever wonder what is the roughest sport in the world? . . . A sports service recently took a survey and they report that most experts said that water polo for many years was the roughest . . . But, water polo rules have been changed and it is not as rough as it once was . . . The sport viewed as the roughest in the world today is Gaelic football.

What was the longest fight on record? . . . Most boxing records show that the longest glove fight ever was between Andy Bowen and Jack Burke in New Orleans in 1893 . . . Their bout lasted 110 rounds, or 7 hours and 19 minutes! . . . It ended in a draw as neither man could continue.

Millrose Games Director Calls It 'Little Olympics'

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Schmertz usually ballyhoos the Millrose Games as the biggest and best indoor track meet. This year he's changing his tune to the Little Olympics.

Schmertz has been Millrose meet director for the past 23 years. He and Millrose AA President Fred Wilkens started lining up talent at the Tokyo Olympics last October for the 58th meet in Madison Square Garden next Thursday.

As a result the field includes 15 American Olympians, including six gold medal winners, and 16 Olympians from 10 other countries — in Europe, Africa, Australia, North and South America. A Russian team scheduled to visit the United States this winter won't arrive in time for this meet.

"The competition in our cup races, top to bottom, could be the best we ever had," says Schmertz.

With Marine Lt. Billy Mills, surprise winner of the Olympic 10,000 meters, heading the field, the Millrose two-mile could be the show-stopper of the meet. It has seven Tokyo Olympians in the field. The Wanamaker Mile, the big event most years, has three but may get a fourth.

Mills was unplaced in the Millrose last year, when the distance race was extended to three miles. He opened the current indoor campaign with a 4:08.1 mile in San Francisco.

Arrayed against him will be Bill Baillie of New Zealand, sixth in the Olympic 5,000, who ran an 8:32 indoor two-mile last year; Oscar Moore Jr., another Olympic 5,000 runner; and Britain's Maurice Herriott and America's George Young, Viz Zwolak and Jeff Fishback, who ran in the steeplechase at Tokyo.

Heading the mile field are John Davies of New Zealand and John Whetton of Britain, third and fifth in the Olympic 1,500. Canada's Ergas Leps is the third Olympian but Dyrol Burleson, the Oregon State grad who was fifth at Tokyo, indicated he would accept a Millrose invitation if he ran well enough at Los Angeles Saturday.

Other milers include Georgetown's Joe Lynch, who was switched from the two-mile relay after winning in 4:06 at Boston, and Bill Dotson and Archie San Romani Jr., who have bettered four minutes outdoors.

Bill Crothers of Toronto, who set an American record of 1:50 in winning the Charles Howe 880 last year, is scheduled to defend his laurels against a strong field that includes Wilson Kiprugut of Kenya, third in the Olympic 800 meters behind Peter Snell of New Zealand and Crothers. Others include Marine Lt. Charley Buchta, National AAU 600 champion) Dick Whitman, Met AAU champion, and Oregon State's Jan Underwood.

Even the women's events, rarely included in the Millrose program, have their quota of Olympic stars.

Tennessee State's sprint champions, Wyomia Tyus and Edith McGuire are scheduled to race Pamela Kilborn of Australia and Mary Rand of Britain in the 60-yard dash. The women's 440 has Australia's Judy Amoore and Mrs. Armus Nagy Szabo of Hungary.

Other foreign entrants include Aggrey Awori of Uganda and Harvard in the high hurdles, Vilmos Varju of Hungary in the shotput, Rudolf Tomasek of Hungary in the pole vault and Charley Njoku of Nigeria and Harvard and Kjell-Ake Nilsson of Sweden in the high jump — just to make it tougher for the announcers when he grabs that pa microphone.

BAGS CONTRACT — Baltimore Oriole President Lee MacPhail, right, hauls out the money bags after signing Brooks Robinson to a 1965 baseball contract. Robinson, the American League's Most Valuable Player last year, was believed to have signed for $50,000, the richest in Oriole club history. (AP Wirephoto)

Navy's Charity Shots Sink Manhattan

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy sank six free throws in the final minute Saturday and defeated Manhattan College 75-70, despite a 34-point performance by the Jaspers' Larry Lembo.

With only 53 seconds to go and Navy leading by one point, sophomore Tim Cohane was fouled bringing the ball downcourt and got two free throws on a one-and-one situation.

Seconds later, Chris Reddington hit two from the foul line for the Midshipmen and then Cohane added two more with just 16 seconds left.

Lembo sank a basket in the final six seconds. His 34 points tied the Navy Academy Field House record.

Layup Tips Michigan State

EAST LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Jim Cummins hit a layup with six seconds to play that gave Northwestern a 76-75 Big Ten basketball victory over Michigan State Saturday

It was the first conference victory in three starts for the Wildcats and the third straight Big Ten setback for Michigan State.

The Wildcats led 72-64 with 5:56 left in the game but went five minutes without scoring as the Spartans went in front 75-72 with 1:04 to. go

Jim Burns cut the lead to one point on a basket with 50 seconds left and set the stage for Cummins' shot.

Michigan State's Stan Washington led all scorers with 28 points, while Burns scored 25 for Northwestern.

The Wildcats got off to a fast start by taking a 16-4 lead with 14:26 left in the half. Michigan State caught Northwestern late in the half and had a 45-38 lead at intermission.

AFA Pistol Team Wins Dual Meet

Rich Abramson set two new pool records for the Air Force Academy Saturday although the Falcons lost to Iowa State, 53-42, in the Academy pool.

Abramson broke his own week-old record in the 200-yard freestyle, swimming the distance in 1:54.6. He set another record in the 500-yard freestyle of 5:34.3. The old record of 5:36.9 was set by Jim Jamerson on Feb. 9, 1963.

The Falcon pistol team won its first dual meet Saturday against Ohio State University, 4171-4060. High man was the AFA's All - American Mike Whitehorn with 848.

The freshman wrestlers lost a 16-12 decision to Colorado State College's first -year matmen. Robert Pavelko (123) and Don Henderson (147) earned wins for the Falcons. Mike Thrower (157) and Robert Koning (177) got draws.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Frank W. Thomas holds the longevity record for Alabama football coaches. He was head man for the Crimson Tide 15 years, from 1931 through 1946. Alabama didn't field a team in 1943 because of World War II.

Pirates Entertain Pesky St. Joseph's Five Today

Dan Wright's Buccaneers face another Denver Parochial League challenger, seeking to topple the St. Mary's roundballers from atop the DPL standings, when the pesky St. Joseph's five rolls into Colorado Springs for an afternoon conference game with the Pirates.

Tip-off time for the St. Mary's - St. Joseph's game is scheduled for today at 2:30 p.m. at the Pirates Gymnasium.

Wright's chargers cannot afford to falter today or for that matter the remainder of the season, especially with the torrid-scoring Mullen aggregation hot on their heels. Mullen and St. Mary's are deadlocked for the DPL lead via 6-1 won-loss records.

Friday night the Pirates pulled out a 67-65 squeaker DPL win over highly respected Annunciation behind the shooting of their ace gunner, Tom McCarthy who pumped in 24 points even though he was playing with a broken hand.

McCarthy broke a bone in his right hand (his shooting hand) last Sunday against Machebeuf. But the injury didn't stop the Bucs backcourt general from spearheading the victory with Joe Jezek providing the winning two-pointer which gave the St. Mary's aggregation its sixth DPL win and an 11-2 won-loss overall record.

Today's opponent, St. Joseph's, is a pesky group and the Pirates cannot afford to let their guard down. Although the St. Joseph's basketballers have only compiled a 3-4 mark in league play, they will be looking for an upset over their host.

CC Frosh Meet DU Monday

The freshman hockey team from Colorado College tangles Monday with the Denver University freshman squad in Denver University arena at 3 p.m.

The rematch will be played Wednesday on the Colorado College rink. Freshman team coach Ron Rishagen announced that he would start Wright Scott in the nets for the Denver game.

Starting forward line for the Tigers will be centered by Jerry Larson with Wayne Nelson and Dick Berlett on the wings. Bob McGill and Dave Mortenson will be the first defensive unit.

The second line for the freshmen will be centered by Chuck Reinking, with Doug Clark and Tom Wakefield on wings. Ray Cool and Bill Olsen are on the second defensive unit.

Colorado College freshman squad has been practicing two yours a week and scrimmaging with the Air Force Academy team in preparation for the Denver series.

St. Cloud State College comes to Colorado Springs Feb. 7 and 8 to play the Tiger freshmen. A 12-game season has been lined up for the squad to gain experience before moving into varsity play next year.

Drake Tumbles Cincinnati

Drake won its first Missouri Valley Conference basketball game of the season Saturday, whipping Cincinnati 89-80.

The Bulldogs, conference co-champions a year ago, pulled ahead in the first five minutes and were never overtaken. By halftime, their lead was 37-27.

Leading Drake, which had lost its first four conference games, was Gene West, who scored 20 points.

Ken Cunningham and Ron Krick each scored 16 for the Bearcats, who suffered their fourth conference loss against a single victory.

The Bulldogs' lead was 12 points in the second half Cincinnati cut the margin to six with five minutes left, but two long jump shots by Cox and two baskets by West sent the Bulldogs safely in front.

Moffitt Defeats Kynaston

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif., and Mrs. Carole Graebner of Beachwood, Ohio, the two stars who gave the United States second place in the recent Federation Cup women's tennis matches, turned in straight set victories Saturday in the second round of the Australian championships.

Miss Moffitt beat Margaret Kynaston of Australia 6-3, 6-3 and Mrs. Graebner beat Mrs. Mary Hawton of Australia 6-2, 8-6.

Advancing with them were such stars as defending champion Margaret Smith of Australia, Maria Bueno of Brazil, Norma Baylon of Australia and Christine Truman of Britain, but two seeded foreign women were upset.

Unseeded Francoise Durr, a member of France's Federation Cup team, eliminated Britain's Ann Haydon Jones, third foreign seed, 6-3, 6-0. Ruia Davey of New Zeland defeated Deidre Catt Keller of Britain, seeded sixth, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Lea Pericoli of Italy had a long center court match against Bernice Vukovich of South Africa, winning 6-3, 6-8, 6-2.

Pierre Darmon of France, top-seeded foreign player in men's singles, coasted to a 6-1, 8-6, 6-1 victory over Colin Zeean of South Africa. His countryman Francoise Jauffret, who has developed rapidly while playing in Australian tournaments, beat Keith Wooldridge of Britain 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, and Georges Goven, France's top junior, defeated Graham Stillwell of Britain 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 6-8, 6-3.

Cards Grid Coach Happy With Team

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A month ago, life didn't look so good to Coach Wally Lemm of the St. Louis Cardinals. They had just lost the National Football League's Eastern Division title on the final weekend of the season.

But now Lemm looks forward anxiously to 1965, and things couldn't be better. He thinks he has the best team in the league.

"I don't know of many on any other club, except the few great stars, who could make our starting line-up," he said the other day after signing a new two-year contract. "We've got the team to win the division. We've got the youth and now the experience and we should benefit from them the next two seasons."

Lemm's 22 starters average less than 26 years of age, have an average of more than four years in the league and have worked together.

"We're best set at linebacker — with Bill Koma, Dale Meinert and Larry Stallings — particularly if the kids we drafted come through," Lemm said.

On offense, Lemm feels the team's strong points are the receivers — Sonny Randle, Bobby Joe Conrad and Jackie Smith — and the line — tackles Ernie McMillan and Bob Reynolds, guards Irv Goode and Ken Gray and center Bob DeMarco.

He also has one of the league's top kickers in Jim Bakken. And then, of course, there's Charley Johnson, one of the league's finest quarterbacks.

"The return of halfback Bill Triplett, who was out last season because of illness, should help us greatly on offense," Lemm said. "He'll give us outside speed.

"We still could use more depth on defense and players to help on the special teams, which keep growing in importance. We might have to lose some of our offensive power for defensive depth by trading."

A deal involving veteran back John David Crow is the most talked-about move. Crow has expressed dissatisfaction with the amount of time he played last season.

"If Crow is unhappy and wants to be traded, we'll try to help ourselves in any deal."

But despite his optimism, experience has taught Lemm that anything can happen.

"Injuries could change the picture, and the football sometimes bounces funny ways," he said.

He couldn't help but be thinking of injuries to most of his linebacker and defensive ends last season that played a major part in two mid-season defeats. The Cardinals finished only one-half game behind Cleveland. But against the league champion Browns, they had a victory and a tie in two games.

"We also have to keep the club from resting on its laurels," Lemm said. "The league will be more balanced next year. Cleveland is still the champion; Washington is a young team; Philadelphia showed what it can do, and New York should be better."

Griffith Meets Gonzales

HOUSTON (AP) — Busy welterweight champion Emile Griffith and ambitious Manuel Gonzalez meet in a 10-round nontitle match Tuesday night.

Griffith has fought 10 welterweight title fights in four years. The Virgin Islands native said he knew nothing about Gonzalez.

"But I know he is rated No. 3 behind me," Griffith said.

Although the title will not be at stake, Gonzalez, of Odessa, Tex., said he had been promised a crack at Griffith's crown if he beats the champ here.

The fight is expected to have a gate of around $30,000. Griffith will get 35 per cent and Gonzalez 15 per cent.

The contract calls for the fighters to weigh over 147 pounds but not more than 150.

Hockey Hall of Famer Makes Jest

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Just think, I made the Hockey Hall of Fame and I never could even skate," chuckled Tom Lockhart.

At 72, Lockhart stands erect and exudes enthusiasm.

If you were to ask him the exact date of his recent selection to the hockey shrine in the builders' category, he'd probably reply "January the tointeent" in a manner of comedian Jimmy Durante.

Although Lockhart quit school at age 16, he has more than held his own in meetings with heads of hockey groups from Muskegon to Moscow in his dual capacity as president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States and president of the 11-team Eastern League.

"I guess I travel around 30,000 miles a year," he estimated, "and I've visited several countries abroad."

Most memorable among his trips was one to the Soviet Union two years ago.

"They gave me a young interpreter and I think I got the guy a little confused with my East Side slang," laughed Lockhart, who was born and reared in New York City.

"But I'll tell you that hockey fans are the same all over," he added, stepping up his verbal pace characteristically. "I watched an American team play the Russians three times in Moscow and every night there were about 50 or 60 kids waiting outside for autographs and broken sticks. For a minute I thought I was back outside Madison Square Garden."

Lockhart got his start in hockey in Madison Square Garden 33 years ago when he organized the Eastern League, then a seven-club circuit with four franchises in New York and one each in Hershey, Pa., Atlantic City, N.J., and Baltimore.

Today, only the Rovers represent New York and the EHL has other clubs representing cities from Clinton, N.Y., to Jacksonville, Fla.

"We might go as high as 14 teams next season," Lockhart predicts.

In international competition, the veteran executive is most impressed by the improvement in the play of the Russians and Japanese.

"The Russians have made tremendous strides," he pointed out, "and you have to remember that they started playing organized hockey only about 16 or 17 years ago.

"The Japanese are also coming on fast. They looked very bad in the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley. They didn't win a game because they couldn't stickhandle and their passing was sloppy. But they asked a lot of questions, took many pictures and went back home and taught themselves."

Lockhart, turning back the pages 12 years, remembered when he sent a team of New York amateur hockey players to Japan in 1953.

"The Japanese asked a lot of questions in those days, too," he said. "When our team arrived in Tokyo they were met at the airport by about 15 Japanese. They were interviewed by these men for more than an hour and asked about their style of play and hundreds of other things like that while the Japanese took notes.

"The next night, our team played their first game in Japan. We had no idea who was going to be on the other team. Well, it turned out to be the same 15 guys who had interviewed our players at the airport."

What about the prospects of more Americans turning to professional hockey as a vocation?

"All the National Hockey League-sponsored clubs are in Canada," Lockhart answered. "If there was more money spent in the development of American youngsters you'd see more of them like to Tom Williams."

Williams, now with the Boston Bruins, is a native of Duluth, Minn., and the only U.S. developed player in hockey's big league.

Lockhart calls his nomination to the Hockey Hall of Fame the highlight of his career.

"It's all been fun," he said "Most of all I think I've enjoyed making friends of people in hockey all over the world."

Like Durante, he has a million of 'em.

Fordham Five Rallies to Tip Temple, 57 - 51

NEW YORK (AP) — Fordham's Rams rallied from a nine-point deficit midway of the second half and whipped Temple 57-51 in a basketball game at the Fordham gym Saturday.

Bruce Brodbeck's three-point play gave Fordham a five-point lead with 2½ minutes remaining and the Rams were nearly perfect in freezing the ball during the closing minutes.

Temple led 30-26 at the half.

The Ram's superior ball-handling and pressing defense overcame the Temple height advantage. Ken Morgan topped all scorers with 19 points. John Stevens paced the Rams with 18, one more than Zandy.

Temple now is 9-4 for the season and Fordham 5-8.

Millrose Games Director Calls It 'Little Olympics'

NEW YORK (AP) — Fred Schmertz usually ballyhoos the Millrose Games as the biggest and best indoor track meet. This year he's changing his tune to the Little Olympics.

Schmertz has been Millrose meet director for the past 23 years. He and Millrose AA President Fred Wilkens started lining up talent at the Tokyo Olympics last October for the 58th meet in Madison Square Garden next Thursday.

As a result the field includes 15 American Olympians, including six gold medal winners, and 16 Olympians from 10 other countries — in Europe, Africa, Australia, North and South America. A Russian team scheduled to visit the United States this winter won't arrive in time for this meet.

"The competition in our cup races, top to bottom, could be the best we ever had," says Schmertz.

With Marine Lt. Billy Mills, surprise winner of the Olympic 10,000 meters, heading the field, the Millrose two-mile could be the show-stopper of the meet. It has seven Tokyo Olympians in the field. The Wanamaker Mile, the big event most years, has three but may get a fourth.

Mills was unplaced in the Millrose last year, when the distance race was extended to three miles. He opened the current indoor campaign with a 4:08.1 mile in San Francisco.

Arrayed against him will be Bill Baillie of New Zealand, sixth in the Olympic 5,000, who ran an 8:32 indoor two-mile last year; Oscar Moore Jr., another Olympic 5,000 runner; and Britain's Maurice Herriott and America's George Young, Viz Zwolak and Jeff Fishback, who ran in the steeplechase at Tokyo.

Heading the mile field are John Davies of New Zealand and John Whetton of Britain, third and fifth in the Olympic 1,500. Canada's Ergas Leps is the third Olympian but Dyrol Burleson, the Oregon State grad who was fifth at Tokyo, indicated he would accept a Millrose invitation if he ran well enough at Los Angeles Saturday.

Other milers include Georgetown's Joe Lynch, who was switched from the two-mile relay after winning in 4:06 at Boston, and Bill Dotson and Archie San Romani Jr., who have bettered four minutes outdoors.

Bill Crothers of Toronto, who set an American record of 1:50 in winning the Charles Howe 880 last year, is scheduled to defend his laurels aguinst a strong field that includes Wilson Kiprugut of Kenya, third in the Olympic 800 meters behind Peter Snell of New Zealand and Crothers. Others include Marine Lt. Charley Buchta, National AAU 600 champion) Dick Whitman, Met AAU champion, and Oregon State's Jan Underwood.

Even the women's events, rarely included in the Millrose program, have their quota of Olympic stars.

Tennessee State's sprint champions, Wyomia Tyus and Edith McGuire are scheduled to race Pamela Kilborn of Australia and Mary Rand of Britain in the 60-yard dash. The women's 440 has Australia's Judy Amoore and Mrs. Armus Nagy Szabo of Hungary.

Other foreign entrants include Aggrey Awori of Uganda and Harvard in the high hurdles, Vilmos Varju of Hungary in the shotput, Rudolf Tomasek of Hungary in the pole vault and Charley Njoku of Nigeria and Harvard and Kjell-Ake Nilsson of Sweden in the high jump — just to make it tougher for the announcers when he grabs that pa microphone.

The rematch will be played Wednesday on the Colorado College rink. Freshman team coach Ron Rishagen announced that he would start Wright Scott in the nets for the Denver game.

Starting forward line for the Tigers will be centered by Jerry Larson with Wayne Nelson and Dick Berlett on the wings. Bob McGill and Dave Mortenson will be the first defensive unit.

The second line for the freshmen will be centered by Chuck Reinking, with Doug Clark and Tom Wakefield on wings. Ray Cool and Bill Olsen are on the second defensive unit.

Colorado College freshman squad has been practicing two yours a week and scrimmaging with the Air Force Academy team in preparation for the Denver series.

St. Cloud State College comes to Colorado Springs Feb. 7 and 8 to play the Tiger freshmen. A 12-game season has been lined up for the squad to gain experience before moving into varsity play next year.

Moffitt Defeats Kynaston

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif., and Mrs. Carole Graebner of Beachwood, Ohio, the two stars who gave the United States second place in the recent Federation Cup women's tennis matches, turned in straight set victories Saturday in the second round of the Australian championships.

Miss Moffitt beat Margaret Kynaston of Australia 6-3, 6-3 and Mrs. Graebner beat Mrs. Mary Hawton of Australia 6-2, 8-6.

Advancing with them were such stars as defending champion Margaret Smith of Australia, Maria Bueno of Brazil, Norma Baylon of Australia and Christine Truman of Britain, but two seeded foreign women were upset.

Unseeded Francoise Durr, a member of France's Federation Cup team, eliminated Britain's Ann Haydon Jones, third foreign seed, 6-3, 6-0. Ruia Davey of New Zeland defeated Deidre Catt Keller of Britain, seeded sixth, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4.

Lea Pericoli of Italy had a long center court match against Bernice Vukovich of South Africa, winning 6-3, 6-8, 6-2.

Pierre Darmon of France, top-seeded foreign player in men's singles, coasted to a 6-1, 8-6, 6-1 victory over Colin Zeean of South Africa. His countryman Francoise Jauffret, who has developed rapidly while playing in Australian tournaments, beat Keith Wooldridge of Britain 6-1, 6-3, 6-2, and Georges Goven, France's top junior, defeated Graham Stillwell of Britain 6-2, 6-3, 3-6, 6-8, 6-3.

Fordham Five Rallies to Tip Temple, 57 - 51

NEW YORK (AP) — Fordham's Rams rallied from a nine-point deficit midway of the second half and whipped Temple 57-51 in a basketball game at the Fordham gym Saturday.

Bruce Brodbeck's three-point play gave Fordham a five-point lead with 2½ minutes remaining and the Rams were nearly perfect in freezing the ball during the closing minutes.

Temple led 30-25 at the half.

The Ram's superior ball-handling and pressing defense overcame the Temple height advantage. Ken Morgan topped all scorers with 19 points. John Stevens paced the Rams with 18, one more than Zandy.

Temple now is 9-5 for the season and Fordham 5-9.

Drake Tumbles Cincinnati

Drake won its first Missouri Valley Conference basketball game of the season Saturday, whipping Cincinnati 89-80.

The Bulldogs, conference co-champions a year ago, pulled ahead in the first five minutes and were never overtaken. By halftime, their lead was 37-27.

Leading Drake, which had lost its first four conference games, was Gene West, who scored 20 points.

Ken Cunningham and Ron Krick each scored 16 for the Bearcats, who suffered their fourth conference loss against a single victory.

The Bulldogs' lead was 12 points in the second half Cincinnati cut the margin to six with five minutes left, but two long jump shots by Cox and two baskets by West sent the Bulldogs safely in front.

Griffith Meets Gonzales

HOUSTON (AP) — Busy welterweight champion Emile Griffith and ambitious Manuel Gonzalez meet in a 10-round nontitle match Tuesday night.

Griffith has fought 10 welterweight title fights in four years. The Virgin Islands native said he knew nothing about Gonzalez.

"But I know he is rated No. 3 behind me," Griffith said.

Although the title will not be at stake, Gonzalez, of Odessa, Tex., said he had been promised a crack at Griffith's crown if he beats the champ here.

The fight is expected to have a gate of around $30,000. Griffith will get 35 per cent and Gonzalez 15 per cent.

The contract calls for the fighters to weigh over 147 pounds but not more than 150.

Hockey Hall of Famer Makes Jest

By BEN OLAN
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "Just think, I made the Hockey Hall of Fame and I never could even skate," chuckled Tom Lockhart.

At 72, Lockhart stands erect and exudes enthusiasm.

If you were to ask him the exact date of his recent selection to the hockey shrine in the builders' category, he'd probably reply "January the tointeent" in a manner of comedian Jimmy Durante.

Although Lockhart quit school at age 16, he has more than held his own in meetings with heads of hockey groups from Muskegon to Moscow in his dual capacity as president of the Amateur Hockey Association of the United States and president of the 11-team Eastern League.

"I guess I travel around 30,000 miles a year," he estimated, "and I've visited several countries abroad."

Most memorable among his trips was one to the Soviet Union two years ago.

"They gave me a young interpreter and I think I got the guy a little confused with my East Side slang," laughed Lockhart, who was born and reared in New York City.

"But I'll tell you that hockey fans are the same all over," he added, stepping up his verbal pace characteristically. "I watched an American team play the Russians three times in Moscow and every night there were about 50 or 60 kids waiting outside for autographs and broken sticks. For a minute I thought I was back outside Madison Square Garden."

Lockhart got his start in hockey in Madison Square Garden 33 years ago when he organized the Eastern League, then a seven-club circuit with four franchises in New York and one each in Hershey, Pa., Atlantic City, N.J., and Baltimore.

Today, only the Rovers represent New York and the EHL has other clubs representing cities from Clinton, N.Y., to Jacksonville, Fla.

"We might go as high as 14 teams next season," Lockhart predicts.

In international competition, the veteran executive is most impressed by the improvement in the play of the Russians and Japanese.

"The Russians have made tremendous strides," he pointed out, "and you have to remember that they started playing organized hockey only about 16 or 17 years ago.

"The Japanese are also coming on fast. They looked very bad in the 1960 Olympics at Squaw Valley. They didn't win a game because they couldn't stickhandle and their passing was sloppy. But they asked a lot of questions, took many pictures and went back home and taught themselves."

Lockhart, turning back the pages 12 years, remembered when he sent a team of New York amateur hockey players to Japan in 1953.

"The Japanese asked a lot of questions in those days, too," he said. "When our team arrived in Tokyo they were met at the airport by about 15 Japanese. They were interviewed by these men for more than an hour and asked about their style of play and hundreds of other things like that while the Japanese took notes.

"The next night, our team played their first game in Japan. We had no idea who was going to be on the other team. Well, it turned out to be the same 15 guys who had interviewed our players at the airport."

What about the prospects of more Americans turning to professional hockey as a vocation?

"All the National Hockey League-sponsored clubs are in Canada," Lockhart answered. "If there was more money spent in the development of American youngsters you'd see more of them like to Tom Williams."

Williams, now with the Boston Bruins, is a native of Duluth, Minn., and the only U.S. developed player in hockey's big league.

Lockhart calls his nomination to the Hockey Hall of Fame the highlight of his career.

"It's all been fun," he said "Most of all I think I've enjoyed making friends of people in hockey all over the world."

Like Durante, he has a million of 'em.

Cards Grid Coach Happy With Team

By MIKE RECHT
Associated Press Sports Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A month ago, life didn't look so good to Coach Wally Lemm of the St. Louis Cardinals. They had just lost the National Football League's Eastern Division title on the final weekend of the season.

But now Lemm looks forward anxiously to 1965, and things couldn't be better. He thinks he has the best team in the league.

"I don't know of many on any other club, except the few great stars, who could make our starting line-up," he said the other day after signing a new two-year contract. "We've got the team to win the division. We've got the youth and now the experience and we should benefit from them the next two seasons."

Lemm's 22 starters average less than 26 years of age, have an average of more than four years in the league and have worked together.

"We're best set at linebacker — with Bill Koma, Dale Meinert and Larry Stallings — particularly if the kids we drafted come through," Lemm said.

On offense, Lemm feels the team's strong points are the receivers — Sonny Randle, Bobby Joe Conrad and Jackie Smith — and the line — tackles Ernie McMillan and Bob Reynolds, guards Irv Goode and Ken Gray and center Bob DeMarco.

He also has one of the league's top kickers in Jim Bakken. And then, of course, there's Charley Johnson, one of the league's finest quarterbacks.

"The return of halfback Bill Triplett, who was out last season because of illness, should help us greatly on offense," Lemm said. "He'll give us outside speed.

"We still could use more depth on defense and players to help on the special teams, which keep growing in importance. We might have to lose some of our offensive power for defensive depth by trading."

A deal involving veteran back John David Crow is the most talked-about move. Crow has expressed dissatisfaction with the amount of time he played last season.

"If Crow is unhappy and wants to be traded, we'll try to help ourselves in any deal."

But despite his optimism, experience has taught Lemm that anything can happen.

"Injuries could change the picture, and the football sometimes bounces funny ways," he said.

He couldn't help but be thinking of injuries to most of his linebacker and defensive ends last season that played a major part in two mid-season defeats. The Cardinals finished only one-half game behind Cleveland. But against the league champion Browns, they had a victory and a tie in two games.

"We also have to keep the club from resting on its laurels," Lemm said. "The league will be more balanced next year. Cleveland is still the champion; Washington is a young team; Philadelphia showed what it can do, and New York should be better."

The Proper Role Of Government

We assumed that when George Blaisdell wrote us about the "proper" (rightful) role of government, he had in mind the concept of morality. A reading of his most recent letter, which appears in today's Open Parliament section, tends to confirm this view.

This is why we went to some pains to show that government cannot MORALLY perform any service for anyone without that person's expressed permission. Neither government nor any corporation or individual can RIGHTFULLY (morally) do anything for or to anyone unless that person agrees in advance.

But apparently we neglected to point out what is so obvious that we did not think it needed to be pointed out: that government, in conducting its retaliatory actions, commits aggression. And since Mr. Blaisdell agrees with us that aggression is wrong, it remains for us then to spell out why and how government's actions, presumed to be retaliatory, are in actual fact aggressive, and hence immoral and improper.

Government sets itself up, in theory, for purposes of making life and property safe from aggression. Splendid. This is a high purpose and obviously is necessary. But government, by its nature, does not set itself up as a normal protection business would. It does not organize its resources with its own money and then go out seeking to attract customers of its services.

Instead, it sets itself up on the money of the taxpayers. Before government gets itself in any position to do anything, it makes a general assessment on all those who presumably are to benefit by whatever it does.

Thus, while in theory it is a protectionist, retaliatory agency, it begins its operations by attacking the very persons it professes that it will protect. Thus, in practice, ALL governments (not merely large and ungainly governments) begin by aggressing against the very persons they pretend to guard. They do not confine their forays to those who agree to purchase the services. Their forays are unconfined. And this is true whether the government is locally organized or organized outside a territory and then thrusts its way in and seizes control of the territory.

In reality, then, government wins support only of a portion of the people. It need be only a plurality in a modern democracy. Having obtained this support, which is almost always available, even if the government is alien and comes in from outside, it establishes a universal sway over everyone using as justification that it is "liberating" the people; or "protecting" them from disorder, riot, and every conceivable evil.

Having established its reign, the government enlarges and solidifies its control over the subject people. But it does not protect them from theft, rape or murder. If it did so, we might be more lenient in our evaluation. Rather, the people are still subject to theft, rape and murder, as statistical tables clearly establish. So all of the original aggression, by means of which the government finances itself, does not protect anyone, unless it be those in government.

Now the government waits in readiness until some citizen is PRIVATELY victimized. This is the second act of aggression which occurs under a government - managed community. First, all are victimized, generally, in the original taxation and control as it is established. Next, certain persons are left unprotected and criminal acts ensue, which they must patiently endure.

Finally, the government moves AFTER this second aggression occurs, and, if it can find enough evidence, properly identify the offending party, conduct a trial which establishes beyond doubt that a crime was committed and that the party being tried is the perpetrator, then the offender is punished. And to punish, a further foray occurs against all the people, who are again looted by the government so that the criminal can be housed and clothed and fed behind bars.

Thus, governments commit major acts of aggression against everyone, in an effort, not to protect, but to retaliate against individuals who commit minor acts of aggression.

The score is at least two acts of aggression by government to every one committed by a private party.

'TELL YOU WHAT I'LL DO'

Our Hearts Are Being Wrung

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

In their views on the "poverty problem," the collectivist writers have been wringing our hearts with the old plea that ours is "an affluent society," one which has achieved a high level of economic production, and that our task must now be to "give" the impoverished a "greater share" of "the nation's" wealth. Such a view has, of course, been the inspiration for both the Kennedy and Johnson administration, and constitutes a re-expression of the socialist-collectivist premise that the life and property of a man are not his, but belong to "society," the group, to be done with as "society" dictates. Since "society" is nothing but an accumulation of men, the collectivist premise may be reduced to the concept that a man and his property belong not to himself, but to other men.

It has been postulated that the first thing any man ever "owned" was probably another man. The ownership of a human being is properly defined as "slavery," and most Americans are of the opinion that slavery went out of practice in this nation around 1865. Upon examination, however, it will be seen that the basic premise of slavery still lives; it is, in fact, the very life-blood of most of the programs recently announced by President Johnson.

When a man labors 40 hours a week only to have 25 per cent of what he has earned taken from him in the way of taxes, such a man is to that extent nothing more than a slave. He labors not for his own benefit, but so that another man may consume what he has produced, and which has been forcibly taken from the producer.

If a man voluntarily chooses to contribute some of his earnings to a less productive individual, he should certainly be free to do so, and because of the voluntary nature of the transaction, he cannot be considered to be a slave. But when a man is forcibly deprived of some of his earnings, against his will, so that another man may have the unearned benefit of his labors, there is no other way to describe such a system than as "slavery."

In a free society, a man has an absolute right to his own life and, consequently, an absolute right to work to sustain his life and to retain what he has produced. Since production is necessary to sustain the life of the producer, it follows that whenever a man has been deprived of what he has produced, an attack has been made upon the continued existence of the producer; his right to his own life is no longer considered absolute.

I have no quarrel with voluntary acts of altruism: if a man chooses to share his wealth with other men, that is his business. But I do argue with the proposition that a man must be "forced" to share his wealth. Such forced deprivation of property, far from ever amounting to a "great Society," bears the hallmark of a "slave society," and its advocates are neither more nor less than the philosophical off-spring of the jungle savages who, centuries ago, consumed their neighbor over a roaring fire.

Anyone who seeks to maintain his existence at the expense of someone else's labor is a parasite. Conversely, a parasite, in order to remain alive, must have a victim, and Lyndon Johnson's blueprint for the "Great Society" provides victims aplenty. Those who think that other men should be forced to produce for their benefit now have someone to champion their cause; someone to hold the victim steady while the blood is drained from him. It isn't that slavery was ever abolished in this country: it's only that more people have gotten in on the game.

Aggression and Retaliation

If we are to be concerned with the "proper" (moral) role of government, we must begin by concerning ourselves with aggression. Aggression is patently immoral on its face and cannot be justified for any reason.

It should be noted that all persons, in or out of government, who do commit aggression, seek to justify their actions. This is not the exclusive perrogative of the private criminal.

But if we are to employ logic, and we know of no other rational tool for this examination, we must begin by discounting ALL justifications. If aggression is immoral, and Mr. Blaisdell appears to agree with us that it is, then ANY justification by means of which it is employed must logically be discarded.

We have only, then, to define aggression and to examine seperate acts which are committed to see if they fit the definition.

By aggression, we mean in our discussion an UNPROVOKED act of physical violence, wherein the rights of an individual (or group) are disregarded, to the end that the victim of the act is made to suffer property damage or bodily harm or deprivation. We specify that the act, to qualify as aggressive, must be unprovoked. If provocation has occurred, then a debate might ensue as to whether or not the action taken afterward were justified. We assume that aggression refers ONLY to acts of UNPROVOKED violation for which no possible justification can be offered.

Thus, the mere availability of a victim cannot be viewed as justification. Nor can the wealth of the victim, nor his condition in life, nor his geographic location, be viewed as any possible justification.

We assume that a condition of peace and tranquility exists between the victim and the aggressor, until the aggressor acts. That is, the victim has done NOTHING AT ALL to provoke an attack upon his person or property.

Here is a bank. A bank robber schemes and plots how he will enter and appropriate money. His act is aggressive. The bank (we assume) has done nothing to him whatever. We rule out an act by a man who may have had a mortgage foreclosed (which probably should have been foreclosed). We introduce the criminal, the aggressor, who, merely because the bank is there and he covets what is in it, performs an act of violence of one sort or another to get his hands on what he covets.

A man, motivated by a foreclosure, might be construed as seeking vengeance. That is, he is retaliating. But most bank robbers do not fall into this classification. They are aggressors in the pure and simple meaning of the terms.

But how are we to classify a government? Here is a group of men who have not been harmed at all by the people they propose to rule. The people are proceeding in an orderly manner, conducting their private affairs. A few among them (a plurality) desires a government. The men who are to serve as the government, then, using the approval of the plurality as a justification, suddenly descend upon ALL the people in the area (geographic convenience) and take a certain portion of the money of everyone. The amounts they take vary as to the condition in life, the amount of the wealth available for taking. Those in some businesses (condition in life) pay heavily. Those with much have much taken (condition of wealth). The victimizing occurs with the justification that since some want it to happen, all must experience it.

By any logical rules to be used, the act of a government in taking money from all the people is aggressive. The fact that the taking is sanctioned by a group of persons does not justify the taking from those who do not favor the procedure.

If a group of Mr. Blaisdell's "friends" get together and decide that they have a right to some of his earnings, and proceed to take those earnings from him, the act is aggressive. If they protest that they are doing this to "protect" him, the act is still aggressive. If they say that they take his money to make him orderly and to compel his obedience to their decrees, the act is still aggressive. If Mr. Blaisdell agrees in advance to the procedure, then this is not aggressive. But for every act of this nature in this nation, wherein one has agreed to be victimized, there have always been at least two who did not.

Mr. Blaisdell is, we believe, placed in the position of saying that because he wants the government to retaliate for him (an end), he is willing to accept governmental aggression (a means). And since he appears to agree that aggression is immoral, it follows that he is willing to accept an immoral means, in order to obtain what to him is a desirable end. Thus, he is saying that the end justifies the means. This is a fundamental contradiction in logic.

Now the fact is that what we all really want is not retaliation but protection. The very concept of retaliation holds to the premise that before retaliation occurs, some act of aggression must have occurred. Thus, the present system requires a victimizing of innocent people before retaliation occurs. If retaliation occurs in advance of victimizing, then by definition it is not retaliation, but aggression.

Now it happens that protection can be and often is obtained in the market. But Mr. Blaisdell is correct if retaliation (which depends on prior aggression) is his goal. Retaliation, retribution, punishment and vengeance are peculiarly suited to governments. The market place cannot provide them.

If Mr. Blaisdell would like our views on retaliation, they have been privately published and are available through Rampart College. There are two booklets in the PINE TREE series covering this matter and they may be obtained at $1.00 each from PINE TREE PRESS, Box 165, Colorado Springs.

GOVERNMENT'S ROLE

To the editor:

I do not know what you were trying to accomplish by your January 10 editorials, "The Question of Rights" and "Government as a Contracting Party." What, in fact, you did accomplish was a beautiful evasion of the issue raised: What is the proper role of government in an individualist, capialist, and free society? You stated, "if government has a 'proper' (rightful) role to fulfill, it would be the role of a contracting party." I stated, "It should be the proper role of government to act as a retaliatory force, internally and externally, against the initiation of force; no more and no less." It is safe to assume that at least one of us is wrong.

If we assume that government's only role should be that of a contracting party, then only those who enter into the contract are bound by it. (As you stated about contracts). It must follow that those who do not enter into (sign) this contract are not bound by it and may kill, rob, rape and vandalize without fear of government interference. After all, government would have nothing to say, as no contract had been signed. If justice were to exist, it would have to be accomplished by individuals in the society (feudalis). However, according to this "contract" morality; justice could not morally exist, as the victims would not have signed a contract with their murderers!

I cannot agree with this absurdity, nor remain silent about it. Now I did not say, either explicitly or implicitly, as you stated I said, that "By some process, apparently a metaphysical process, some men (government) obtain a rightful power to intrude upon the rights of other men (not in government) and that this is the proper (rightful) role for government." I stated, "Rights are, because of the nature of man, a metaphysical necessity, as are food, water and oxygen . . . The only way to violate a right is by the use of physical force and its byproducts, including theft and fraud. It should be the proper role of government to act as a retaliatory force, internally and externally, against the initiation of force, no more and no less." This places the government in the role of a protector, not a creator (as you wrongly quoted me), of individual human rights.

It is obvious that when a person INITIATES the use of force against another, he forfeits his rights to the extent of his confiscation of the other person's rights. Thus, government retaliatory action here would not take away any rights which the individual, by his action, had not already renounced.

Remember what the issue is. It is not, "What have governments considered their proper function," or "What do they now consider their proper function?" The issue is, "What SHOULD their proper function be?" Admittedly, governments today are stepping boldly beyond their proper roles. In this discussion, this is not the issue.

SUNDAY BUSINESSES?

To the Editor:

A number of people in this area have been following with interest the different views concerning a law that would enforce closing of businesses on Sunday.

I'd like to present a few thoughts that interested and concerned individuals might wish to consider as they evaluate their own attitude and practice in this matter.

1. When Christianity began it was entered into by individuals on a voluntary basis.

2. The Ten Commandments (Decalogue) were given specifically to the children of Israel (Exodus 20:1,2), along with approximately 600 other laws:

3. The Commandment to keep the Sabbath day holy is not repeated as instruction in the writings of the New Testament to Christians.

4. The Christians of the first century church began the tradition of meeting on the first day of the week (Acts 20:7 and 1 Galatians 4:8-11).

5. Instruction is given to Christians not to judge others concerning particular days but to be fully persuaded in their own minds in regards to their conduct (Romans 14:5-12 and Galatians 4:8-11).

6. No teaching or practice of Christ and His disciples authorizes the idea of calling on civil authorities to enforce Christian religious observances upon non-Christian people.

7. The mingling of Old Testament laws (moral, civil, or ceremonial) with the Christians new life in Christ was to be discontinued (Galations Chapter 3,4).

The view, held by some that Christians have authority to dominate the civil government and enforce their religious practices upon non-Christians prior to Christ's personal return, will lead to serious difficulties and unnecessary sufferings.

In summary, I believe we ought to follow the New Testament tradition of observing the first day of the week as a day of rest and workship on a voluntary basis and refrain from judging others regarding their particular views and practices in this matter. I, also, do not believe we should seek to enforce a civil law upon others and especially upon those who do not follow the Christian way of life.

MEDICARE

To the Editor:

Your editorial entitled "No Reason for Medicare" which appeared in your January 5 edition has just been called to my attention.

Allow me to congratulate you, most sincerely, upon your careful and objective analysis of the so-called "Medicare" proposal. I say "so-called" because the King-Anderson bill, which would if enacted put the federal government in the hospital and nursing home business, and which the sponsors have named "Medicare" would not, in fact, provide any sort of decent MEDICAL care for anyone. As we of the medical profession see it, the real purpose of this proposal is to put the federal government in control of hospitals, in control of those comparatively few doctors who are employed exclusively in hospitals, namely interns, post-graduate residents, and a few of those who specialized in x-ray, pathology, anesthesia, and physical medicine. It was designed, and so admitted by several of its original sponsors, as simply an entering wedge which they could later expand into a completely federally-controlled and operated system of government medicine, sometimes called "socialized medicine."

I cannot speak with any authority concerning the medical needs of all fifty states, but our Colorado Medical Society does know the situation in Colorado. In Colorado we have approximately 168,000 residents over age 65, and about one-third of them are unable to finance their own medical and hospital care. This third of our senior citizenship now receive both medical and necessary hospital care and nursing home care under our fine Old Age Pension Medical Care Program and the newer Medical Care for the Aged Program — the latter caring for those medically indigent persons who are ineligible for the Old Age Pension. Both of these programs are state operated, and are financed by both state and federal funds under the provisions of the Kerr-Mills Law enacted by Congress some five years ago. Prior to the enactment of the Kerr-Mills Law, our Colorado Old Age Pension Health and Medical Care Plan was financed entirely by the State of Colorado.

I hope you may find it worthwhile to remind your readers, also, that the benefits available to the aged in Colorado under existing programs are almost three times greater than those proposed under the King-Anderson so-called Medicare legislation. If it should be enacted, it would take many benefits away from Colorado's indigent and semi-indigent senior citizens, and give some of them to older persons who have no need for them.

In other words, why increase Social Security taxes against all wage earners in order to provide "free" hospital benefits to thousands of well-to-do individuals just because they have passed their 65th birthday — even though they are perfectly capable of paying for their care? And why, in doing so, take away from those who definitely need financial help with their medical and hospital expenses the help they are now receiving?

Colorado's medical care plans for the aged are not perfect; almost all doctors agree to that. The Colorado Medical Society will work with legislators in an endeavor to improve our state's implementation of the existing Kerr-Mills Law. The final decisions will have to be made by the legislature, but we will use every influence we possess to help. Similarly, the American Medical Association of which we are the Colorado "chapter" is proposing to Congress some sensible and financially sound improvements in the national Kerr-Mills Law, which would preserve America's free enterprise and free choice principles and provide a really sound program for federal financial participation in the health care of our aging population.

Editor's note: Thank you for the congratulations. While we sympathize with your position, we are sorry the Colorado Medical Society does not support complete free enterprise and free choice in medicine, instead of using a lesser degree of socialized medicine (the Kerr-Mills law and Colorado tax financing) to oppose a greater degree of socialized medicine. Any compromise with total socialism is partial socialism.

Question Box

(We invite questions on economics and the proper functions of government which will not injure anyone.)

Question No. 642: "One argument for federally and-or state controlled public education is that since we have a highly mobile population (families which move often), children should be taught the same subjects in the same grades so that no subject will be missed or duplicated upon possible transfer; also that a student should not be forced to repeat a grade which he has finished in another locality. Is there any validity to this argument?"

Answer: It depends upon what the parent expects his child to learn in school. If the parent wants his child to be "just like everyone else," with no individuality of his own, that is what he will want and get from a uniform course of study as ordered from above by some bureaucrat in Washington or the state capital. If he wants his child to develop as a thinking, self-responsible individual, he will seek a way which encourages his child to think for himself and act for himself.

We see no validity in forcing young people to submit to a course of study which the majority or the majority's agent decides is best for him. Only the youngster or his parent is in a position to know what is best for the youngster. When the state or federal government educationists (or even those on the local level) adopt a program for all the children, they must pattern it to the level of the least competent, or at best to what they consider to be 'normal." It allows no opportunity for the superior mind to grow.

However, if one must accept the fact that the government is to continue in the "education" business, the smaller the unit of government involved, the less injurious it is. A small school run by the parents of the pupils is more likely to meet the needs of the youngsters involved than a massive school system, where control is farther from those directly involved. The farther away the control is, the greater is the tendency for the schools to become "levelers." There could even be an advantage in competition between school districts.

Until there is a recognition that true education in moral principles can only come on a voluntary basis, however, the trend will continue toward larger and larger school systems and toward more and more control of the schools from some big governmental agency.

These points apply regardless of whether families are mobile or stationary.

Who's a Land Hog?

By RUFUS L. PORTER

Many people who disapprove of land speculators and call them "land hogs" because they buy up large acreages and hold them in the hope of future profits seem to think it is all right for the government, federal or state, to exercise the power of "eminent domain" and dispossess people of their homes or business properties.

The federal government, already holding 25 per cent of the land in the United States is busily acquiring more. And it does not give a hoot who it takes it from. In many cases it takes state - owned land over ths state's protests. This is an instance of the greater government being "more equal" than the lesser. And even the smallest branch of government, city or county, is more equal than any of the taxpayers, for they all have the power — they call it "right" — of eminent domain.

Land speculation is a legitimate business when practiced by an individual, but it has become a dirty word in these times. A man who buys land from another is an actor in a voluntary transaction. Nobody was coerced. The seller got his asking price. He desired the money more than the land. What the buyer does with the land is his own business. He pays taxes on it, sometimes for many years and unless he gets the proper breaks, a thing he was hoping for, he may lose money.

If he does get the breaks and is able to realize a handsome profit, it is because the new buyer wants the land more than he wants what it costs him.. Again, nobody was forced. It was a voluntary deal. The speculator had the land and the businessman, industrialist or the home builder bought it, at whatever price, for the same reason the speculator purchased it in the first place, because he expected to profit from it.

If the land in question was strategically located for the new buyer's purposes, the speculator had done him a favor by holding the land off the market. Otherwise he may have had to buy buildings and-or other improvements and remove them before he could use the land himself. An expensive procedure, as in the case of the Antlers Hotel.

Speculators are not land hogs, they are businessmen who serve a purpose in the scheme of things, in a free market, that is.

The real land hogs are the governments, especially the federal government. When the Air Force Academy was first talked of 16,000 acres was considered ample room for it. But before the government was satisfied, it had acquired some 45,000, much of it over the protests of the owners.

And now we have the example of Fort Carson, where the government already holds more land than it has ever put to use but is in the process of grabbing up 79,500 more acres of valuable mineral land. Much of this is state land from which the state has been getting considerable revenue from lessees who are mining fire clay and gypsum in the area. The state is protesting this new federal land grab. So are the lessees and the land owners, for some of it belongs to private parties.

But the bureaucrats in Washington are a bull-headed group and once they decide to do something it is considered sacrilegious to try to prevent them from doing it. They will probably go right ahead and ride roughshod over any who attempt to stand up for their property rights. We don't believe the government, any government, should own any land.

Land held by the government is nonproductive. It pays no taxes and it keeps the citizens from putting the land to good and profitable use from which the government would collect revenue. This does not mean that we believe the government SHOULD collect taxes, only that it would.

If the bureaucrats go ahead and grab those 79,000 plus acres and withhold mining privileges from the lessees and owners it will cause a few small industries to close down, thereby adding to the unemployment, and some of the bigger ones to go to greater expense to obtain their raw materials and thereby cause a rise in prices for their finished products.

When somebody says "land hog," think of the federal government. It owns half the land in the western states. It held out so much land in our 49th state of Alaska that it amounts to practically 100 per cent of the state. The amount owned by the citizens is just barely over 1 per cent, the rest is federal land. Poor little Alaska, if figured in terms of the land reserved for the people, it is smaller than Rhode Island. The "biggest state in the union" really isn't.

But at the rate the government is going it won't be too many years before it owns all the land everywhere — and that is what the socialists want.

Wit and Whimsy

Another Hershfield classic: A henpecked husband was only allowed to play in nickel-limit poker games. One night he broke bounds and lost twenty-five dollars. "My wife will kill me," he moaned to a friend. If you don't lend me the money, I'll never be able to go home."

His friend gave him the twenty-five dollars. A few moments later he was back. "I had a happy thought," he said. "Couldn't you lend me ten dollars more? I'd like to prove to her I was the big winner."

A man was shocked to read an item about his own death in the newspaper. He promptly called the newspaper.

He identified himself and then declared: "There was a story about my death in your paper today!"

Voice on Other End of Phone: "I see, where are you calling from?"

A woman was indignant when a policeman stopped her for speeding.

Woman: "How dare you sneak up behind me like that? I didn't even hear any siren."

Policeman: "Of course you didn't. You'd already passed through the sound barrier."

The Proper Role Of Government

We assumed that when George Blaisdell wrote us about the "proper" (rightful) role of government, he had in mind the concept of morality. A reading of his most recent letter, which appears in today's Open Parliament section, tends to confirm this view.

This is why we went to some pains to show that government cannot MORALLY perform any service for anyone without that person's expressed permission. Neither government nor any corporation or individual can RIGHTFULLY (morally) do anything for or to anyone unless that person agrees in advance.

But apparently we neglected to point out what is so obvious that we did not think it needed to be pointed out: that government, in conducting its retaliatory actions, commits aggression. And since Mr. Blaisdell agrees with us that aggression is wrong, it remains for us then to spell out why and how government's actions, presumed to be retaliatory, are in actual fact aggressive, and hence immoral and improper.

Government sets itself up, in theory, for purposes of making life and property safe from aggression. Splendid. This is a high purpose and obviously necessary. But government, by its nature, does not set itself up as a normal protection business would. It does not organize its resources with its own money and then go out seeking to attract customers of its services.

Instead, it sets itself up on the money of the taxpayers. Before government gets itself in any position to do anything, it makes a general assessment on all those who presumably are to benefit by whatever it does.

Thus, while in theory it is a protectionist, retaliatory agency, it begins its operations by attacking the very persons it professes that it will protect. Thus, in practice, ALL governments (not merely large and ungainly governments) begin by aggressing against the very persons they pretend to guard. They do not confine their forays to those who agree to purchase the services. Their forays are unconfined. And this is true whether the government is locally organized or organized outside a territory and then thrusts its way in and seizes control of the territory.

In reality, then, government wins support only of a portion of the people. It need be only a plurality in a modern democracy. Having obtained this support, which is almost always available, even if the government is alien and comes in from outside, it establishes a universal sway over everyone using as justification that it is "liberating" the people; or "protecting" them from disorder, riot, and every conceivable evil.

Having established its reign, the government enlarges and solidifies its control over the subject people. But it does not protect them from theft, rape or murder. If it did so, we might be more lenient in our evaluation. Rather, the people are still subject to theft, rape and murder, as statistical tables clearly establish. So all of the original aggression, by means of which the government finances itself, does not protect anyone, unless it be those in government.

Now the government waits in readiness until some citizen is PRIVATELY victimized. This is the second act of aggression which occurs under a government - managed community. First, all are victimized, generally, in the original taxation and control as it is established. Next, certain persons are left unprotected and criminal acts ensue, which they must patiently endure.

Finally, the government moves AFTER this second aggression occurs, and, if it can find enough evidence, properly identify the offending party, conduct a trial which establishes beyond doubt that a crime was committed and that the party being tried is the perpetrator, then the offender is punished. And to punish, a further foray occurs against all the people, who are again looted by the government so that the criminal can be housed and clothed and fed behind bars.

Thus, governments commit major acts of aggression against everyone, in an effort, not to protect, but to retaliate against individuals who commit minor acts of aggression.

The score is at least two acts of aggression by government to every one committed by a private party.

'TELL YOU WHAT I'LL DO'

Our Hearts Are Being Wrung

By BUTLER D. SHAFFER

In their views on the "poverty problem," the collectivist writers have been wringing our hearts with the old plea that ours is "an affluent society," one which has achieved a high level of economic production, and that our task must now be to "give" the impoverished a "greater share" of "the nation's" wealth. Such a view has, of course, been the inspiration for both the Kennedy and Johnson administration, and constitutes a re-expression of the socialist-collectivist premise that the life and property of a man are not his, but belong to "society," the group, to be done with as "society" dictates. Since "society" is nothing but an accumulation of men, the collectivist premise may be reduced to the concept that a man and his property belong not to himself, but to other men.

It has been postulated that the first thing any man ever "owned" was probably another man. The ownership of a human being is properly defined as "slavery," and most Americans are of the opinion that slavery went out of practice in this nation around 1865. Upon examination, however, it will be seen that the basic premise of slavery still lives; it is, in fact, the very life-blood of most of the programs recently announced by President Johnson.

When a man labors 40 hours a week only to have 25 per cent of what he has earned taken from him in the way of taxes, such a man is to that extent nothing more than a slave. He labors not for his own benefit, but so that another man may consume what he has produced, and which has been forcibly taken from the producer.

If a man voluntarily chooses to contribute some of his earnings to a less productive individual, he should certainly be free to do so, and because of the voluntary nature of the transaction, he cannot be considered to be a slave. But when a man is forcibly deprived of some of his earnings, against his will, so that another man may have the unearned benefit of his labors, there is no other way to describe such a system than as "slavery."

In a free society, a man has an absolute right to his own life and, consequently, an absolute right to work to sustain his life and to retain what he has produced. Since production is necessary to sustain the life of the producer, it follows that whenever a man has been deprived of what he has produced, an attack has been made upon the continued existence of the producer; his right to his own life is no longer considered absolute.

I have no quarrel with voluntary acts of altruism: if a man chooses to share his wealth with other men, that is his business. But I do argue with the proposition that a man must be "forced" to share his wealth. Such forced deprivation of property, far from ever amounting to a "great Society," bears the hallmark of a "slave society," and its advocates are neither more nor less than the philosophical off-spring of the jungle savages who, centuries ago, consumed their neighbor over a roaring fire.

Anyone who seeks to maintain his existence at the expense of someone else's labor is a parasite. Conversely, a parasite, in order to remain alive, must have a victim, and Lyndon Johnson's blueprint for the "Great Society" provides victims aplenty. Those who think that other men should be forced to produce for their benefit now have someone to champion their cause; someone to hold the victim steady while the blood is drained from him. It isn't that slavery was ever abolished in this country: it's only that more people have gotten in on the game.

Do It Better

If your competitor is doing a poor job of taking care of his customers, don't waste your time criticizing him. Rejoice. And demonstrate by your actions that you can do a better job than he can.

Aggression and Retaliation

If we are to be concerned with the "proper" (moral) role of government, we must begin by concerning ourselves with aggression. Aggression is patently immoral on its face and cannot be justified for any reason.

It should be noted that all persons, in or out of government, who do commit aggression, seek to justify their actions. This is not the exclusive perrogative of the private criminal.

But if we are to employ logic, and we know of no other rational tool for this examination, we must begin by discounting ALL justifications. If aggression is immoral, and Mr. Blaisdell appears to agree with us that it is, then ANY justification by means of which it is employed must logically be discarded.

We have only, then, to define aggression and to examine separate acts which are committed to see if they fit the definition.

By aggression, we mean in our discussion an UNPROVOKED act of physical violence, wherein the rights of an individual (or group) are disregarded, to the end that the victim of the act is made to suffer property damage or bodily harm or deprivation. We specify that the act, to qualify as aggressive, must be unprovoked. If provocation has occurred, then a debate might ensue as to whether or not the action taken afterward were justified. We assume that aggression refers ONLY to acts of UNPROVOKED violation for which no possible justification can be offered.

Thus, the mere availability of a victim cannot be viewed as justification. Nor can the wealth of the victim, nor his condition in life, nor his geographic location, be viewed as any possible justification.

We assume that a condition of peace and tranquility exists between the victim and the aggressor, until the aggressor acts. That is, the victim has done NOTHING AT ALL to provoke an attack upon his person or property.

Here is a bank. A bank robber schemes and plots how he will enter and appropriate money. His act is aggressive. The bank (we assume) has done nothing to him whatever. We rule out an act by a man who may have had a mortgage foreclosed (which probably should have been foreclosed). We introduce the criminal, the aggressor, who, merely because the bank is there and he covets what is in it, performs an act of violence of one sort or another to get his hands on what he covets.

A man, motivated by a foreclosure, might be construed as seeking vengeance. That is, he is retaliating. But most bank robbers do not fall into this classification. They are aggressors in the pure and simple meaning of the terms.

But how are we to classify a government? Here is a group of men who have not been harmed at all by the people they propose to rule. The people are proceeding in an orderly manner, conducting their private affairs. A few among them (a plurality) desires a government. The men who are to serve as the government, then, using the approval of the plurality as a justification, suddenly descend upon ALL the people in the area (geographic convenience) and take a certain portion of the money of everyone. The amounts they take vary as to the condition in life, the amount of the wealth available for taking. Those in some businesses (condition in life) pay heavily. Those with much have much taken (condition of wealth). The victimizing occurs with the justification that since some want it to happen, all must experience it.

By any logical rules to be used, the act of a government in taking money from all the people is aggressive. The fact that the taking is sanctioned by a group of persons does not justify the taking from those who do not favor the procedure.

If a group of Mr. Blaisdell's "friends" get together and decide that they have a right to some of his earnings, and proceed to take those earnings from him, the act is aggressive. If they protest that they are doing this to "protect" him, the act is still aggressive. If they say that they take his money to make him orderly and to compel his obedience to their decrees, the act is still aggressive. If Mr. Blaisdell agrees in advance to the procedure, then this is not aggressive. But for every act of this nature in this nation, wherein one has agreed to be victimized, there have always been at least two who did not.

Mr. Blaisdell is, we believe, placed in the position of saying that because he wants the government to retaliate for him (an end), he is willing to accept governmental aggression (a means). And since he appears to agree that aggression is immoral, it follows that he is willing to accept an immoral means, in order to obtain what to him is a desirable end. Thus, he is saying that the end justifies the means. This is a fundamental contradiction in logic.

Now the fact is that what we all really want is not retaliation but protection. The very concept of retaliation holds to the premise that before retaliation occurs, some act of aggression must have occurred. Thus, the present system requires a victimizing of innocent people before retaliation occurs. If retaliation occurs in advance of victimizing, then by definition it is not retaliation, but aggression.

Now it happens that protection can be and often is obtained in the market. But Mr. Blaisdell is correct if retaliation (which depends on prior aggression) is his goal. Retaliation, retribution, punishment and vengeance are peculiarly suited to governments. The market place cannot provide them.

If Mr. Blaisdell would like our views on retaliation, they have been privately published and are available through Rampart College. There are two booklets in the PINE TREE series covering this matter and they may be obtained at $1.00 each from PINE TREE PRESS, Box 165, Colorado Springs.

GOVERNMENT'S ROLE

To the editor:

I do not know what you were trying to accomplish by your January 10 editorials, "The Question of Rights" and "Government as a Contracting Party." What, in fact, you did accomplish was a beautiful evasion of the issue raised: What is the proper role of government in an individualist, capialist, and free society? You stated, "if government has a 'proper' (rightful) role to fulfill, it would be the role of a contracting party." I stated, "It should be the proper role of government to act as a retaliatory force, internally and externally, against the initiation of force; no more and no less." It is safe to assume that at least one of us is wrong.

If we assume that government's only role should be that of a contracting party, then only those who enter into the contract are bound by it. (As you stated about contracts). It must follow that those who do not enter into (sign) this contract are not bound by it and may kill, rob, rape and vandalize without fear of government interference. After all, government would have nothing to say, as no contract had been signed. If justice were to exist, it would have to be accomplished by individuals in the society (feudalis). However, according to this "contract" morality; justice could not morally exist, as the victims would not have signed a contract with their murderers!

I cannot agree with this absurdity, nor remain silent about it. Now I did not say, either explicitly or implicitly, as you stated I said, that "By some process, apparently a metaphysical process, some men (government) obtain a rightful power to intrude upon the rights of other men (not in government) and that this is the proper (rightful) role for government." I stated, "Rights are, because of the nature of man, a metaphysical necessity, as are food, water and oxygen . . . The only way to violate a right is by the use of physical force and its byproducts, including theft and fraud. It should be the proper role of government to act as a retaliatory force, internally and externally, against the initiation of force, no more and no less." This places the government in the role of a protector, not a creator (as you wrongly quoted me), of individual human rights.

It is obvious that when a person INITIATES the use of force against another, he forfeits his rights to the extent of his confiscation of the other person's rights. Thus, government retaliatory action here would not take away any rights which the individual, by his action, had not already renounced.

Remember what the issue is. It is not, "What have governments considered their proper function," or "What do they now consider their proper function?" The issue is, "What SHOULD their proper function be?" Admittedly, governments today are stepping boldly beyond their proper roles. In this discussion, this is not the issue.

SUNDAY BUSINESSES?

To the Editor:

A number of people in this area have been following with interest the different views concerning a law that would enforce closing of businesses on Sunday.

I'd like to present a few thoughts that interested and concerned individuals might wish to consider as they evaluate their own attitude and practice in this matter.

1. When Christianity began it was entered into by individuals on a voluntary basis.

2. The Ten Commandments (Decalogue) were given specifically to the children of Israel (Exodus 20:1,2), along with approximately 600 other laws:

3. The Commandment to keep the Sabbath day holy is not repeated as instruction in the writings of the New Testament to Christians.

4. The Christians of the first century church began the tradition of meeting on the first day of the week (Acts 20:7 and 1 Galatians 4:8-11).

5. Instruction is given to Christians not to judge others concerning particular days but to be fully persuaded in their own minds in regards to their conduct (Romans 14:5-12 and Galatians 4:8-11).

6. No teaching or practice of Christ and His disciples authorizes the idea of calling on civil authorities to enforce Christian religious observances upon non-Christian people.

7. The mingling of Old Testament laws (moral, civil, or ceremonial) with the Christians new life in Christ was to be discontinued (Galations Chapter 3,4).

The view, held by some that Christians have authority to dominate the civil government and enforce their religious practices upon non-Christians prior to Christ's personal return, will lead to serious difficulties and unnecessary sufferings.

In summary, I believe we ought to follow the New Testament tradition of observing the first day of the week as a day of rest and workship on a voluntary basis and refrain from judging others regarding their particular views and practices in this matter. I, also, do not believe we should seek to enforce a civil law upon others and especially upon those who do not follow the Christian way of life.

MEDICARE

To the Editor:

Your editorial entitled "No Reason for Medicare" which appeared in your January 5 edition has just been called to my attention.

Allow me to congratulate you, most sincerely, upon your careful and objective analysis of the so-called "Medicare" proposal. I say "so-called" because the King-Anderson bill, which would if enacted put the federal government in the hospital and nursing home business, and which the sponsors have named "Medicare" would not, in fact, provide any sort of decent MEDICAL care for anyone. As we of the medical profession see it, the real purpose of this proposal is to put the federal government in control of hospitals, in control of those comparatively few doctors who are employed exclusively in hospitals, namely interns, post-graduate residents, and a few of those who specialized in x-ray, pathology, anesthesia, and physical medicine. It was designed, and so admitted by several of its original sponsors, as simply an entering wedge which they could later expand into a completely federally-controlled and operated system of government medicine, sometimes called "socialized medicine."

I cannot speak with any authority concerning the medical needs of all fifty states, but our Colorado Medical Society does know the situation in Colorado. In Colorado we have approximately 168,000 residents over age 65, and about one-third of them are unable to finance their own medical and hospital care. This third of our senior citizenship now receive both medical and necessary hospital care and nursing home care under our fine Old Age Pension Medical Care Program and the newer Medical Care for the Aged Program — the latter caring for those medically indigent persons who are ineligible for the Old Age Pension. Both of these programs are state operated, and are financed by both state and federal funds under the provisions of the Kerr-Mills Law enacted by Congress some five years ago. Prior to the enactment of the Kerr-Mills Law, our Colorado Old Age Pension Health and Medical Care Plan was financed entirely by the State of Colorado.

I hope you may find it worthwhile to remind your readers, also, that the benefits available to the aged in Colorado under existing programs are almost three times greater than those proposed under the King-Anderson so-called Medicare legislation. If it should be enacted, it would take many benefits away from Colorado's indigent and semi-indigent senior citizens, and give some of them to older persons who have no need for them.

In other words, why increase Social Security taxes against all wage earners in order to provide "free" hospital benefits to thousands of well-to-do individuals just because they have passed their 65th birthday — even though they are perfectly capable of paying for their care? And why, in doing so, take away from those who definitely need financial help with their medical and hospital expenses the help they are now receiving?

Colorado's medical care plans for the aged are not perfect; almost all doctors agree to that. The Colorado Medical Society will work with legislators in an endeavor to improve our state's implementation of the existing Kerr-Mills Law. The final decisions will have to be made by the legislature, but we will use every influence we possess to help. Similarly, the American Medical Association of which we are the Colorado "chapter" is proposing to Congress some sensible and financially sound improvements in the national Kerr-Mills Law, which would preserve America's free enterprise and free choice principles and provide a really sound program for federal financial participation in the health care of our aging population.

Editor's note: Thank you for the congratulations. While we sympathize with your position, we are sorry the Colorado Medical Society does not support complete free enterprise and free choice in medicine, instead of using a lesser degree of socialized medicine (the Kerr-Mills law and Colorado tax financing) to oppose a greater degree of socialized medicine. Any compromise with total socialism is partial socialism.

Question Box

Question No. 642: "One argument for federally and-or state controlled public education is that since we have a highly mobile population (families which move often), children should be taught the same subjects in the same grades so that no subject will be missed or duplicated upon possible transfer; also that a student should not be forced to repeat a grade which he has finished in another locality. Is there any validity to this argument?"

Answer: It depends upon what the parent expects his child to learn in school. If the parent wants his child to be "just like everyone else," with no individuality of his own, that is what he will want and get from a uniform course of study as ordered from above by some bureaucrat in Washington or the state capital. If he wants his child to develop as a thinking, self-responsible individual, he will seek a way which encourages his child to think for himself and act for himself.

We see no validity in forcing young people to submit to a course of study which the majority or the majority's agent decides is best for him. Only the youngster or his parent is in a position to know what is best for the youngster. When the state or federal government educationists (or even those on the local level) adopt a program for all the children, they must pattern it to the level of the least competent, or at best to what they consider to be 'normal." It allows no opportunity for the superior mind to grow.

However, if one must accept the fact that the government is to continue in the "education" business, the smaller the unit of government involved, the less injurious it is. A small school run by the parents of the pupils is more likely to meet the needs of the youngsters involved than a massive school system, where control is farther from those directly involved. The farther away the control is, the greater is the tendency for the schools to become "levelers." There could even be an advantage in competition between school districts.

Until there is a recognition that true education in moral principles can only come on a voluntary basis, however, the trend will continue toward larger and larger school systems and toward more and more control of the schools from some big governmental agency.

Those points apply regardless of whether families are mobile or stationary.

The Local Scene

Who's a Land Hog?

By RUFUS L. PORTER

Many people who disapprove of land speculators and call them "land hogs" because they buy up large acreages and hold them in the hope of future profits seem to think it is all right for the government, federal or state, to exercise the power of "eminent domain" and dispossess people of their homes or business properties.

The federal government, already holding 25 per cent of the land in the United States is busily acquiring more. And it does not give a hoot who it takes it from. In many cases it takes state - owned land over ths state's protests. This is an instance of the greater government being "more equal" than the lesser. And even the smallest branch of government, city or county, is more equal than any of the taxpayers, for they all have the power — they call it "right" — of eminent domain.

Land speculation is a legitimate business when practiced by an individual, but it has become a dirty word in these times. A man who buys land from another is an actor in a voluntary transaction. Nobody was coerced. The seller got his asking price. He desired the money more than the land. What the buyer does with the land is his own business. He pays taxes on it, sometimes for many years and unless he gets the proper breaks, a thing he was hoping for, he may lose money.

If he does get the breaks and is able to realize a handsome profit, it is because the new buyer wants the land more than he wants what it costs him.. Again, nobody was forced. It was a voluntary deal. The speculator had the land and the businessman, industrialist or the home builder bought it, at whatever price, for the same reason the speculator purchased it in the first place, because he expected to profit from it.

If the land in question was strategically located for the new buyer's purposes, the speculator had done him a favor by holding the land off the market. Otherwise he may have had to buy buildings and-or other improvements and remove them before he could use the land himself. An expensive procedure, as in the case of the Antlers Hotel.

Speculators are not land hogs, they are businessmen who serve a purpose in the scheme of things, in a free market, that is.

The real land hogs are the governments, especially the federal government. When the Air Force Academy was first talked of 16,000 acres was considered ample room for it. But before the government was satisfied, it had acquired some 45,000, much of it over the protests of the owners.

And now we have the example of Fort Carson, where the government already holds more land than it has ever put to use but is in the process of grabbing up 79,500 more acres of valuable mineral land. Much of this is state land from which the state has been getting considerable revenue from lessees who are mining fire clay and gypsum in the area. The state is protesting this new federal land grab. So are the lessees and the land owners, for some of it belongs to private parties.

But the bureaucrats in Washington are a bull-headed group and once they decide to do something it is considered sacrilegious to try to prevent them from doing it. They will probably go right ahead and ride roughshod over any who attempt to stand up for their property rights. We don't believe the government, any government, should own any land.

Land held by the government is nonproductive. It pays no taxes and it keeps the citizens from putting the land to good and profitable use from which the government would collect revenue. This does not mean that we believe the government SHOULD collect taxes, only that it would.

If the bureaucrats go ahead and grab those 79,000 plus acres and withhold mining privileges from the lessees and owners it will cause a few small industries to close down, thereby adding to the unemployment, and some of the bigger ones to go to greater expense to obtain their raw materials and thereby cause a rise in prices for their finished products.

When somebody says "land hog," think of the federal government. It owns half the land in the western states. It held out so much land in our 49th state of Alaska that it amounts to practically 100 per cent of the state. The amount owned by the citizens is just barely over 1 per cent, the rest is federal land. Poor little Alaska, if figured in terms of the land reserved for the people, it is smaller than Rhode Island. The "biggest state in the union" really isn't.

But at the rate the government is going it won't be too many years before it owns all the land everywhere — and that is what the socialists want.

Wit and Whimsy

Another Hershfield classic: A henpecked husband was only allowed to play in nickel-limit poker games. One night he broke bounds and lost twenty-five dollars. "My wife will kill me," he moaned to a friend. If you don't lend me the money, I'll never be able to go home."

His friend gave him the twenty-five dollars. A few moments later he was back. "I had a happy thought," he said. "Couldn't you lend me ten dollars more? I'd like to prove to her I was the big winner."

A man was shocked to read an item about his own death in the newspaper. He promptly called the newspaper.

He identified himself and then declared: "There was a story about my death in your paper today!"

Voice on Other End of Phone: "I see, where are you calling from?"

A woman was indignant when a policeman stopped her for speeding.

Woman: "How dare you sneak up behind me like that? I didn't even hear any siren."

Policeman: "Of course you didn't. You'd already passed through the sound barrier."

Groundbreaking Marks New Bank Building Start

Ground-breaking ceremonies Tuesday afternoon marked the construction start of the Academy Boulevard Bank in the Rustic Hills Plaza, 1415 Academy Boulevard.

The new building, to be constructed at an estimated cost of $215,000, by the Bickley Construction Co., is located on a 1.66 acre tract south of the fire station No. seven in the 1400 block between the north and south bound lanes of Academy Boulevard.

Designed by Denver architects More-Combs-Burch, the building will feature a drive-in facility at the east and west side of the building with facilities for and additional four drive-in windows to be installed in the future.

It is estimated by the builders the building can be opened for business June 18 of this year.

The unit will feature 63 parking places asphalted and striped, enhanced by rustic landscaping including large silver maple trees, grass, low-lying shrubbery punctuated with natural rock, stone and driftwood arrangements.

The basement of the two story building will contain a community room to be open for public meetings, at no cost.

The main floor, containing 4,-800 square feet will house the interior part of the drive-in facilities, teller cages executive offices and a directors' meeting room.

The section floor, also with 4,-800 square feet, will contain the offices of the Smartt Construction Co; The Smartt Development Co., and the Austin Realty Co.

In addition there will be 1,500 square feet of additional space devoted to office rental.

The new bank building, of contemporary design both inside and out, will be constructed of glass and poured, pre-cast concrete supplemented by iron filigree and brick veneer. The flat roof will be composed of lightweight, pre-cast, white concrete.

Inside offices and teller cages will be adorned with walnut paneling, wall-to-wall carpeting, recessed lighting, ceiling sound proofing, air conditioning in summer, and hot water heating in winter.

Other of the bank's facilities will include an IBM computer system and touch tone telephones.

Executive office of the bank is Robert Skinner, also vice president of the Central Colorado Bank.

Directors include:

Glen W. Anderson, telephone company general manager; Nort Bain, Bains clothing; John Buemer, Ampex general manager of the Colorado Springs Division; Cortland Cool, attorney; Kenneth Erickson, vice president of Kaman Nuclear; G. W. Griffin, president of the Central Colorado Bank; Paul Schneebeck, president of Schneebeck Industries; B. H. Smartt, president of the Smartt Construction Co; Joseph Pieper, Pieper Drug Stores owner; and Harold Whitney, president of the Whitney Electric Co.

Smartt, in announcing the construction of the bank in the Rustic Hills Shopping Center area, said that in his belief the bank will provide a needed and convienent service especially to persons living in the east section of the city.

Other officers of the bank will be elected at director meeting in the near future, Smartt said.

First Federal Assets Exceed $25 Million

The annual meeting of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association was held Wednesday at 2 p.m. At that time Donald W. Nienhuser, executive vice president of the firm, presented the attached report stating the progress and growth of the financial institution during 1964.

At that time Nienhuser was re-elected as a director to serve for a three year term. Holdover directors are: E. Bland Cresap, J. J. Dern, Dr. J. J. Mahoney, Dr. E. L. Timmons, and Bernie E. White.

Following the annual meeting, the board of directors held their first meeting for 1965, and re-elected the same officers who have served the institution for the past year. They are: Dr. E. L. Timmons, president; Dr. J. J. Mahoney, vice president; Donald W. Nienhuser, executive vice president; Mitchell M. Wright, secretary treasurer; Lee Givens, loan officer and assistant secretary.

The following is the company report:

Another year of progress and growth was enjoyed by the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Colorado Springs during 1964, with year-end assets reaching an all - time high of $25,152,491.73, representing a growth in excess of three million for the year, or an increase of 14 per cent. Total assets of the Association during the past ten year period have increased from five million dollars to the present twenty five million dollar category.

During 1964 a total of over 7½ million dollars was loaned to well qualified borrowers on desirable properties located in the Pikes Peak area. Although the Association was unabl to retain all of the loans originated, and therefore many were sold to other investors, total loans outstanding at the end of 1964 were $21,861,697.07 or an increase of $2,729,000 over December 31, 1963.

First Federal Savings and Loan depends almost entirely on public savings for the resources with which we make home mortgage loans throughout the community. During 1964, net savings gains, the amount by which new savings exceeded withdrawals, totalled $2,625,000, bringing total savings at the end of the year to $20,892,-201.55. The substantial growth of savings held by this institution and others within our community is strong evidence of the community's basic prosperity

Because of our growth in total savings, and the continued high return on savings paid by this institution, we have once again distributed record total dividends to our savers in 1964.

Dividend payments totalled $811,578.08, based on the rate of 4¼ per cent per annum for the first half of 1964, and an increase ot 4½ per cent per annum for the last half of the year. The protection provided by the F.S.L.I.C., by insuring each account up to $10,000.00, supplements the careful discretion exercised by the Association's officers and staff.

During 1964, First Federal made appropriate additions to its substantial reserve accounts in an amount of nearly $210,-000.00, bringing total reserves and undivided profits to a new high of $1,594,775.11.

Our present reserves total 7.63 per cent of total savings accounts, well above the minimum requirements set by supervisory authorities. Present liquid reserves total 11.9 per cent of savings, also in excess of regulatory requirements. The general reserve accounts and the liquidity reserve accounts of First Federal continue to emphasize the financial strength and soundness of the institution, now beginning its 32nd year of service to this community.

Last February our application for a branch office was placed on file, and it was approved by Federal authorities without either protest or a hearing. Architectural plans are now being completed and it is anticipated that construction contracts will be awarded by March 1, with the Association's facilities being ready for occupancy on July 1, 1965.

That branch office located at 2502 East Pikes Peak Avenue, adjacent to the new Pikes Peak Plaza and Montgomery Ward developments, will undoubtedly prove to be most advantageous in advancing the service and growth of First Federal.

Because this firm is essentially a service organization, its most important resource, therefore, is the skill and courtesy of its management and staff members. Our staff of sixteen members is most loyal, and together we share the privilege of serving our customers to the best of our abilities.

First Federal Savings and Loan Association expects continued growth in its savings and mortgage lending activities in the year ahead. We are optimistic about our local economy as our national economists predict continued business growth, due in part to wise decsions on the part of both government and private business. The continuation of a moderately rapid rate of business growth during 1965 seems inevitable.

"Personally, I am grateful for my association with First Federal for the past 18 years, serving as your executive officer for the past ten years. It is indeed a pleasure for me to share the accomplishments during those years with both our many thousand customers, and our own directors and staff," Nienhuser said.

Hewlett-Packard To Pay Common Stock Dividend

The board of directors of Hewlett-Packard Company announced it has adopted a policy of paying dividends on the company's common stock. The dividends will be paid on a semi-annual basis, according to David Packard, board chairman.

Packard said the first semi-annual dividend, amounting to 10 cents a share is payable April 15 to stockholders of record April 1.

Hewlett-Packard, a major manufacturer of electronic test and measuring equipment, was founded as a partnership in 1939 and incorporated in 1947.

This is the first time the company has paid a dividend on common stock since the stock was initially offered to the public in 1957.

There are now approximately 11,500,000 shares of common stock outstanding. These shares are traded on the New York and Pacific Coast stock exchanges.

Packard noted that the company has grown steadily since its founding, and now has some 7,500 employees and 18,000 stockholders. In its last fiscal year, ended Oct. 31, 1964, the firm reported sales of $124.9 million and net earnings of $9.4 million. Its earnirigs per share of common stock were 78 cents, compared with 60 cents per share in 1963."

Expenditures for personal health care totaled more than $28.5 billion last year compared to slightly more than $3.3 billion in 1928-29.

Tax on Tax Works Just As Well as Tax on Bread

By SAM CAMPBELL

Ralph Kay, 12331 Gamma St., Garden Grove, bought a tire that was advertised for $12.07, but it cost him $14.56. He called this department to complain.

According to his figures, he paid $1.93 additional on the $12.07 as excise tax. That brought the price up to $14 even. Then he was charged an additional 56 cents as sales tax on the $14, bringing the grand total out-of-pocket to $14.56.

The four per cent sales tax paid on the excise tax is what sent Ralph past the boiling point. Why, he wants to know, should we have to pay tax on a tax?

That's a good question. But actually, Ralph has understated his case. He did not mention that the $14.56 he finally spent for the tire originally was $18 in his payroll account. However, before he got the $18, approximately $3.44 was deducted as income tax.

Then also the rubber in the tire was taxed before it became part of the tire. So that amount had to be added into the price. Also the factory building where the tire was made, the warehouse where it was stored, and the store which shelved it all were taxed in advance of the sale. These taxes, too, had to be added into the final price that Ralph paid. They are part of the $14.56 that Ralph paid.

The point is that a tax on a tax is not a new idea. Rather, it's an old idea.

And why not pay a tax on tax? If taxes are good, the tax-tax? If taxes are good, the

But if taxes are wrong, the fact that Ralph drew a pair back-to-back doesn't make it any wronger.

Let's look at the matter from the tax-spender's point of view. This chap wants to spend other people's money. He gets a good feeling out of spending because he spends for the other fellow's best interest, according to his own interpretation of what that interest is. So he submits a budget. After that, it's up to the taxers to come up with the dough.

What does the tax-spender care whether the tax falls on bread, milk, rubber, tires, income, or on some previous tax? As long as it brings in revenue to buy him a ticket on the gravy train, one tax works as well as any other.

In his exasperation, Ralph suggested formation of a special bureau to be sure the office holders do their job. Unfortunately that's exactly what the Legislature is supposed to be, but the system just hasn't worked out.

A simpler suggestion has been to abolish the general fund. That way each government agency could spend only what it is able to take in. Those agencies that didn't have any customers would cease to exist. Those that provided a good service would flourish to the extent warranted by their revenues.

Under the existing system, all agencies dip into the same pot. So many of them continue to survive even though they provide no service that anyone desires to buy.

Pentagon Arms Complex Now Ready for Leasing

The three story structure contains 36 units furnished and unfurnished, including three, three bedroom suits, nine, two bedroom and 24 one bedroom units.

Owner is Roy C. McClurg, a retailer in Indiana and Ohio. James A. Smith, James Smith Enterprises Inc., co-ordinated the entire project including acquisition of land, financing and constructed bids.

The structure was designed and built by Godwin-Bevers, general contractors.

The building's ground floor is at garden level and the three bedroom apartments contain 840 square feet. The two bedroom areas contain 690 square feet, the one bedroom 470 square feet.

Each apartment is enhanced by nylon wall-to-wall carpetding, contemporary styled furniture if desired, rich walnut wood panels, bends of modern color drapery fabrics, Scotchguard treated, and a new concept in wall decor, featuring Whittlestone with sculptured glass.

In addition there are ceramic tiled baths with showers, laundry facilities on each floor, separate spacious storage space for each apartment on the same floor with the apartments, plus General Electric ranges and refrigerators in the kitchens.

The kitchens are efficient with generous cabinet space including lazy-susan corner cabinet and built-in breakfast bars.

Individual heating and ventilating systems are part of each unit as are sound - resistent floors, ceilings and walls. The heating and water utilities are furnished with the apartment rental cost.

Outside the apartments, the off street parking areas are asphalted and striped and supplemented by lawn, trees, shrubs and a shuffleboard area.

Prospective residents have a choice of north, east, south or west window exposures in the units.

Mowery, C. Gilbert, architect with Godwin-Bevers, reports the structure was completed in four months. He also said plans were being formulated for building a similar apartment house in the same residential neighborhood, approximately one block west.

Resident managers for the new par apartments are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Nordgulen who will offer 24 hour maintenance service.

Leasing of the apartments is being handled by Betty Rogers of James Smith Enterprises Inc.

The substantial growth of savings held by this institution and others within our community is strong evidence of the community's basic prosperity

Because of our growth in total savings, and the continued high return on savings paid by this institution, we have once again distributed record total dividends to our savers in 1964.

Dividend payments totalled $811,578.08, based on the rate of 4¼ per cent per annum for the first half of 1964, and an increase ot 4½ per cent per annum for the last half of the year. The protection provided by the F.S.L.I.C., by insuring each account up to $10,000.00, supplements the careful discretion exercised by the Association's officers and staff.

During 1964, First Federal made appropriate additions to its substantial reserve accounts in an amount of nearly $210,-000.00, bringing total reserves and undivided profits to a new high of $1,594,775.11.

Our present reserves total 7.63 per cent of total savings accounts, well above the minimum requirements set by supervisory authorities. Present liquid reserves total 11.9 per cent of savings, also in excess of regulatory requirements. The general reserve accounts and the liquidity reserve accounts of First Federal continue to emphasize the financial strength and soundness of the institution, now beginning its 32nd year of service to this community.

Last February our application for a branch office was placed on file, and it was approved by Federal authorities without either protest or a hearing. Architectural plans are now being completed and it is anticipated that construction contracts will be awarded by March 1, with the Association's facilities being ready for occupancy on July 1, 1965.

That branch office located at 2502 East Pikes Peak Avenue, adjacent to the new Pikes Peak Plaza and Montgomery Ward developments, will undoubtedly prove to be most advantageous in advancing the service and growth of First Federal.

Because this firm is essentially a service organization, its most important resource, therefore, is the skill and courtesy of its management and staff members. Our staff of sixteen members is most loyal, and together we share the privilege of serving our customers to the best of our abilities.

First Federal Savings and Loan Association expects continued growth in its savings and mortgage lending activities in the year ahead. We are optimistic about our local economy as our national economists predict continued business growth, due in part to wise decsions on the part of both government and private business. The continuation of a moderately rapid rate of business growth during 1965 seems inevitable.

"Personally, I am grateful for my association with First Federal for the past 18 years, serving as your executive officer for the past ten years. It is indeed a pleasure for me to share the accomplishments during those years with both our many thousand customers, and our own directors and staff," Nienhuser said.

Hewlett-Packard To Pay Common Stock Dividend

The board of directors of Hewlett-Packard Company announced it has adopted a policy of paying dividends on the company's common stock. The dividends will be paid on a semi-annual basis, according to David Packard, board chairman.

Packard said the first semi-annual dividend, amounting to 10 cents a share is payable April 15 to stockholders of record April 1.

Hewlett-Packard, a major manufacturer of electronic test and measuring equipment, was founded as a partnership in 1939 and incorporated in 1947.

This is the first time the company has paid a dividend on common stock since the stock was initially offered to the public in 1957.

There are now approximately 11,500,000 shares of common stock outstanding. These shares are traded on the New York and Pacific Coast stock exchanges.

Packard noted that the company has grown steadily since its founding, and now has some 7,500 employees and 18,000 stockholders. In its last fiscal year, ended Oct. 31, 1964, the firm reported sales of $124.9 million and net earnings of $9.4 million. Its earnigs per share of common stock were 78 cents, compared with 60 cents per share in 1963."

Expenditures for personal health care totaled more than $38.5 billion last year compared to slightly more than $3.3 billion in 1928-29.

Tax on Tax Works Just As Well as Tax on Bread

By SAM CAMPBELL

Ralph Kay, 12331 Gamma St., Garden Grove, bought a tire that was advertised for $12.07, but it cost him $14.56. He called this department to complain.

According to his figures, he paid $1.93 additional on the $12.07 as excise tax. That brought the price up to $14 even. Then he was charged an additional 56 cents as sales tax on the $14, bringing the grand total out-of-pocket to $14.56.

The four per cent sales tax paid on the excise tax is what sent Ralph past the boiling point. Why, he wants to know, should we have to pay tax on a tax?

That's a good question. But actually, Ralph has understated his case. He did not mention that the $14.56 he finally spent for the tire originally was $18 in his payroll account. However, before he got the $18, approximately $3.44 was deducted as income tax.

Then also the rubber in the tire was taxed before it became part of the tire. So that amount had to be added into the price. Also the factory building where the tire was made, the warehouse where it was stored, and the store which shelved it all were taxed in advance of the sale. These taxes, too, had to be added into the final price that Ralph paid. They are part of the $14.56 that Ralph paid.

The point is that a tax on a tax is not a new idea. Rather, it's an old idea.

And why not pay a tax on tax? If taxes are good, the tax-tax? If taxes are good, the

But if taxes are wrong, the fact that Ralph drew a pair back-to-back doesn't make it any wronger.

Let's look at the matter from the tax-spender's point of view. This chap wants to spend other people's money. He gets a good feeling out of spending because he spends for the other fellow's best interest, according to his own interpretation of what that interest is. So he submits a budget. After that, it's up to the taxers to come up with the dough.

What does the tax-spender care whether the tax falls on bread, milk, rubber, tires, income, or on some previous tax? As long as it brings in revenue to buy him a ticket on the gravy train, one tax works as well as any other.

In his exasperation, Ralph suggested formation of a special bureau to be sure the office holders do their job. Unfortunately that's exactly what the Legislature is supposed to be, but the system just hasn't worked out.

A simpler suggestion has been to abolish the general fund. That way each government agency could spend only what it is able to take in. Those agencies that didn't have any customers would cease to exist. Those that provided a good service would flourish to the extent warranted by their revenues.

Under the existing system, all agencies dip into the same pot. So many of them continue to survive even though they provide no service that anyone desires to buy.

Pentagon Arms Complex Now Ready for Leasing

The three story structure contains 36 units furnished and unfurnished, including three, three bedroom suits, nine, two bedroom and 24 one bedroom units.

Owner is Roy C. McClurg, a retailer in Indiana and Ohio. James A. Smith, James Smith Enterprises Inc., co-ordinated the entire project including acquisition of land, financing and constructed bids.

The structure was designed and built by Godwin-Bevers, general contractors.

The building's ground floor is at garden level and the three bedroom apartments contain 940 square feet. The two bedroom areas contain 690 square feet, the one bedroom 470 square feet.

Each apartment is enhanced by nylon wall-to-wall carpetding, contemporary styled furniture if desired, rich walnut wood panels, bends of modern color drapery fabrics, Scotchguard treated, and a new concept in wall decor, featuring Whittlestone with sculptured glass.

In addition there are ceramic tiled baths with showers, laundry facilities on each floor, separate spacious storage space for each apartment on the same floor with the apartments, plus General Electric ranges and refrigerators in the kitchens.

The kitchens are efficient with generous cabinet space including lazy-susan corner cabinet and built-in breakfast bars.

Individual heating and ventilating systems are part of each unit as are sound - resistent floors, ceilings and walls. The heating and water utilities are furnished with the apartment rental cost.

Outside the apartments, the off street parking areas are asphalted and striped and supplemented by lawn, trees, shrubs and a shuffleboard area.

Prospective residents have a choice of north, east, south or west window exposures in the units.

Mowery, C. Gilbert, architect with Godwin-Bevers, reports the structure was completed in four months. He also said plans were being formulated for building a similar apartment house in the same residential neighborhood, approximately one block west.

Resident managers for the new par apartments are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Nordgulen who will offer 24 hour maintenance service.

Leasing of the apartments is being handled by Betty Rogers of James Smith Enterprises Inc.

NOW LEASING — The recently completed Pentagon Arms Apartments, at Bijou and Iowa Streets, are now being leased through James A. Smith Enterprises. Built by Godwin-Bevers Co., the 36 unit apartment house brick veneer construction with a colonial entrance. Each apartment has its own individual heating and ventilating systems. A similar structure is planned for the corner one block west of Pentagon Arms, also to be built under the supervision of Godwin-Bevers Co. (Gazette Telegraph Photo)

ESM Announces Appointment of New Sales Mgr.

Stuart Loosley, president, Electronic Systems Management, Inc. recently announced the appointment of Peter H. Gulick to the staff as sales manager.

Gulick was in the class of 1955 at Dartmouth College and graduated with a degree in physics. After serving two years in the USAF, he returned to Dartmouth and earned his Masters Degree in mechanical engineering.

Gulick began his career with General Electric Company as a test engineer in the jet engine division. For the past five years, he has been associated with The Mitre Corporation where he was directly involved with the computer system design for the Cheyenne Mountain NORAD COC.

Gulick moved to Colorado Springs in June 1963. He and his wife, Sue, have two children and live at 2513 Centre Ln.

James E. Sipe, vice president Operations, stated that with the addition of Gulick, ESM hopes to broaden the services it offers to the business and professional people of the Pikes Peak Region.

"We presently use an IBM 1440 computer, and this equipment together with our trained staff can provide services which would otherwise not be available to the community."

Mutual Fund Share Sales At New High

Investor purchases of mutual fund shares rose to a December peak of $335,553,000 and brought the total in shares sold last year to an all-time high of $3,402,978,000, according to the Investment Company Institute.

December sales which ran the string of consecutive monthly highs to seven were the second best in the industry's history. The all-time high for shares sold in a single month was set in January, 1962 ($361,846,000).

The Institute reported that sales last month compared with $317,076,000 in November last year and $224,946,000 in December a year earlier.

The volume of shares sold in 1964 was 38.2 per cent above the $2.46 billion in the year before and well ahead of the previous peak — $2.95 billion — set in 1961.

A total of 335,732 new accumulation plans were opened in 1964, compared with 257,605 in 1963. Accumulation plan holders purchase new shares on a periodic basis — usually monthly or quarterly.

The combined net assets of mutual fund memeber of the Institute were $29,116,254,000 at year-end, and compared with $29,061,516,000 at the end of November and $25,214,436,000 at the close of 1963.

December redemptions amounted to $135,629,000 and compared with $133,531,000 in November and $132,496,000 in December a year ago.

The redemptions of shares last year totaled $1,874,004,000, or 6.9 per cent of the industry's average net assets for the 12 months ended December 31. This compares with redeptions of $1,995,335,000, or 6.5 per cent of average assets in 1963.

IT'S TRUE

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Blonde, almost-16 Merry is the most appropriately named decoration on the Chester V. Christmas family tree. Strangers usually think Merry Christmas is spoofing when they hear her name, but she enjoys it just the same. She has a cousin named Mary and an aunt named Carol, but so far she is the only Merry in the family.

Home - Made Weapons Found at School

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alerted by tipsters, police raided 14 student lockers at Bertie Backus Junior High School Friday morning and found:

Two loaded .22-caliber revolvers, one loaded homemade zip gun, one straight razor, two switchblade knives with eight-inch blades, and stilleto, a pair of scissors, a steak knife, a linoleum knife, a set of homemade brass knuckles and several toy pistosl.

The 14 students whose lockers contained weapons were subpoenaed with their parents to attend a meeting in the detective bureau squadron room Wednesday.

The tipsters said the knives and guns were to have been used Friday in an after-school rumble set up Tuesday when two Backus students were beaten after a basketball game with the Paul Junior High School

Largest commercial building project of the new year was announced this week by Gene Senatore, who owns and operates Senatore's Department store in Florence.

Senatore reported that work has started on the remodeling of the store which will include the addition of some 1,700 square feet of floor space on the ground level.

The store will extend nearly to the alleyway and will project back 30 feet on the west side of the present structure and 50 feet on the east side. The additional space will permit the enlargement of the store's shoe department, ladies' ready-to-wear department, and children's department, Senatore stated.

In addition to enlarging the store's physical plant, Senatore reported that new wall fixtures will be added, a new store front will be designed, and a huge new neon sign will be erected across the front of the Main street building.

"We plan to expand our inventory of children's clothing and we will carry a larger selection of ladies' garments," he added. "We also plan to increase the size of our shoe department and generally expand our clothing inventory."

Remodeling, which will be supervised by Gene Roeder, local contractor, is expected to be completed by March 1.

According to Senatore, this is the second phase of a remodeling project which was initiated Jan. 31, 1957 when the present structure was updated and modernized.

INCOME TAX SAVINGS FOR MURRAY DRUG CUSTOMERS

The five Murray Drug Stores in Colorado Springs, "prescription specialists in the Pikes Peak region for over fifty years," are introducing a new Free Tax Service to their valued credit, or charge-account customers.

This new Free Tax Service will make it feasible for all qualifying customers to save from 16% to 40%, and even more o ntheir 1965 Federal and State Income Tax medical deductions.

Senior Citizens will save up to 100% on both Federal and State levels with this new Free Tax Service.

The 1965 Internal Revenue Service regulations DO NOT limit deductions to prescription drugs, but will allow all other medication. A partial listing would include:

Analgesics, (Aspirin, Buffer-in, etc.)

Antacids, (Alka Seltzer, Antiseptics, (Bactine, Lavoris, Listerine, etc.)

Baby Needs, (Diaper Ointments, Hpyo-Allergenic Milks, etc.)

Cough and Cold Preparations.

Diabetic Needs.

First Aid Supplies,

Laxatives.

Liniments.

Supplies, (Supportive hose, Thermometers ,Vaporizers, etc.)

Vitamins (when ordered by a physician.)

However the taxpayer must be able to show proof of purchases, sales slips, and substantiate their payments.

Murray's new Free Tax Service has been designed to do this and more with 30-day charge accounts. Their new automatic equipment—not available previously—will enable them to record your deductible purchases and furnish separate monthly and year-to-date accumulative totals on regular statements (if paid monthly). However, customer must retain the original or duplicate enclosed sales slip for insurance claims and/or other reasons.

Murray's sincerely hope their customers will show approval of this plan by using it to the fullest extent. It offers additional tax savings, and certainly makes Money Worth Even More at a Murray Drug Store.

The Murray Drug Store will be pleased to discuss the advantage of a charge account at Murray's with you or any of your friends interested in the above plan, or Murray's will mail them an application to open one.

ESM Announces Appointment of New Sales Mgr.

Stuart Loosley, president, Electronic Systems Management, Inc. recently announced the appointment of Peter H. Gulick to the staff as sales manager.

Gulick was in the class of 1955 at Dartmouth College and graduated with a degree in physics. After serving two years in the USAF, he returned to Dartmouth and earned his Masters Degree in mechanical engineering.

Gulick began his career with General Electric Company as a test engineer in the jet engine division. For the past five years, he has been associated with The Mitre Corporation where he was directly involved with the computer system design for the Cheyenne Mountain NORAD COC.

Gulick moved to Colorado Springs in June 1963. He and his wife, Sue, have two children and live at 2513 Centre Ln.

James E. Sipe, vice president Operations, stated that with the addition of Gulick, ESM hopes to broaden the services it offers to the business and professional people of the Pikes Peak Region.

"We presently use an IBM 1440 computer, and this equipment together with our trained staff can provide services which would otherwise not be available to the community."

Mutual Fund Share Sales At New High

Investor purchases of mutual fund shares rose to a December peak of $335,553,000 and brought the total in shares sold last year to an all-time high of $3,402,978,000, according to the Investment Company Institute.

December sales which ran the string of consecutive monthly highs to seven were the second best in the industry's history. The all-time high for shares sold in a single month was set in January, 1962 ($361,846,000).

The Institute reported that sales last month compared with $317,076,000 in November last year and $224,946,000 in December a year earlier.

The volume of shares sold in 1964 was 38.2 per cent above the $2.46 billion in the year before and well ahead of the previous peak — $2.95 billion — set in 1961.

A total of 335,732 new accumulation plans were opened in 1964, compared with 257,685 in 1963. Accumulation plan holders purchase new shares on a periodic basis — usually monthly or quarterly.

The combined net assets of mutual fund memeber of the Institute were $29,116,254,000 at year-end, and compared with $29,861,516,000 at the end of November and $25,214,436,000 at the close of 1963.

December redemptions amounted to $135,629,000 and compared with $133,531,000 in November and $132,496,000 in December a year ago.

The redemptions of shares last year totaled $1,874,894,000, or 6.9 per cent of the industry's average net assets for the 12 months ended December 31. This compares with redeptions of $1,595,595,000, or 6.5 per cent of average assets in 1963.

IT'S TRUE

AMARILLO, Tex. (AP) — Blonde, almost-16 Merry is the most appropriately named decoration on the Chester V. Christmas family tree. Strangers usually think Merry Christmas is spoofing when they hear her name, but she enjoys it just the same. She has a cousin named Mary and an aunt named Carol, but so far she is the only Merry in the family.

Home - Made Weapons Found at School

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alerted by tipsters, police raided 14 student lockers at Bertie Backus Junior High School Friday morning and found:

Two loaded .22-caliber revolvers, one loaded homemade zip gun, one straight razor, two switchblade knives with eight-inch blades, and stilleto, a pair of scissors, a steak knife, a linoleum knife, a set of homemade brass knuckles and several toy pistosl.

The 14 students whose lockers contained weapons were subpoenaed with their parents to attend a meeting in the detective bureau squadron room Wednesday.

The tipsters said the knives and guns were to have been used Friday in an after-school rumble set up Tuesday when two Backus students were beaten after a basketball game with the Paul Junior High School

Florence Starts Biggest Building Project of '65

Largest commercial building project of the new year was announced this week by Gene Senatore, who owns and operates Senatore's Department store in Florence.

Senatore reported that work has started on the remodeling of the store which will include the addition of some 1,700 square feet of floor space on the ground level.

The store will extend nearly to the alleyway and will project back 30 feet on the west side of the present structure and 50 feet on the east side. The additional space will permit the enlargement of the store's shoe department, ladies' ready-to-wear department, and children's department, Senatore stated.

In addition to enlarging the store's physical plant, Senatore reported that new wall fixtures will be added, a new store front will be designed, and a huge new neon sign will be erected across the front of the Main street building.

"We plan to expand our inventory of children's clothing and we will carry a larger selection of ladies' garments," he added. "We also plan to increase the size of our shoe department and generally expand our clothing inventory."

Remodeling, which will be supervised by Gene Roeder, local contractor, is expected to be completed by March 1.

According to Senatore, this is the second phase of a remodeling project which was initiated Jan. 31, 1957 when the present structure was updated and modernized.

INCOME TAX SAVINGS FOR MURRAY DRUG CUSTOMERS

The five Murray Drug Stores in Colorado Springs, "prescription specialists in the Pikes Peak region for over fifty years," are introducing a new Free Tax Service to their valued credit, or charge-account customers.

This new Free Tax Service will make it feasible for all qualifying customers to save from 16% to 40%, and even more o ntheir 1965 Federal and State Income Tax medical deductions.

Senior Citizens will save up to 100% on both Federal and State levels with this new Free Tax Service.

The 1965 Internal Revenue Service regulations DO NOT limit deductions to prescription drugs, but will allow all other medication. A partial listing would include:

Analgesics, (Aspirin, Bufferin, etc.)
Antacids, (Alka Seltzer, Antiseptics, (Bactine, Lavoris, Listerine, etc.)
Baby Needs, (Diaper Ointments, Hpyo-Allergenic Milks, etc.)
Cough and Cold Preparations.
Diabetic Needs.
First Aid Supplies,
Laxatives.
Liniments.
Supplies, (Supportive hose, Thermometers ,Vaporizers, etc.)
Vitamins (when ordered by a physician.)

However the taxpayer must be able to show proof of purchases, sales slips, and substantiate their payments.

Murray's new Free Tax Service has been designed to do this and more with 30-day charge accounts. Their new automatic equipment—not available previously—will enable them to record your deductible purchases and furnish separate monthly and year-to-date accumulative totals on regular statements (if paid monthly). However, customer must retain the original or duplicate enclosed sales slip for insurance claims and/or other reasons.

Murray's sincerely hope their customers will show approval of this plan by using it to the fullest extent. It offers additional tax savings, and certainly makes Money Worth Even More at a Murray Drug Store.

The Murray Drug Store will be pleased to discuss the advantage of a charge account at Murray's with you or any of your friends interested in the above plan, or Murray's will mail them an application to open one.

High Steel Use Prevents Strike Hedging

Steel users will be in no position to ride out a prolonged steel strike if the steelworkers walk out May 1, Iron Age magazine reports.

Although steel production is approaching record weekly heights, the rate of steel use has climbed proportionately. This has wiped out the expected bulge of excess shipments over use and has left many steel users far behind their scheduled buildup plans.

The national metalworking weekly says this means that by May 1, earliest possible date for a strike, steel users will have only a little more than one month's extra steel in their stocks over normal inventory levels.

While a 30 - day strike would not wipe out total tonnage held in steel users' plants, it would bring supplies of some products down to levels that would cut into production.

Further, it's clear that mills can't do much better in the remaining weeks to assist in buildup plans, Iron Age says. The present rate of shipments of around 8 million tons represents the peak for plates, bars, hot and cold - rolled sheet, and galvanized.

Iron Age says that with demand exceeding supply, mills have had to apply quotas on all of these products.

This is in the face of an all-out effort by the mills. Production at the present rate of more than 2,650,000 tons per week is not far below the all - time high of 2,732,000 tons set in the week of December 12, 1959, when mills resumed production after being strike-bound.

If inventory buying on pipe and wire products picks up, mills can add some more tonnage, since these products have not yet reached the point where production facilities are strained. But other products are sold out through March.

Iron Age says that the strife within the Steelworkers union (USWA) continues to work against an early settlement. The election, in which David J. McDonald is challenged by union secretary - treasurer I. W. Abel, will not be held until Feb. 9. Unions are notoriously slow in counting the ballots and any close vote is likely to result in added delays in certifying the winner — the man who will be the top negotiator.

Meanwhile, the USWA opens negotiations this week with the can companies. This will be watched closely from two points of view: 1. These negotiations in the past have set precedents; 2. The companies' attitude to McDonald as an uncertain factor in advance of the election could be significant.

Leadville Opens Luxury Motel Pleasure Resort

Leadville has just opened its first luxury hotel accommodations since its glamorous days of the Silver Boom, the Silver King Motel.

In the 1880s this central Colorado city was the largest and richest silver mining camp on earth. It offered living conditions equal to the best of the cosmopolitan centers. After the 1897 silver panic it slipped into the status of a small industrial town.

Now the city, seat of Lake County, is experiencing its sixth boom. It had prospered on gold, silver, lead and zinc, then wartime activity plus tourists. Currently it has a $15 million annual economic base from the Climax molybdenum mine which employs 2,300 persons.

Its newest prosperity comes from the $225 million Homestake and Fryingpan water projects under construction and the vast recreational areas they will create around the area's lakes.

In the opening of the luxury motel, the Silver King, is the first sign of the city's latest climb to fine living. Built on two levels, the Silver King Motel has 40 units, a 19th Century dining room and a period barroom.

When the frost is out of the ground a swimming pool will be added, the highest pool in the world at 10,222 feet above sea level.

Three smaller motels also have opened. These have added 21 rooms to the city's total of about 200 rooms for visitors in four commercial type hotels and three other motels.

Chamber Starts Annual Travel Show Circuit

The first 1965 travel show being attended by the Tourist Promotion Committee of your Chamber of Commerce and the Travel Show Committee of the Motel Association, opens in Detroit on Jan. 30 at Cobo Hall. This show will be manned by Chamber of Commerce Manager Clay Banta and Everett Stephens, owner and operator of the El Patio Lodge.

This is the second time we have exhibited in Detroit. Last year the show we attended was in the coliseum at the fair grounds. This year's show is in the heart of downtown Detroit in their beautiful, new conventions center.

The recent survey done by the Motel Association showed Michigan in 12th place as a producer of visitors to the Pikes Peak Region. The Detroit show runs through Feb. 7.

Returning from Detroit, the display will be left in St. Louis. The second show on our schedule gets underway Feb. 19 and runs through Feb. 28.

This same display will be picked up in St. Louis on the way to Chicago, where the third show in a series begins March 6. Running concurrently with the Chicago Show is the Dallas Show (March 7 through 14).

The committee will operate a little theatre at the Denver Travel Show, March 2 through 7, and will show the Project "22" film "Time to Live."

The annual spring printing of Pikes Peak Region Guides, a colorful, full color brochure, of which the Tourist Promotion Committee distributes 200,000 annually, begins coming off the press this week and will be available soon.

These brochures, along with individual attraction brochures, will be distributed at the five travel shows listed above.

Electronic School to Open Classes Monday

First classes will start Monday evening at the Colorado Electronic Training Center, a new, advanced education facility at 3450 N. Nevada Ave. Some 40 students are enrolled in the new school's first class.

The new electronics school has more than 20,000 square feet of floor space, divided into 10 classrooms. More than $15,000 worth of electronics equipment will be used in the school's laboratory.

A grand opening is being held starting today and ending next Sunday. At the opening, the public will be invited on a tour of the new facility and may watch demonstrations of the lab equipment.

The Center's first 12 month class will run in the evening, only, five days a week. Three of the days will be spent studying theory and two will be used for lab studies. If enrollment warrants it, and at present it may, another class will be started next Monday.

Whatever the case may be, a class is scheduled to start in March and enrollment is now underway. Approximately 250 students are expected at the new school by fall, says instructor J. C. Flynn. He reported that the present class is nearly filled, but there are possibly as many as five vacancies left.

Flynn, who has been in the electronics field for 10 years, came to his present positoon from a job with IBM. He was senior designer at one of IBM's Advanced Computer Technology Laboratories in Minnesota. Flynn has been teaching prospective electronics technicians for six years.

School Registrar R. N. Brizzee says that both day and evening sessions will be held, starting in March. As the school's enrollment grows, more instructors will be added to its staff, according to Brizzee.

Need for the new school is apparent, with the growth of the electronics technicians are needed probably more than engineers and scientists. A survey shows that a minimum ration of 30 technicians is needed for every 10 engineers or scientists. Training at the newly opened school is aimed at this field.

When the full schedule begins, day classes will run from 8 a.m. to noon and evening sessions will be from 6 to 10 p.m., both running five days a week. At present, just the night schedule is in effect. Special tutoring will be provided for one hour after each class free of charge.

To the top 20 per cent of each class, CETC will offer in conjunction with regular class, 100 hours of advanced electrical enginnering study at no additional cost. Upon satisfactory completion of the 12 month course, graduates will be awarded a CETC Engineering Technician Diploma and a certificate of completion, with a transcript of all grades.

The school offers tuition refund grants and help with housing and employment, while training. Further details on these and other facets of the school curriculum may be obtained by calling 633-2726.

GAS-LIFTER

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — William James, security officer at a suburban department store here, is constantly on the lookout for shoplifters. Recently, after a hard day's work, he went out to his car to find that a thief had not only syphoned out all the gas from his tank, but also had stolen the gas cap.

Colorado Springs Featured in State Magazine

The Hilex Co., St. Paul, reports that the Colorado Springs area is one of the more important areas of its Denver division.

The company, distributors of cleansing products, lists distribution points in the area such as Safeway, King's, Miller's, Furr Foods, AG member stores, Empire Super Markets as well as institutional distribution to military installations, hotels, restaurants and other commercial trade.

With its recently completed move to new — and three times larger — facilities in the Mile Hi West Industrial Park, Denver, Company is going into high-gear production.

The move now enabled Hilex to offer adequate bleach production to meeting the increasing growth of sales in the Rocky Mountain area. Hilex Blea' hcssuccess is attributed to the fact that it is made in the state with a special formula achievesthe best bleaching results in our soft water and high altitudes, officials said.

The very latest in modern laboratory and production equipment, and a newly enlarged Quality Control Department enable Hilex Company to produce the quality liquid and powdered bleaches on the market today. They have also enlarged their Sparkle-X Ammonia Department and have added equipment of the very latest design.

The new plant makes it possible to expand label packs while providing faster service to distribution points in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, and parts of western Kansas and Nebraska.

Asa Eldredge, president of Hilex Company, came from St. Paul, Minn. recently to make a special tour of the new facilities. He visits here often, and has been active in the sales field in the Rocky Mountain region for 50 years. He is enthusiastic concerning the potential this area offers, and feels that their new plants can contribute to the continued growth of the Rocky Mountain region.

Timken Co. Announces New Heavy Duty Bit

A new heavy - duty Timken rock bit for track drills has been developed by Rock Bit Design and Field Engineers at The Timken Roller Bearing Co. According to Frank M. Barry, sales manager - Rock Bit Division, Colorado Springs, the new bit will deliver from 20 to 50 per cent more footage than competitive bits, in hard abrasive ground.

Barry said there are many new features on the heavy-duty rock bit that enable it to lower cost-per-foot-of-hole. The new bit has a massive new forged alloy steel body, improved tungsten carbide inserts, which are wider and deeper, and heavy bit wings for better insert support.

In addition, a rugged tapered body profile has been designed for extra strength. The bit body is longer and made of a new alloy steel designed and heat treated to resist abrasion. Also important, the new bit has precision milled bit threads.

Barry said the new rock bit is available in 2½, 2¾ 3 and, 3½ inch gauges.

FOOLED THEM ALL

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Frank C. Youngerman celebrated his 90th birthday here with a reminiscent chuckle over the doctors who told him 72 years ago that he had tuberculosis and had only 30 days to live.

"They said I was doomed," he laughed. "But I'm still here. It turned out to be only a bad chest cold, and that's the only sickness I have ever had."

High Steel Use Prevents Strike Hedging

Steel users will be in no position to ride out a prolonged steel strike if the steelworkers walk out May 1, Iron Age magazine reports.

Although steel production is approaching record weekly heights, the rate of steel use has climbed proportionately. This has wiped out the expected bulge of excess shipments over use and has left many steel users far behind their scheduled buildup plans.

The national metalworking weekly says this means that by May 1, earliest possible date for a strike, steel users will have only a little more than one month's extra steel in their stocks over normal inventory levels.

While a 30 - day strike would not wipe out total tonnage held in steel users' plants, it would bring supplies of some products down to levels that would cut into production.

Further, it's clear that mills can't do much better in the remaining weeks to assist in buildup plans, Iron Age says. The present rate of shipments of around 8 million tons represents the peak for plates, bars, hot and cold - rolled sheet, and galvanized.

Iron Age says that with demand exceeding supply, mills have had to apply quotas on all of these products.

This is in the face of an all-out effort by the mills. Production at the present rate of more than 2,650,000 tons per week is not far below the all - time high of 2,732,000 tons set in the week of December 12, 1959, when mills resumed production after being strike-bound.

If inventory buying on pipe and wire products picks up, mills can add some more tonnage, since these products have not yet reached the point where production facilities are strained. But other products are sold out through March.

Iron Age says that the strife within the Steelworkers union (USWA) continues to work against an early settlement. The election, in which David J. McDonald is challenged by union secretary - treasurer I. W. Abel, will not be held until Feb. 9. Unions are notoriously slow in counting the ballots and any close vote is likely to result in added delays in certifying the winner — the man who will be the top negotiator.

Meanwhile, the USWA opens negotiations this week with the can companies. This will be watched closely from two points of view: 1. These negotiations in the past have set precedents; 2. The companies' attitude to McDonald as an uncertain factor in advance of the election could be significant.

Timken Co. Announces New Heavy Duty Bit

A new heavy - duty Timken rock bit for track drills has been developed by Rock Bit Design and Field Engineers at The Timken Roller Bearing Co. According to Frank M. Barry, sales manager - Rock Bit Division, Colorado Springs, the new bit will deliver from 20 to 50 per cent more footage than competitive bits, in hard abrasive ground.

Barry said there are many new features on the heavy-duty rock bit that enable it to lower cost-per-foot-of-hole. The new bit has a massive new forged alloy steel body, improved tungsten carbide inserts, which are wider and deeper, and heavy bit wings for better insert support.

In addition, a rugged tapered body profile has been designed for extra strength. The bit body is longer and made of a new alloy steel designed and heat treated to resist abrasion. Also important, the new bit has precision milled bit threads.

Barry said the new rock bit is available in 2½, 2¾ 3 and, 3½ inch gauges.

FOOLED THEM ALL

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Frank C. Youngerman celebrated his 90th birthday here with a reminiscent chuckle over the doctors who told him 72 years ago that he had tuberculosis and had only 30 days to live.

"They said I was doomed," he laughed. "But I'm still here. It turned out to be only a bad chest cold, and that's the only sickness I have ever had."

MUSICAL ROLE

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Anthony Quinn learned to play the santuri, an ancient stringed instrument, for his role in "Zorba the Greek."

SPECIALIST CAME IN HANDY

CANON CITY, Colo. (AP) — When Star Caywood, state legislator from Walsenburg, Colo., was visiting the state penitentiary here he inadvertently locked his keys in his car while on an inspection trip with other lawmakers. Warden Harry Tinsley heard of his plight and called for one of his prisoners who had had considerable experience with locks. In a matter of minutes, Caywood's car was unlocked.

Chamber Starts Annual Travel Show Circuit

The first 1965 travel show being attended by the Tourist Promotion Committee of your Chamber of Commerce and the Travel Show Committee of the Motel Association, opens in Detroit on Jan. 30 at Cobo Hall. This show will be manned by Chamber of Commerce Manager Clay Banta and Everett Stephens, owner and operator of the El Patio Lodge.

This is the second time we have exhibited in Detroit. Last year the show we attended was in the coliseum at the fair grounds. This year's show is in the heart of downtown Detroit in their beautiful, new conventions center.

The recent survey done by the Motel Association showed Michigan in 12th place as a producer of visitors to the Pikes Peak Region. The Detroit show runs through Feb. 7.

Returning from Detroit, the display will be left in St. Louis. The second show on our schedule gets underway Feb. 19 and runs through Feb. 28.

This same display will be picked up in St. Louis on the way to Chicago, where the third show in a series begins March 6. Running concurrently with the Chicago Show is the Dallas Show (March 7 through 14).

The committee will operate a little theatre at the Denver Travel Show, March 2 through 7, and will show the Project "22" film "Time to Live."

The annual spring printing of Pikes Peak Region Guides, a colorful, full color brochure, of which the Tourist Promotion Committee distributes 200,000 annually, begins coming off the press this week and will be available soon.

These brochures, along with individual attraction brochures, will be distributed at the five travel shows listed above.

Electronic School to Open Classes Monday

First classes will start Monday evening at the Colorado Electronic Training Center, a new, advanced education facility at 3450 N. Nevada Ave. Some 40 students are enrolled in the new school's first class.

The new electronics school has more than 20,000 square feet of floor space, divided into 10 classrooms. More than $15,000 worth of electronics equipment will be used in the school's laboratory.

A grand opening is being held starting today and ending next Sunday. At the opening, the public will be invited on a tour of the new facility and may watch demonstrations of the lab equipment.

The Center's first 12 month class will run in the evening, only, five days a week. Three of the days will be spent studying theory and two will be used for lab studies. If enrollment warrants it, and at present it may, another class will be started next Monday.

Whatever the case may be, a class is scheduled to start in March and enrollment is now underway. Approximately 250 students are expected at the new school by fall, says instructor J. C. Flynn. He reported that the present class is nearly filled, but there are possibly as many as five vacancies left.

Flynn, who has been in the electronics field for 10 years, came to his present positoon from a job with IBM. He was senior designer at one of IBM's Advanced Computer Technology Laboratories in Minnesota. Flynn has been teaching prospective electronics technicians for six years.

School Registrar R. N. Brizzee says that both day and evening sessions will be held, starting in March. As the school's enrollment grows, more instructors will be added to its staff, according to Brizzee.

Need for the new school is apparent, with the growth of the electronics technicians are needed probably more than engineers and scientists. A survey shows that a minimum ration of 30 technicians is needed for every 10 engineers or scientists. Training at the newly opened school is aimed at this field.

When the full schedule begins, day classes will run from 8 a.m. to noon and evening sessions will be from 6 to 10 p.m., both running five days a week. At present, just the night schedule is in effect. Special tutoring will be provided for one hour after each class free of charge.

To the top 20 per cent of each class, CETC will offer in conjunction with regular class, 100 hours of advanced electrical enginnering study at no additional cost. Upon satisfactory completion of the 12 month course, graduates will be awarded a CETC Engineering Technician Diploma and a certificate of completion, with a transcript of all grades.

The school offers tuition refund grants and help with housing and employment, while training. Further details on these and other facets of the school curriculum may be obtained by calling 633-2726.

GAS-LIFTER

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — William James, security officer at a suburban department store here, is constantly on the lookout for shoplifters. Recently, after a hard day's work, he went out to his car to find that a thief had not only syphoned out all the gas from his tank, but also had stolen the gas cap.

Colorado Springs Featured in State Magazine

The Hilex Co., St. Paul, reports that the Colorado Springs area is one of the more important areas of its Denver division.

The company, distributors of cleansing products, lists distribution points in the area such as Safeway, King's, Miller's, Furr Foods, AG member stores, Empire Super Markets as well as institutional distribution to military installations, hotels, restaurants and other commercial trade.

With its recently completed move to new — and three times larger — facilities in the Mile Hi West Industrial Park, Denver, Company is going into high-gear production.

The move now enabled Hilex to offer adequate bleach production to meeting the increasing growth of sales in the Rocky Mountain area. Hilex Blea' hcssuccess is attributed to the fact that it is made in the state with a special formula achievesthe best bleaching results in our soft water and high altitudes, officials said.

The very latest in modern laboratory and production equipment, and a newly enlarged Quality Control Department enable Hilex Company to produce the quality liquid and powdered bleaches on the market today. They have also enlarged their Sparkle-X Ammonia Department and have added equipment of the very latest design.

The new plant makes it possible to expand label packs while providing faster service to distribution points in Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, and parts of western Kansas and Nebraska.

Asa Eldredge, president of Hilex Company, came from St. Paul, Minn. recently to make a special tour of the new facilities. He visits here often, and has been active in the sales field in the Rocky Mountain region for 50 years. He is enthusiastic concerning the potential this area offers, and feels that their new plants can contribute to the continued growth of the Rocky Mountain region.

Leadville Opens Luxury Motel Pleasure Resort

Leadville has just opened its first luxury hotel accommodations since its glamorous days of the Silver Boom, the Silver King Motel.

In the 1880s this central Colorado city was the largest and richest silver mining camp on earth. It offered living conditions equal to the best of the cosmopolitan centers. After the 1907 silver panic it slipped into the status of a small industrial town.

Now the city, seat of Lake County, is experiencing its sixth boom. It had prospered on gold, silver, lead and zinc, then wartime activity plus tourists. Currently it has a $15 million annual economic base from the Climax molybdenum mine which employs 2,300 persons.

Its newest prosperity comes from the $225 million Homestake and Fryingpan water projects under construction and the vast recreational areas they will create around the area's lakes.

In the opening of the luxury motel, the Silver King, is the first sign of the city's latest climb to fine living. Built on two levels, the Silver King Motel has 60 units, a 19th Century dining room and a period barroom.

When the frost is out of the ground a swimming pool will be added, the highest pool in the world at 10,222 feet above sea level.

Three smaller motels also have opened. These have added 21 rooms to the city's total of about 250 rooms for visitors in four commercial type hotels and three other motels.

FOR LESS THAN $8,000—Walter White, a Colorado Springs builder and designer, built this vacation cabin for less than $8,000, not including the steel foundation. The cabin is set on a hillside about a mile from 11-Mile Reservoir, 50 miles from Colorado Springs. The cabin was built as a test project for cabins using structural steel frames and three-inch thick cedar in its construction. (Photo by Guy Burgess)

Mountain Cabin Proves New Construction Concept

By DAVE OSBORN
GAazette Telegraph Staff Writer

Testing is nearly completed on a totally new concept in home building. Walter S. White, a Colorado Springs builder and designer, believes that structural steel may play a big role in the home of the future. And not just because it's termite-proof.

White began his test in October, 1963, when he began building his own, unique vacation cabin about a mile from the shores of 11-Mile Reservoir. The steel - frame vacation lodge, with its butterfly roof, sun-deck, all-cedar construction and steel foundation, is most certainly a first in both the building and designing fields.

Located about 12 miles south of Lake George, on a narrow, rutted dirt road called Whale Drive, White's vacation cabin was built solely as a test for its unusual design and construction under severe weather conditions. Since its construction, which incidentally only took two weeks, the steel and cedar wood mountain retreat has taken a veritable beating from weather conditions and even once from human error.

Temperatures in the area 50 miles from Colorado Springs often plunge to 40 or even 50 below zero. The 15 months White's cabin has been there there have been no exceptions. The mercury has dipped to 45 below and winter snows have piled high on top of the dwarfed home. The tongue and groove cedar roof has withstood the burden, however, and has not permitted even a trace of water to leak through.

White's vacation home was tested further when two tons of rock landed on its roof. The accident occurred as a result of blasting behind the cabin. The steel beams and three-inch thick cedar withstood the deluge of rock, however.

Besides keeping out tons of rock and the elements, the cedar has proved to be a good defense against the extreme cold. Temperatures inside the cabin can easily be maintained at more than 70 degrees. And this is accomplished without the aid of insulation. The lodge is heated by a gas furnace and, if needed, a steel fireplace, called a "Fire Hood."

Steel, cedar and glass are the only materials used in a cabin of this type. Clerestory glass borders just below the roof on all sides of the cabin. The front, which opens onto a 10 foot sun deck, is enclosed in thermopane glass. This serves as a means of actually bringing the outdoors in, when the weather permits. It also gives the lodge the effect of being larger than it really is.

The sun deck's 300 square feet of floor space serves as an addition to the 517 square feet of interior in warm weather. With that additional space, the seemingly tiny cabin can accommodate up to 20 people. It sleeps five comfortably, using two beds and a convertible sofa.

Cost of cabins of the type White has built are near $8,000 which includes a gas furnace, steel fireplace, refrigerator, electric range and sink combination, water heater and a modern bathroom facility. The kitchen features a combination range and sink, saving many feet of valuable floor space.

White's $8,000 selling price includes everything except the steel foundation. Prices of this are unstable, as they depend on how deep pilings must be placed. Vertical steel beams are placed on cement pilings, which must in turn be sunk deep enough to remain solid.

If after a while, a family outgrows the vacation cabin, a 50 per cent addition may be built for between $800 and $1,000, also excluding the foundation price.

The building's low selling price should prove to be one of its main selling points, according to White, as it is well within the reach of most middle-income families.

Bethlehem Steel supplied the framework for White's copyrighted "dream home." Nearly four tons of steel were used, including four inch tubular steel columns and eight inch steel beams. It was all fabricated by Jordan and Knight Welding of Colorado Springs.

Inside, the mountain home is divided into three main areas: a living room, kitchen and sleeping area. It also has ample closet space and a relatively large bathroom. Ceilings, walls and floor are all cedar, since it is used almost exclusively in the cabin's construction.

Before construction, the steel beams were coated with a primer of red lead and then painted a cocoa brown color. In 15 months, it has withstood the severe weather conditions in grand fashion, without a trace of rust.

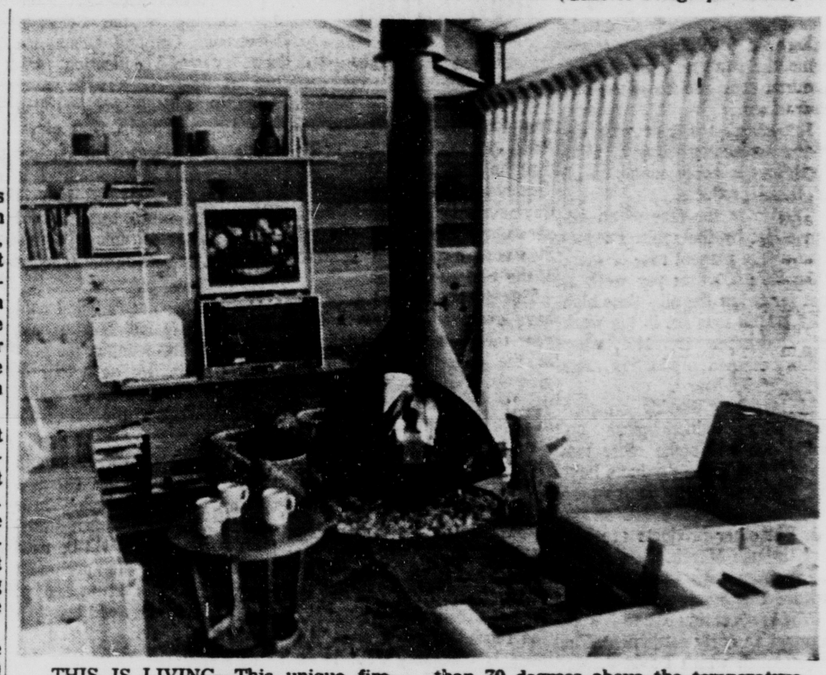
Sears, Roebuck and Co. decorated the lodge's interior lavishly and at a cost of less than $2,000. This includes a television, stereo phonograph, kitchen, living room and bedroom furnishings and carpets in every room. The quoted price is the maximum decoration a home of this size would require.

Word of White's cabin has spread far and wide. He recently received requests for a franchise on the design and construction from builders at Lake Tahoe and San Diego. Although the cabin at 11-Mile is serving as a test for a vacation - type home, White hopes someday to move into the residential home building field with similar designs, using steel frames. At present, however, his target is vacation homes at a reasonably low cost.

As White puts it, "A second home is becoming a necessity for the guy with so many pressures on him at home and on the job."

The vacation home, relates White, can be an asset to the owner. Besides serving as a retreat from everyday worries, it can actually pay for itself as an off - season rental if the lodge is built in the right location. It also appreciates in value, unlike many other vacation abodes.

White lives with his wife, June, and two children at 4061 Sunnybrook Ln. Of course, during the summer months, the whole family looks forward to a relaxing stay near the shores of 11-Mile Reservoir in a cabin that most certainly has a very promising future.



THIS IS LIVING—This unique fireplace is called a "Fire Hood." It helps in keeping the interior temperature of Walter White's vacation cabin more than 70 degrees above the temperature outside. The cabin was furnished and decorated by Sears, Roebuck and Co. at a cost of less than $2,000.

Stock Exchange Sets Up Ad Goal for '65

Educating 35 million potential shareowners on a sound approach to investment is the goal of the 1965 advertising campaign of the New York Stock Exchange.

"The target of the campaign," said Exchange President Keith Funston, "is people who are interested in securities and are considering investing. The campaign is designed to explain to these potential shareowners the nature of sound investing and the services offered by the Exchange Community."

To reach these potential investors, as well as the more than 17 million who already own stock, the Exchange's advertisements will run from February through May in more than 700 daily newspapers, nine general magazines, and five financial publications.

The advertisements will appear again in the financial pages rather than the general news sections. Last year's Exchange campaign was the first in recent years to reach investment-minded readers through advertisements in the business sections.

Since switching its advertisements to the financial pages, newspaper returns from coupon-bearing Exchange ads increased an estimated 114 per cent per thousand circulation.

In continuing this advertising policy, the Exchange cited the rising public interest in financial and business news as well as the expanded and improving coverage offered by the business sections.

Exchange studies further show that 50 to 70 per cent of men readers and about 30 per cent of women readers are reading the financial sections. Other surveys estimate that that there are twice as many readers of the business sections of newspapers as there are shareowners.

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP)—World population, approximately 3,000 million in 1960, will rise to somewhere between 5,300 and 6,800 million by the year 2000 A.D., according to "plausible long - range projections" contained in a United Nations report on world population prospects. A figure near 6,000 millions, or double the 1960 figure, "seems to be the most likely expection," according to the study.

Johnson Asked To Increase Farm Income

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of farm leaders urged President Johnson Friday to adopt agricultural policies which would increase farm income, particularly returns for the family farm.

Hershell D. Newsom, master of the National Grange, took to the White House for Johnson a statement adopted at the meeting Tuesday by representatives of 24 farm commodity and rural church organizations.

The statement said reported budget cuts would place severe restrictions and restraints on government farm price stabilization.

Such restrictions, the statement included: The National Grange, the National Farmer's Union and the National Farmers Organization. But not included in the conference or signing the document was the American Farm Bureau Federation, which wants less, rather than more, government participation and intervention in agriculture.

The statement was left at the White House at a time when there had been much speculation that Johnson's administration may recommend reductions in costs of the commodity stabilization program and seek more money for activity designed to help low income rural families find better opportunities outside of farming.

Other groups which signed the statement included:

The National Association of Wheat Growers, National Corn Growers Association,, Farmers Grain Dealers Association, Soybean Growers of America and the National Beet Producers Federation.

The number of television stations in the nation increased from 107 in 1950 to 530 in 1960, according to the Department of Commerce. Their revenue rose from $91 million to more than $1 billion during the 10-year period.

Fremont Officer Makes Public County Taxes

Fremont County Treasurer Francis S. Young announced this week that total taxes collected by his office including interest has mounted to $2,135,054.23 for the year ending 1964.

"This equals 100.5 per cent of the amount certified for collection," Young stated.

The total collected, less interest, was $2,129,544.32 or 99.7 per cent of the amount certified for collection.

The percentage of collection in 1964 was .01 per cent less than in 1963, Young reported. At lease one factor of this decrease was reflected by the inability of the county to collect on bankruptcy proceedings involving some $1,000 due the county in taxes.

Young stated that approximately 7,000 notices of 1964 taxes were mailed Jan., 13, while an additional 3,000 were handed to loan companies, banks, and escrow agencies.

COLORADO SPRINGS
GAZETTE-TELEGRAPH
COLORADO SPRINGS—SUNDAY, JANUARY 24, 1965 SECTION E

Pancake Batter Now Being Sold Through Meadow Gold

Your Meadow Gold route man is ready now to start delivering fresh, ready-to-use pancake batter, to your door. The new batter, called Old Fashioned Western Pancake and Waffle Batter, is made by the Western Pancake Co. of Colorado Springs.

Through an agreement recently made with Meadow Gold Dairies, the Western batter is now available either at your door or store. At present, sales are being confined to the greater Colorado Springs area, along with Pueblo and parts of southern Colorado. Distribution should be nationwide, however, within 90 to 120 days, say Western Pancake Co. officials.

A general, all-purpose batter, Western Pancake and Waffle Batter is made exclusively from fresh products, not prepared mixes. It contains 57 per-cent buttermilk and its producers say it may be re-frozen many times.

The basic batter can be used for a myriad of kitchen delights, including several pancake varieties, plus doughnuts, biscuits, pies and noodles. The latter four baked goods can easily be prepared by just adding more flour to the already prepared batter.

Pancake and waffle varieties include corn, date-nut, blueberry, chocolate, pecan, strawberry and many others. All that is needed is the pancake-waffle batter and the other ingredient desired.

Western Pancake Batter will stay fresh for about the same length of time as most dairy products, when refrigerated. It can be kept frozen, however, indefinitely and defrosting takes only three hours.

Because it is all prepared, the new batter will prove to be a time-saver in the kitchen. And because it does not spoil, it can be used for more than one day's meal, whether it be breakfast, lunch or dinner. The Western slogan reads, "A Good Morning All Day," telling pancake lovers that they need not confine pancakes as a breakfast food only.

At present, the batter is being sold in one pint Fibreboard containers, much the same as those used for other Meadow Gold dairy products. This type of carton is not waxed on the inside, which means there will be no bothersome chips of way in the batter. It sells for less than 50 cents in the one-pint size. Production of larger carton sizes is expected to start soon, report company officials. The present carton is enough to make some 15 pancakes.

Announcement was also made recently that the batter would be distributed by Meadow Gold to organizational meetings, dinners and breakfasts. This, of course, would cut down on a lot of the preparation which takes place prior to church socials, or other types of social gatherings.

Directions for batter preparation are on the carton. The Western Pancake Co. invites homemakers to pass any recipes for the pancakes or waffles on to their Meadow Gold route man, also. In this way, they will be able to compile recipes and then pass them back to the homemakers.

Pancake promotion now includes lady pancake chef named "Miss Western." She is currently appearing at local super markets and at civic and social clubs, demonstrating Western Pancakes for the "taste test."

A brief history of pancakes, which was compiled by the Western Pancake Co., shows that their product is one of the oldest known to man. In the age of the cave dweller, Neanderthal Man patted meal and water into a thin cake and baked it on a stone near his fire. Although it has changed a great deal, experts believe that this was the first pancake.

The makers of Western Pancakes have made "many" improvements over the cave man recipe, the latest of which are contained in the new, ready-to-pour batter.

Cub Scouts Visit Radio Station Here

Cub Scouts of Den 8, Pack 27 of the Divine Redeemer School recently visited KSSS Radio Station, to see how a radio station is operated. The boys were accompanied by Den Mothers, Mrs. John Light and Mrs. Thomas Soisson.

Zales Sales, Profits Hit Record Highs

Zale Jewelry Company, Inc., sales and earnings for the nine months eneded Dec. 31, 1964, soared to record levels, Zale President Ben A. Lipshy today told members of the Cleveland Society of Security Analysts.

Sales rose 19 per cent, to reach a high of $80,372,545. This compares with $67,546,810 a year ago. Net earnings were up 21 per cent, hitting a peak of $5,288,366 or $1.48 per share based on 3,576,738 shares outstanding, as compared with $4,368,079 or $1.24 per share last year and based on 3,533,003 shares outstanding and adjusted to reflect stock dividends.

Lipshy declined to project what he expects the company to report for its full fiscal year, but he did note that the jewelry industry anticipates the end of the federal excise tax on jewelry sometime during 1965.

"There is no question in my mind that elimination of the excise tax will contribute greatly to the industry's opportunities in this coming calendar year — an in the years to come," he said.

The company president reported that Zale's currently has 398 stores in operation in 39 states, a net gain of 50 since the start of its fiscal year last April 1, 1964. Zale's had reached the 400 level in December, but recently closed several units which management felt were not reaching the profit levels that Zale's expects of its retail stores.

"However," Lipshy added, "it won't be long before we exceed the 400 mark since there are over 20 stores presently under construction.

"We also anticipate that additional leases will be signed during the coming year and, of course, there is always the possibility of further acquisitions."

Council to Study Final Thunderbird Estates Plat

The final 180-acre plat of Thunderbird Estates will be considered Tuesday by the City Council.

The tract, south of the south boundary of the Air Force Academy, presently has no sewer connection. The sewer main of the North Surburban Sanitation District is a mile closer than Colorado Springs' line.

At their last meeting City Planning Commissioners voted to approve the plat and recommend that the subdivision connect with Colorado Springs' system.

The Council will meet 9:30 a.m. in City Hall. New business will include:

Bids for supplying a pipeline for the Homestake water project. The apparent low bid of $5,512,982 was submitted by R. H. Fulton Co.

Request for quit claim deed by Manitou Springs.

Broadmoor Store Hit by Thieves

Clothing, valued at $875, was shoplifted from Abercrombie & Fitch in the Broadmoor Hotel, the sheriff's office reported. Seven sport coats and a ladies wool suit were stolen from the store sometime Thursday, during operating hours.

Richard W. Walker, store manager, reported the theft to sheriff's officers Friday morning after taking inventory. He also told officers that a similar theft had occurred in November, but had not been reported.

Among the articles stolen were four red tweed sport coats, worth $400, a cashmere sport jacket, valued at $115, and an olive tweed sport coat, priced at $72. The ladies suit had a value of $175.

Burglars Hit Pawn Shop Here Saturday

Fourteen watches, with a total value of $73.50, and one alarm clock, worth $7.98, were stolen from Noel's Loan and Jewelry, 125 E. Colorado Ave., either Friday night or early Saturday morning, police reported.

The burglar gained entrance to the shop through a broken plate glass window in the front of the store. Value of the window was estimated at $50. The culprit made off with 14 Rouan watches, worth $5.75 each and a Westclock Travel Alarm.

A customer at George's Pizza House, 100 E. Colorado Ave., discovered the broken window at approximately 1:15 a.m., Saturday. He returned to the Pizza House and had one of the employes call police. The customer, Jake Salaz, of 2432 N. Cascade Ave., told police that he had not seen anyone near the jewelry store, nor anyone running from the scene.

Police Investigate Theft of Automobile

A 1960 Plymouth station wagon was stolen Friday night from a parking place at 934 E. Vermijo St., police reported. Owner of the car, which is valued at $1,000 is Marion Roseatta Alex, of 1003 E. Vermijo St.

The victim told police that she left the car in the parking place at 10:30 p.m.. and discovered it was gone about an hour later. She stated that she had the only set of keys to the car, but that in December a coat had been stolen from the car, with a set of car keys in the pocket.

AFA Graduate Decorated For Bravery in Viet Nam

A 1962 Air Force Academy graduate — now medically retired — has recieved the Bronze Star for bravery in action during the skirmish in which he was wounded.

Thomas Hutchison, Class of 1962, received the Bronze Star for heroic action in Viet Nam, from Col. Harrry P. Verbeek, commander of Davis - Monthan AFB, Ariz.

The Bronze Star was awarded for his heroic action in ground combat in Viet Nam May 19, 1963, while attached to a detachment of a Special Forces group as an adviser - observer.

Accompanying a 35-man paramilitary strike force patrol, which was evacuating civilians from Viet Cong controlled territory, Hutchison was in the relatively safe center of a patrol when he observed two armed Viet Cong.

Anticipating a possible ambush, he ran forward to warn the leading elements and voluntarily remained with them..

Within minutes the point squad was ambushed by a numerically superior force.

Although under intense small arms fire, Hutchison immediately began moving directly into the ambush inspiring those with him to follow.

The counter - attack against the enemy positions enabled the weapons squad to move forward and to emplace their weapons resulting in defeat of the ambush and the killing of 15 Viet Cong guerillas.

Despite a head wound and loss of his left eye, Hutchison stoically endured great pain during his subsequent 26 - hour cross - country evacuation.

On this trek the wounded man offered words of encouragement and was an example of physical courage that was a constant source of inspiration to those around him.

"Lt. Hutchison's disregard for his personal safety, and exemplary conduct in the face of enemy danger are in the best traditions of the service and reflect credit upon himself and the Air Force," the award citation reads.

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan with an AB degree, and has done graduate work at the University of Colorado School of Business.

Lyon is a lieutenant colonel in the army reserve, past president of the local chapter of the Reserve Officer Association, a member of the Colorado Mountain Club, and chairman past of the club. He is an avid mountain climber, having scaled approximately 36 of the 54 Colorado mountain peaks more than 14,000 feet high.

Man Removed From State Accident List

Alvin Robertson, who died Thursday in a local hospital, will not become a Colorado traffic accident statistic. It was determined Friday by El Paso County Coronor Roul Urich that Robertson, who was 65, died not from injuries incurred when he was hit by a car, but from bronchial pneumonia.

Robertson, of 631 W. Colorado Ave., was hit while crossing the street at the middle of the 700 block of West Colorado Avenue on Saturday, Jan. 16. He had suffered numerous fractures and abrasions as a result of the accident.

Dr. Urich called the Colorado Springs Police Department early Friday morning and officially stated the cause of death as bronchial pneumonia.

Dens From Packs 67 Visit GT Saturday

Cub Scouts of Den 1 and 2, Pack 67, were Gazette Telegraph visitors Saturday. They were accompanied by Alfred J. Moore, leader, and Wade Camphouse teacher.

Wrong Address Listed For Joy - Rider in GT

Anthony Lopez, who lives at 1803 W. Pikes Peak Ave., says that Bernie Ted Oustaed who was sentenced to nine months in county jail Friday, does not live at this address.

This was the address Onstaed listed as his. Lopez says he does not know the man and knows no reason why he would give his address as his place of residence.

Onstaed was accused of taking a $1,000 car Sept. 16 from Arthur Walk. He was sentenced to county jail by District Judge Hunter Hardeman for joy-riding.

Mrs. Helman Named to Head Dist. 11 TV Instruction

The teacher for District 11's pilot program in instructional television will be Mrs. Lora Helman, according to Dr. Arthur R. Olson, deputy superintendent of schools. For the last two years Mrs. Helman has been a supervisor of elementary education.

In her new position, Mrs. Helman will be responsible for producing and teaching part of the daily television lessons to be seen on KRDO, Channel 13. She will open and close each lesson by relating it directly to the District 11 instructional program.

A personnel committee selected Mrs. Helman after interviewing 12 candidates and viewing video taped auditions. Dr. Olson said all applicants had done well in the auditions, but the committee selected Mrs. Helman because of her varied teaching experience.

The new television teacher holds a masters degree from the University of Missouri and taught for 13 years in Missouri. She taught all grade levels including departmental music and art.

Mrs. Helman came to Colorado nine years ago. In 1958 she was appointed teacher of the first class of highly academically talented pupils and taught the class until 1964 when she became a supervisor of elementary education.

As a supervisor she has continued to teach amateur radio operation to the highly academically talented pupils.

MRS. LORA HELMAN

Mrs. Helman and her husband, who is a systems analyst at End Afb, have two sons. Kent is a junior at Southern Colorado State College, and Steve is a junior at Wasson High.

The District 11 instructional programs will be seen Monday through Friday at 10:30 a.m. on KRDO TV, starting Feb. 1.

Self Employed Qualify Pension Plans Legally

Self - employed professional and business men are qualifying pension and profit-sharing plans with special income tax advantages under the federal law at a high rate, according to Commerce Clearing House, national reporting authority on tax and business law.

More than 8,400 plans were approved in IRS District offices during the first three quarters of 1964. Of these, 3,318 provided for profit sharing, 3,377 set up pension plans and 1,713 were classified as bond purchase plans, CCH said.

These self-employed retirement plans qualify under a federal law passed in 1962. Such plans permits an income tax deduction of up to $1,250 per year for contributions made to a plan on the self-emlpoyed individual's own behalf. This deduction may be increased, however, by the amount that the self-employed person contributes to the plan on behalf of his employees.

The law requires that all of the self-employed person's regular employees with three or more years of service must be fully covered by the plan, and contributions made on their behalf must be fully vested.

More substantial income tax benefits can be realized by individual business and professional men through traditional types of retirement plans established under professional corporation or association laws, now effective in 32 states, than under the federal self-employed retirement act.

Persons who participate in a qualified traditional-type plan created under a state professional corporation or association law suffer less stringent limitations on contributions and governing funds they set aside for retirement purposes.

But plans under these state laws face tough sledding if the IRS adopts proposed changes in its regulations which have been hanging fire for over a year, CCH said.

Standards for establishing the corporation characteristics necessary to obtain traditional-type benefits through plans set up under these state enabling laws include continuity of life, centralized management, limited liability and free transferability of corporate interests. They would be tightened substantially under the proposed regulation amendments.

Presently pending in Congress is a bill which would automatically classify professional corporations or associations formed under state laws as corporations for federal income tax purposes.

If passed, the bill would mean that such organizations would not have to meet the strict standards contemplated by the IRS in order to adopt retirement plans with the greater tax advantages than those available to plans qualifying under the federal sel-employed retirement act, CCH said.

More liberal treatment for plans set up under the federal act is also provided in another bill now pending in Congress. This legislation proposes to increase the self - employed individual's deduction for his plan contributions to $2,500 a year, currently $1,250. This bill is sponsored by Congressman Keogh, author of the original bill which eventually became the 1962 federal act.

AT YOUR FAVORITE MARKET—Miss Western, of the Western Pancake Co. of Colorado Springs, shows food customers at King Soopers how easy it is to make pancakes with Old Fashioned Western Pancake and Waffle Batter. Pancake Batter Now Being Sold Through Meadow Gold

Your Meadow Gold route man is ready now to start delivering fresh, ready-to-use pancake batter, to your door. The new batter, called Old Fashioned Western Pancake and Waffle Batter, is made by the Western Pancake Co. of Colorado Springs.

Through an agreement recently made with Meadow Gold Dairies, the Western batter is now available either at your door or store. At present, sales are being confined to the greater Colorado Springs area, along with Pueblo and parts of southern Colorado. Distribution should be nationwide, however, within 90 to 120 days, say Western Pancake Co. officials.

A general, all-purpose batter, Western Pancake and Waffle Batter is made exclusively from fresh products, not prepared mixes. It contains 57 per-cent buttermilk and its producers say it may be re-frozen many times.

The basic batter can be used for a myriad of kitchen delights, including several pancake varieties, plus doughnuts, biscuits, pies and noodles. The latter four baked goods can easily be prepared by just adding more flour to the already prepared batter.

Pancake and waffle varieties include corn, date-nut, blueberry, chocolate, pecan, strawberry and many others. All that is needed is the pancake-waffle batter and the other ingredient desired.

Western Pancake Batter will stay fresh for about the same length of time as most dairy products, when refrigerated. It can be kept frozen, however, indefinitely and defrosting takes only three hours.

Because it is all prepared, the new batter will prove to be a time-saver in the kitchen. And because it does not spoil, it can be used for more than one day's meal, whether it be breakfast, lunch or dinner. The Western slogan reads, "A Good Morning All Day," telling pancake lovers that they need not confine pancakes as a breakfast food only.

At present, the batter is being sold in one pint Fibreboard containers, much the same as those used for other Meadow Gold dairy products. This type of carton is not waxed on the inside, which means there will be no bothersome chips of way in the batter. It sells for less than 50 cents in the one-pint size. Production of larger carton sizes is expected to start soon, report company officials. The present carton is enough to make some 15 pancakes.

Announcement was also made recently that the batter would be distributed by Meadow Gold to organizational meetings, dinners and breakfasts. This, of course, would cut down on a lot of the preparation which takes place prior to church socials, or other types of social gatherings.

Directions for batter preparation are on the carton. The Western Pancake Co. invites homemakers to pass any recipes for the pancakes or waffles on to their Meadow Gold route man, also. In this way, they will be able to compile recipes and then pass them back to the homemakers.

Pancake promotion now includes lady pancake chef named "Miss Western." She is currently appearing at local super markets and at civic and social clubs, demonstrating Western Pancakes for the "taste test."

A brief history of pancakes, which was compiled by the Western Pancake Co., shows that their product is one of the oldest known to man. In the age of the cave dweller, Neanderthal Man patted meal and water into a thin cake and baked it on a stone near his fire. Although it has changed a great deal, experts believe that this was the first pancake.

The makers of Western Pancakes have made "many" improvements over the cave man recipe, the latest of which are contained in the new, ready-to-pour batter.

Zales Sales, Profits Hit Record Highs

Zale Jewelry Company, Inc., sales and earnings for the nine months eneded Dec. 31, 1964, soared to record levels, Zale President Ben A. Lipshy today told members of the Cleveland Society of Security Analysts.

Sales rose 19 per cent, to reach a high of $89,372,565. This compares with $67,548,810 a year ago. Net earnings were up 21 per cent, hitting a peak of $5,288,366 or $1.48 per share based on 3,576,738 shares outstanding, as compared with $4,368,079 or $1.24 per share last year and based on 3,533,803 shares outstanding and adjusted to reflect stock dividends.

Lipshy declined to project what he expects the company to report for its full fiscal year, but he did note that the jewelry industry anticipates the end of the federal excise tax on jewelry sometime during 1965.

"There is no question in my mind that elimination of the excise tax will contribute greatly to the industry's opportunities in this coming calendar year — and in the years to come," he said.

The company president reported that Zale's currently has 368 stores in operation in 39 states, a net gain of 50 since the start of its fiscal year last April 1, 1964. Zale's had reached the 400 level in December, but recently closed several units which management felt were not reaching the profit levels that Zale's expects of its retail stores.

"However," Lipshy added, "it won't be long before we exceed the 400 mark since there are over 20 stores presently under construction.

"We also anticipate that additional leases will be signed during the coming year and, of course, there is always the possibility of further acquisitions."

Broadmoor Store Hit by Thieves

Clothing, valued at $875, was shoplifted from Abercrombie & Fitch in the Broadmoor Hotel, the sheriff's office reported. Seven sport coats and a ladies wool suit were stolen from the store sometime Thursday, during operating hours.

Richard W. Walker, store manager, reported the theft to sheriff's officers Friday morning after taking inventory. He also told officers that a similar theft had occurred in November, but had not been reported.

Among the articles stolen were four red tweed sport coats, worth $400, a cashmere sport jacket, valued at $115, and an olive tweed sport coat, priced at $72. The ladies suit had a value of $175.

Burglars Hit Pawn Shop Here Saturday

Fourteen watches, with a total value of $73.50, and one alarm clock, worth $7.98, were stolen from Noel's Loan and Jewelry, 125 E. Colorado Ave., either Friday night or early Saturday morning, police reported.

The burglar gained entrance to the shop through a broken plate glass window in the front of the store. Value of the window was estimated at $50. The culprit made off with 14 Rouan watches, worth $5.75 each and a Westclock Travel Alarm.

A customer at George's Pizza House, 100 E. Colorado Ave., discovered the broken window at approximately 1:15 a.m., Saturday. He returned to the Pizza House and had one of the employes call police. The customer, Jake Salaz, of 2432 N. Cascade Ave., told police that he had not seen anyone near the jewelry store, nor anyone running from the scene.

He is a graduate of the University of Michigan with an AB degree, and has done graduate work at the University of Colorado School of Business.

Lyon is a lieutenant colonel in the army reserve, past president of the local chapter of the Reserve Officer Association, a member of the Colorado Mountain Club, and chairman past of the club. He is an avid mountain climber, having scaled approximately 36 of the 54 Colorado mountain peaks more than 14,000 feet high.

Man Removed From State Accident List

Alvin Robertson, who died Thursday in a local hospital, will not become a Colorado traffic accident statistic. It was determined Friday by El Paso County Coronor Roul Urich that Robertson, who was 65, died not from injuries incurred when he was hit by a car, but from bronchial pneumonia.

Robertson, of 631 W. Colorado Ave., was hit while crossing the street at the middle of the 700 block of West Colorado Avenue on Saturday, Jan. 16. He had suffered numerous fractures and abrasions as a result of the accident.

Dr. Urich called the Colorado Springs Police Department early Friday morning and officially stated the cause of death as bronchial pneumonia.

Mrs. Helman Named to Head Dist. 11 TV Instruction

The teacher for District 11's pilot program in instructional television will be Mrs. Lora Helman, according to Dr. Arthur R. Olson, deputy superintendent of schools. For the last two years Mrs. Helman has been a supervisor of elementary education.

In her new position, Mrs. Helman will be responsible for producing and teaching part of the daily television lessons to be seen on KRDO, Channel 13. She will open and close each lesson by relating it directly to the District 11 instructional program.

A personnel committee selected Mrs. Helman after interviewing 12 candidates and viewing video taped auditions. Dr. Olson said all applicants had done well in the auditions, but the committee selected Mrs. Helman because of her varied teaching experience.

The new television teacher holds a masters degree from the University of Missouri and taught for 13 years in Missouri. She taught all grade levels including departmental music and art.

Mrs. Helman came to Colorado nine years ago. In 1958 she was appointed teacher of the first class of highly academically talented pupils and taught the class until 1964 when she became a supervisor of elementary education.

As a supervisor she has continued to teach amateur radio operation to the highly academically talented pupils.

MRS. LORA HELMAN

Mrs. Helman and her husband, who is a systems analyst at End Afb, have two sons. Kent is a junior at Southern Colorado State College, and Steve is a junior at Wasson High.

The District 11 instructional programs will be seen Monday through Friday at 10:30 a.m. on KRDO TV, starting Feb. 1.

Self Employed Qualify Pension Plans Legally

Self - employed professional and business men are qualifying pension and profit-sharing plans with special income tax advantages under the federal law at a high rate, according to Commerce Clearing House, national reporting authority on tax and business law.

More than 8,400 plans were approved in IRS District offices during the first three quarters of 1964. Of these, 3,318 provided for profit sharing, 3,377 set up pension plans and 1,713 were classified as bond purchase plans, CCH said.

These self-employed retirement plans qualify under a federal law passed in 1962. Such plans permits an income tax deduction of up to $1,250 per year for contributions made to a plan on the self-emlpoyed individual's own behalf. This deduction may be increased, however, by the amount that the self-employed person contributes to the plan on behalf of his employees.

The law requires that all of the self-employed person's regular employees with three or more years of service must be fully covered by the plan, and contributions made on their behalf must be fully vested.

More substantial income tax benefits can be realized by individual business and professional men through traditional types of retirement plans established under professional corporation or association laws, now effective in 32 states, than under the federal self-employed retirement act.

Persons who participate in a qualified traditional-type plan created under a state professional corporation or association law suffer less stringent limitations on contributions and governing funds they set aside for retirement purposes.

But plans under these state laws face tough sledding if the IRS adopts proposed changes in its regulations which have been hanging fire for over a year, CCH said.

Standards for establishing the corporation characteristics necessary to obtain traditional-type benefits through plans set up under these state enabling laws include continuity of life, centralized management, limited liability and free transferability of corporate interests. They would be tightened substantially under the proposed regulation amendments.

Presently pending in Congress is a bill which would automatically classify professional corporations or associations formed under state laws as corporations for federal income tax purposes.

If passed, the bill would mean that such organizations would not have to meet the strict standards contemplated by the IRS in order to adopt retirement plans with the greater tax advantages than those available to plans qualifying under the federal sel-employed retirement act, CCH said.

More liberal treatment for plans set up under the federal act is also provided in another bill now pending in Congress. This legislation proposes to increase the self - employed individual's deduction for his plan contributions to $2,500 a year, currently $1,250. This bill is sponsored by Congressman Keogh, author of the original bill which eventually became the 1962 federal act.

Wrong Address Listed For Joy - Rider in GT

Anthony Lopez, who lives at 1803 W. Pikes Peak Ave., says that Bernie Ted Onstaed who was sentenced to nine months in county jail Friday, does not live at this address.

This was the address Onstaed listed as his. Lopez says he does not know the man and knows no reason why he would give his address as his place of residence.

Onstaed was accused of taking a $1,000 car Sept. 16 from Arthur Walk. He was sentenced to county jail by District Judge Hunter Hardeman for joy-riding.

Luci Johnson Is Studying Catholicism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Luci Baines Johnson, 17, younger daughter of the President, has been taking instruction in the Roman Catholic religion. White House sources say this does not mean she plans to convert.

Luci, a member of the Episcopal Church, was "pinned" recently by Paul Betz, 20, a Catholic and a premedical student at Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.

Elizabeth Carpenter, press secretary to Mrs. Johnson, confirmed Friday night that Luci was taking the instruction. She said she did not know how long or where she had been receiving it. The instruction reportedly is being given by a priest associated with young Betz' college.

Mrs. Carpenter said: "the family considers religion a personal and individual matter. No definitive steps have been taken. But I can confirm that she has been taking instruction in the Roman Catholic faith."

White House sources said Luci long had been interested in the subject of religion.

President Johnson is a member of the Christian Church — Disciples of Christ. Mrs. Johnson and daughters Lynda Bird, 20, and Luci are Episcopalians. Luci is a senior at the National Cathedral School for Girls, an Episcopal school.

The Johnsons usually attend services together at churches of one or the other of the two denominations.

Betz spent the Christmas holidays last month at the Johnson ranch and escorted Luci to Mass at a nearby Catholic Church.

Last spring the White House said Luci was considering entering Marquette University, a Catholic school in Milwaukee, Wis., in the fall of 1965. Lately there have been reports she may seek admission to a school closer to Washington.

District 11 Reassigns 29 Teachers to Mitchell High

Thomas B. Doherty, District 11 superintendent of schools, today announced the reassignment of 29 teachers, nine of them as department chairmen, to the Mitchell High School faculty.

The new assignments become effective in September when Mitchell High, now under construction at Potter Road and San Miguel Street, is ready for occupancy. All but three of the teachers named to the Mitchell faculty are now teaching at Palmer or Wasson High Schools.

Doherty said additional teachers now in the system will be named to the Mitchell faculty at a later date. The faculty will also include some of the new teachers hired for next year, he added.

Other faculty members are Mabel E. Alley, librarian; Marjorie F. Aurand, homemaking; J. D. Barnes dramatics, English, and auditorium manager; Rich H. Calvird, astronony and curator of the planetarium; Charleen D. Colvin, girls' physical education; Dean DeLaney, instrumental music; Jack Frost, art; Charles M. Gaul, student organization and business manager; Robert E. Gill, baseball coach, mathematics and-or physical education.

Also on the faculty are Marjorie Girard, dean of girls; James D. Hartman, football coach, physical education and-or biology; Archer E. Hayes, vocal music, English; Mary Johnson, librarian; Richard E. Powell, basketball coach, biology; Lewis Reimer, counselor; Gonzalo Roldan, audio-visual coordinator, social science; Thomas B. Shoaf, business education, educational data processing; Walter N. Smith, instrumental music; William M. Westbay, social science; track and cross country coach; and William N. Wright, assistant basketball coach, driver training and-or physical education.

One other personnel change, not involving Mitchell, is the transfer of Charles O. Douglas from South Junior to Palmer High as wrestling coach and teacher of mathematics and-or physical education.

Red Cross Seeks New Volunteers

The Pikes Peak Chapter of the American National Red Cross is seeking volunteer workers for positions in areas of community hospitals, clerical work, service to the elderly, motor corps drivers and service to children. Interviews may be arranged by calling the chapter house at 1600 N. Cascade. Applicants should call 632-3536 for an interview.

Training classes will be held during the second week in February. Evening and daytime classes can be scheduled if there are enough volunteers.

For many years volunteers in the area have worked in hospitals at Ft. Carson, the Air Force Academy and the Ent Air Force Dispensary. Requests from expanding health and welfare institutions have prompted the chapter to undertake an all out recruitment program, headed by Chairman Mrs. J .Randolph Campbell, head mistress of the Colorado Springs School for Girls and member of the local Red Cross board of directors.

Luci Johnson Is Studying Catholicism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Luci Baines Johnson, 17, younger daughter of the President, has been taking instruction in the Roman Catholic religion. White House sources say this does not mean she plans to convert.

Luci, a member of the Episcopal Church, was "pinned" recently by Paul Betz, 20, a Catholic and a premedical student at Mount St. Mary's College, Emmitsburg, Md.

Elizabeth Carpenter, press secretary to Mrs. Johnson, confirmed Friday night that Luci was taking the instruction. She said she did not know how long or where she had been receiving it. The instruction reportedly is being given by a priest associated with young Betz' college.

Mrs. Carpenter said: "the family considers religion a personal and individual matter. No definitive steps have been taken. But I can confirm that she has been taking instruction in the Roman Catholic faith."

White House sources said Luci long had been interested in the subject of religion.

President Johnson is a member of the Christian Church — Disciples of Christ. Mrs. Johnson and daughters Lynda Bird, 20, and Luci are Episcopalians. Luci is a senior at the National Cathedral School for Girls, an Episcopal school.

The Johnsons usually attend services together at churches of one or the other of the two denominations.

Betz spent the Christmas holidays last month at the Johnson ranch and escorted Luci to Mass at a nearby Catholic Church.

Last spring the White House said Luci was considering entering Marquette University, a Catholic school in Milwaukee, Wis., in the fall of 1965. Lately there have been reports she may seek admission to a school closer to Washington.

Egypt plans a tourist office. Austria may raise taxes.

District 11 Reassigns 29 Teachers to Mitchell High

Thomas B. Doherty, District 11 superintendent of schools, today announced the reassignment of 29 teachers, nine of them as department chairmen, to the Mitchell High School faculty.

The new assignments become effective in September when Mitchell High, now under construction at Potter Road and San Miguel Street, is ready for occupancy. All but three of the teachers named to the Mitchell faculty are now teaching at Palmer or Wasson High Schools.

Doherty said additional teachers now in the system will be named to the Mitchell faculty at a later date. The faculty will also include some of the new teachers hired for next year, he added.

Other faculty members are Mabel E. Alley, librarian; Marjorie F. Aurand, homemaking; J. D. Barnes dramatics, English, and auditorium manager; Rich H. Calvird, astronony and curator of the planetarium; Charleen D. Colvin, girls' physical education; Dean DeLaney, instrumental music; Jack Frost, art; Charles M. Gaul, student organization and business manager; Robert E. Gill, baseball coach, mathematics and-or physical education.

Also on the faculty are Marjorie Girard, dean of girls; James D. Hartman, football coach, physical education and-or biology; Archer E. Hayes, vocal music, English; Mary Johnson, librarian; Richard E. Powell, basketball coach, biology; Lewis Reimer, counselor; Gonzalo Roldan, audio-visual coordinator, social science; Thomas B. Shoaf, business education, educational data processing; Walter N. Smith, instrumental music; William M. Westbay, social science; track and cross country coach; and William N. Wright, assistant basketball coach, driver training and-or physical education.

One other personnel change, not involving Mitchell, is the transfer of Charles O. Douglas from South Junior to Palmer High as wrestling coach and teacher of mathematics and-or physical education.

Joe Johnson Re-Elected Head Of Shrine Club

Joe Johnson was re-elected president of the Colorado Springs Shrine Club at the Jan. 13 meeting at the Club House.

Other officers elected at the meeting are: Charles Jett, vice president; Etter Bassett, treasurer; and Willis Manning, secretary. Elected for directors were: Joe Johnson, Charles Jett, Paul Martin, Sam Trotter, Homer Sharpton, Mat Stein, Lew Peterson, Harold Thurston, Bill Olsen, and Billy Edwards.

The local Shrine Club is affiliated with the Al Kaly Temple in Pueblo and helps to support the many Children's Hospitals throughout North America.

Dinner meetings are held every third Wednesday of the month at the Club House at 6 S. 33rd St. Various other activities such as ceremonials and dances are held throughout the year.

The local Shrine Club is most known for the annual Shrine Circus every year at the Memorial Park and for the annual Aunt Jemima Pancake Day at the City Auditorium.

Red Cross Seeks New Volunteers

The Pikes Peak Chapter of the American National Red Cross is seeking volunteer workers for positions in areas of community hospitals, clerical work, service to the elderly, motor corps drivers and service to children. Interviews may be arranged by calling the chapter house at 1600 N. Cascade. Applicants should call 632-3536 for an interview.

Training classes will be held during the second week in February. Evening and daytime classes can be scheduled if there are enough volunteers.

For many years volunteers in the area have worked in hospitals at Ft. Carson, the Air Force Academy and the Ent Air Force Dispensary. Requests from expanding health and welfare institutions have prompted the chapter to undertake an all out recruitment program, headed by Chairman Mrs. J. Randolph Campbell, head mistress of the Colorado Springs School for Girls and member of the local Red Cross board of directors.

Mrs. Bogue Entertains Quester Past Presidents

Mrs. Joy R. Bogue, assistant national organization chairman of the Quester Clubs of America, whose territory takes in all states west of the Mississippi River, entertained all past and present presidents of the six chapters she has organized in Colorado Springs, at a luncheon Thursday in the Cedar Room of the Ft. Carson Officers' Club.

Questers were first organized in the state of Pennsylvania in 1944. Today, there are hundreds of these small clubs throughout the United States. The groups meet monthly to study authentic antiques: to learn of the origin and history of these conversation pieces of by-gone days. Many are treasures too fragile to handle, yet too lovely to be stored away.

Following is the list of the six local chapters and their presidents:

Chipota, organized May, 1961. President, Mrs. Herman F. Harder. Past presidents, Mrs. Otis H. Gardner, Mrs. John A. Gamm and Mrs. Edwin L. Adams.

Covered Wagon, organized August, 1961. President Mrs. D. Warren Jewett; past presidents Mrs. Albert E. Nimtz, Mrs. Roy F. Barnes and Mrs. Frederick B. Porter.

Timpiute, organized January, 1962. President Miss Velma McPeek; past presidents, Mrs. Robert M. Clark, Mrs. Paul S. Fisher, who served two terms.

Columbine, organized March, 1962. President Mrs. Ira C. Gilbreth; past presidents, Mrs. Carl B. Zimmerman and Mrs. Gerald C. Bean, now of Reno, Nevada.

Treasure Trails, organized January, 1964. President is Mrs. Con D. Gerdes.

Rose Kingsley, organized February, 1964. President is Mrs. Mervin A. Ziegler.

Mrs. Bogue used her fast high-wheeled motorized bicycle with rider as a center piece at the luncheon. The place cards were of the symbols representing each chapter. Much research and study preceded the naming of each chapter, for each is of historic and local significance. Following luncheon, Mrs. Bogue gave a program, with illustrations, on "Our Heritage in the Field of Antiques."

Gamma Phis To Entertain New Pledges

The Colorado College Gamma Phi Beta active chapter and new pledges will be the special guests of alumnae at 8 p.m., Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. Hubert Crawford, 7516 Tudor Rd. She will be assisted by Mrs. W. D. Tudor Jr., Mrs. Keith Weber and Mrs. George Lindeman.

Tri Deltas Announce Plans for Dessert Party

Alumnae of Delta Delta Delta were busy Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. Lyman A. Dewell, 2520 N. Bennett Ave., where they prepared decorations for the dessert bridge benefit which the sorority will sponsor at the Colorado Springs Country Club Saturday, Feb. 13, at 1 o'clock.

A highlight of the bridge party will be the awarding of a new spring hat from Kaufman's. Other merchants also have donated prizes to be awarded at the affair.

The benefit proceeds will be donated to the Delta Delta Delta National Scholarship Fund, which presents scholarships to college women, regardless of fraternity affiliation, on over 105 campuses in the United States and Canada. In addition, the fraternity gives a $1,000 scholarship annually to one of its memebers for use in graduate study.

Chairman for the dessert bridge is Mrs. Richard M. Suriano, and members of her committee are Mrs. G. L. Wilson, Mrs. D. W. Sencenbaugh, Mrs. James Phelps, Mrs. Richard Webster and Mrs. Richard E. Petersen.

Assisting Mrs. Dewell at the meeting Tuesday was Mrs. Donald Baldridge, co-hostess. Mrs. T. H. Busby, president of the group, conducted the business meeting.

Tickets for the dessert bridge are $1.25, and reservations may be obtained by calling Mrs. F. Thomas Clark at 632-4432, or Mrs. Terry H. Busby at 633-7413.

Ikebana Chapter Organized

An Ikebana International Chapter organizational meeting was held Thursday, Jan. 14, at the home of Mrs. W. H. Jones-Burdick. Mrs. Jones-Burdick and Mrs. J. L. McMahon were asked to be co-chairmen until an election of officers is held.

"Ikebana" is a Japanese word meaning "flower arranging." Ikebana International is a Japanese cultural, non-profit organization, founded in Tokyo, Japan, in 1956. Its purpose is to encourage the study of ikebana throughout the world. Members meet to study Japanese flower arrangement, customs, and related arts; to exchange ideas and share knowledge.

There are 78 chapters of Ikebana throughout the world including England, Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, Hong Kong, Malaysia, India, Okinawa, Italy and Africa. Members receive an Ikebana International magazine published in Tokyo semi-annually and a bi-monthly newsletter. A United States conference is held yearly, with the exception of this year, when the first world-wide conference will be held in Tokyo in May.

The club will next meet at 1:30 p.m., Feb. 23, to the home of Mrs. McMahon, 2030 Devon St. Girl's Day will be the subject of interest. This holiday occurs on March 3 in Japan and is a major yearly festival. Girl's Day dolls will be part of the program. Anyone interested in becoming a member of Ikebana International is cordially invited.

Zontas to Honor Memory of Amelia Earhart

Zonta Club will meet at 7:30 p.m., Thursday, in the home of Mrs. Pearl Lilly, 2922 King St., in honor of Amelia Earhart. The guest speaker for the evening will be Mrs. George Lum. She will review "Profile and Courage," written by Amelia's sister, Mrs. Muriel Morrissey. Co-hostesses will be Edna Loomis and Mrs. Davie Powell.

Amelia Earhart was a devoted member of Zonta International for many years before her death in 1937, when she was lost in mid-Pacific on the last lap of her flight around the world at the equator.

In 1938, Zonta International service organization of executive and professional women, pledged to activities that promote civic and social welfare, established the "Amelia Earhart Scholarship Award" in her memory. Scholarship grants are awarded annually to graduate women students for advanced study in fields of aeronautical engineering.

Ikebana Chapter Organized

An Ikebana International Chapter organizational meeting was held Thursday, Jan. 14, at the home of Mrs. W. H. Jones-Burdick. Mrs. Jones-Burdick and Mrs. J. L. McMahon were asked to be co-chairmen until an election of officers is held.

"Ikebana" is a Japanese word meaning "flower arranging." Ikebana International is a Japanese cultural, non-profit organization, founded in Tokyo, Japan, in 1956. Its purpose is to encourage the study of ikebana throughout the world. Members meet to study Japanese flower arrangement, customs, and related arts; to exchange ideas and share knowledge.

There are 78 chapters of Ikebana throughout the world including England, Australia, New Zealand, Argentina, Hong Kong, Malaysia, India, Okinawa, Italy and Africa. Members receive an Ikebana International magazine published in Tokyo semi-annually and a bi-monthly newsletter. A United States conference is held yearly, with the exception of this year, when the first world-wide conference will be held in Tokyo in May.

The club will next meet at 1:30 p.m., Feb. 23, to the home of Mrs. McMahon, 2030 Devon St. Girl's Day will be the subject of interest. This holiday occurs on March 3 in Japan and is a major yearly festival. Girl's Day dolls will be part of the program. Anyone interested in becoming a member of Ikebana International is cordially invited.

Sunday Meat Loaf

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Robert Carrier is food editor on the London Sunday Times and also of London Vogue. He approaches eating with infectious enthusiasm and likes to cook and entertain in his London home. You would enjoy yourself at his table. He's likeable and experienced, as his particularly fine new book, "Great Dishes of the World" reveals.

Amusingly, this international gourmet (he was born in New England) likes his American meat loaf. "But served with chilled sour cream, hot curry sauce or red wine sauce a la bordelaise," he advises. "Experiment with different flavor accents. Make your Sunday meat loaf a taste event."

American Meat Loaf
(Serves 8)

¾ cup finely chopped onion
¾ cup finely chopped celery
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 teaspoons olive oil
4 tablespoons butter
2-3 cup red wine
2 to 4 slices bread
1 pound finely - ground raw beef
½ pound finely - ground raw veal
½ pound finely - ground raw pork
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Ground allspice
1 teaspoon rubbed thyme
2 bay leaves, crushed
2 eggs, well beaten
Tomato or Chili Sauce

Saute finely-chopped onion, celery and garlic in olive oil and butter until transparent. Add red wine and simmer gently for 5 minutes. Trim crusts from bread; dice; add to wine mixture and pour mixture over ground meats. Mix well and season with salt, pepper, allspice, thyme and bay leaves. The seasoning should be rather sharp. Stir in the beaten eggs and put in a well-greased baking dish, or pat into loaf shape on a greased baking tin or oiled board, and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees). Baste from time to time with a few tablespoons of heated wine. Cooking time: a minimum of 1 hour. Serve with tomato or chili sauce.

Lt. Jeffrey Baker Weds Miss Shirley Ann Watson

The Immanuel Lutheran Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Shirley Ann Watson and Lt. Jeffrey Dennis Baker, at 2 p.m. Dec. 27, the Rev. Walter A. Enge officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Temple O. Watson of 2810 Wood Ave. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Baker of Sacramento, Calif.

The altar was decorated with Christmas greens, a Christmas tree decorated in blue, and baskets of white mums and pom pons with greens, flanking the altar. Large white satin bows and poinsettias marked the pews of the middle aisle, which was carpeted in white.

Kenneth Schlueter at the organ played Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Rejoicing" as the processional for the bridesmaids, and Purcell's "Trumpet Tune in D," for the bride's procession. Nancy Scheuerman sang "God Bless This Day," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride's floor length gown of ivory satin was styled with bell skirt, and empire bodice trimmed in Alencon lace, and made with scoop neckline and three - quarter length sleeves. The detachable chapel train was trimmed with matching Alencon and seed pearls, and her fingertip veil of silk illusion was caught to a cap of satin petals. She wore a single strand of pearls which was a gift from the bridegroom. Her flowers were white feathered carnations arranged in a cascade and centered with a detachable orchid corsage.

Mrs. Shari Axelson of Palmer Lake was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Betty Randall of Phoenix, Miss Leslie Nissen of Dallas, Miss Pamela Hoiles, of Colorado Springs, and Miss Susan Carol Williams, cousin of the bride from Colorado Springs. All wore floor length gowns of Mediterranean blue satin, styled like that of the bride. They wore caps of matching satin petals, white gloves and carried snowball bouquets of white pom pons which hung from their wrists by white velvet ribbons.

Norma June Mungenast as flower girl wore a floor length frock like those of the attendants and carried a white basket of white rose petals. Bradley Dean Welborn, cousin of the bride from Colorado Springs, was ring bearer.

The bride's mother wore for her daughter's wedding a sheath of green lace and crepe with matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a dress of teal-green wool with matching jacket and hat, black accessories and white gloves. Both wore corsages of cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Harold Lillard presided at the guest book during the reception at the Ent Officers' Club. Assisting in serving were Miss Joan Swibaker and Miss Jane Fowler. All wore corsages of white carnations. The champagne glasses and sabre used at the reception were gifts to the couple.

For traveling the bride chose a dark blue suit with matching hat and veil, and accessories of pearlized gold. Her corsage was a white cattleya orchid.

Before her marriage, the bride was employed by the Mountain States Telephone Co. A graduate of Palmer High School, she also attended Colorado University.

The bridegroom attended Bainbridge Naval Prep School at Bainbridge, Md., and was graduated from the U. S. Air Force Academy, class of 1964.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Milton Beckler, great aunt and uncle of the bride, Denver; Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Beckler, great aunt and uncle of the bride, Grant, Nev., Mr. and Mrs. V. P. Nicoletti, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hiecox and family, Denver; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Marshal,, Millington, Tenn. Mr. and Mrs. Martin Negring, Richard and Mary Jane of Canon City; Lt. and Mrs. John Nehring, Williams Air Force Base, Ariz.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Baker gave the rehearsal dinner Saturday evening honoring their son and Miss Watson at the Candlelight Inn. Attending were members of the wedding party and their families, the Rev. and Mrs. Walter A. Enge.

State Officer Will Visit Monte Rosas

Hazel Peterman, pesident of the Rebekah Assembly of Colorado, will make her official visit to Monte Rosa Rebekah Lodge 4 on Friday when a banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m., IOOF Hall, dining room, in her honor. The president's color theme and emblems will be carried out in the decorations.

Fine Tailoring To Be Taught by Nicole Paulson

Nicole Paulson, 2205 Patrician Way, announces a new series of dressmaking classes beginning Tuesday and Wednesday. Classes will be from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

The series consists of 10 lessons using the method and training materials of Eunice Farmer whose column is nationally syndicated under the name "Sew Simple." She is famous in the St. Louis area for her school which started with just a few friends and now has five full - time instructors and over 200 students.

Small classes allow individual attention and include demonstrations and practice sessions which help everyone learn the basics of fine sewing which includes bound buttonholes, gussets, fitting and other details.

Mrs. Paulson says, "Anyone who wants to take the time can learn to make a garment, which, for a fraction of the cost, has all the details and fine tailoring seen only on better garments. Any woman who has done even a minimum of sewing can join a class and discover for herself the excitement of creating a superior garment and wearing it with pride."

Mrs. Paulson can be reached at 636-1896 and will be glad to talk to anyone interested in having more information.

Patricia Garbee Becomes Bride of Sam Ellington

Patricia Ann Garbee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Garbee, Billings, Mo., became the bride of Sam R. Ellington, son of Mrs. Juanita Carmack, Cardwell, Mo., and Mr. Sam W. Ellington, Los Angeles, Calif., at 3 p.m., Jan. 15. The wedding was held at the Eastside Church of Christ, Colorado Springs. The Rev. Jerry Sanderson was the officiating clergyman.

The bride wore a gold two-piece suit and used white roses. Phyllis Lux, maid of honor, wore a beige suit and red roses. John Pinkston was the best man.

After a wedding trip to Aspen, the couple intends to settle in Colorado Springs.

The bride attended St. John's Hospital School of Nursing, Springfield, Mo. The bridegroom attended El Cimeno Reel, Gardena, Calif.

Sunday Meat Loaf

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Robert Carrier is food editor on the London Sunday Times and also of London Vogue. He approaches eating with infectious enthusiasm and likes to cook and entertain in his London home. You would enjoy yourself at his table. He's likeable and experienced, as his particularly fine new book, "Great Dishes of the World" reveals.

Amusingly, this international gourmet (he was born in New England) likes his American meat loaf. "But served with chilled sour cream, hot curry sauce or red wine sauce a la bordelaise," he advises. "Experiment with different flavor accents. Make your Sunday meat loaf a taste event."

American Meat Loaf
(Serves 8)

¾ cup finely chopped onion
¾ cup finely chopped celery
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
2 teaspoons olive oil
4 tablespoons butter
2-3 cup red wine
2 to 4 slices bread
1 pound finely - ground raw beef
½ pound finely - ground raw veal
½ pound finely - ground raw pork
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper
Ground allspice
1 teaspoon rubbed thyme
2 bay leaves, crushed
2 eggs, well beaten
Tomato or Chili Sauce

Saute finely-chopped onion, celery and garlic in olive oil and butter until transparent. Add red wine and simmer gently for 5 minutes. Trim crusts from bread; dice; add to wine mixture and pour mixture over ground meats. Mix well and season with salt, pepper, allspice, thyme and bay leaves. The seasoning should be rather sharp. Stir in the beaten eggs and put in a well-greased baking dish, or pat into loaf shape on a greased baking tin or oiled board, and bake in a slow oven (325 degrees). Baste from time to time with a few tablespoons of heated wine. Cooking time: a minimum of 1 hour. Serve with tomato or chili sauce.

Lt. Jeffrey Baker Weds Miss Shirley Ann Watson

The Immanuel Lutheran Church was the scene of the wedding of Miss Shirley Ann Watson and Lt. Jeffrey Dennis Baker, at 2 p.m. Dec. 27, the Rev. Walter A. Enge officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Temple O. Watson of 2810 Wood Ave. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Baker of Sacramento, Calif.

The altar was decorated with Christmas greens, a Christmas tree decorated in blue, and baskets of white mums and pom pons with greens, flanking the altar. Large white satin bows and poinsettias marked the pews of the middle aisle, which was carpeted in white.

Kenneth Schlueter at the organ played Bach's "Jesu, Joy of Man's Rejoicing" as the processional for the bridesmaids, and Purcell's "Trumpet Tune in D." for the bride's procession. Nancy Scheuerman sang "God Bless This Day," and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride's floor length gown of ivory satin was styled with bell skirt, and empire bodice trimmed in Alencon lace, and made with scoop neckline and three - quarter length sleeves. The detachable chapel train was trimmed with matching Alencon and seed pearls, and her fingertip veil of silk illusion was caught to a cap of satin petals. She wore a single strand of pearls which was a gift from the bridegroom. Her flowers were white feathered carnations arranged in a cascade and centered with a detachable orchid corsage.

Mrs. Shari Azelson of Palmer Lake was matron of honor, and bridesmaids were Miss Betty Randall of Phoenix, Miss Leslie Nissen of Dallas, Miss Pamela Hoiles, of Colorado Springs, and Miss Susan Carol Williams, cousin of the bride from Colorado Springs. All wore floor length gowns of Mediterranean blue satin, styled like that of the bride. They wore caps of matching satin petals, white gloves and carried snowball bouquets of white pom poms which hung from their wrists by white velvet ribbons.

Norma June Mungenast as flower girl wore a floor length frock like those of the attendants and carried a white basket of white rose petals. Bradley Dean Welborn, cousin of the bride from Colorado Springs, was ring bearer.

The bride's mother wore for her daughter's wedding a sheath of green lace and crepe with matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a dress of teal-green wool with matching jacket and hat, black accessories and white gloves. Both wore corsages of cymbidium orchids.

Mrs. Harold Lillard presided at the guest book during the reception at the Ent Officers' Club. Assisting in serving were Miss Joan Swibaker and Miss Jane Fowler. All wore corsages of white carnations. The champagne glasses and sabre used at the reception were gifts to the couple.

The couple left for Lubbock, Tex. where the bridegroom is stationed at Reese Air Force Base. They will live at the Georgian Arms Apt., 2005 Eighth St.

For traveling the bride chose a dark blue suit with matching hat and veil, and accessories of pearlized gold. Her corsage was a white cattleya orchid.

Before her marriage, the bride was employed by the Mountain States Telephone Co. A graduate of Palmer High School, she also attended Colorado University.

The bridegroom attended Bainbridge Naval Prep School at Bainbridge, Md., and was graduated from the U. S. Air Force Academy, class of 1964.

Out of town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Milton Beckler, great aunt and uncle of the bride, Denver; Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Beckler, great aunt and uncle of the bride, Grant, Nev., Mr. and Mrs. V. P. Nicoletti, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hiecox and family, Denver; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Marshal,, Millington, Tenn. Mr. and Mrs. Martin Negring, Richard and Mary Jane of Canon City; Lt. and Mrs. John Nehring, Williams Air Force Base, Ariz.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Baker gave the rehearsal dinner Saturday evening honoring their son and Miss Watson at the Candlelight Inn. Attending were members of the wedding party and their families, the Rev. and Mrs. Walter A. Enge.

State Officer Will Visit Monte Rosas

Hazel Peterman, pesident of the Rebekah Assembly of Colorado, will make her official visit to Monte Rosa Rebekah Lodge 4 on Friday when a banquet will be held at 6:30 p.m., IOOF Hall, dining room, in her honor. The president's color theme and emblems will be carried out in the decorations.

Rebekah Lodge 89 will be serving. Tickets will be $1.50 per plate and may be obtained by calling Elizabeth Jamison, 633-1273 or Cathleen Dunthornby, 389-3957. All Rebekahs are welcome and reservations should be made as soon as possible. Entertainment will follow.

Fine Tailoring To Be Taught by Nicole Paulson

Nicole Paulson, 2205 Patrician Way, announces a new series of dressmaking classes beginning Tuesday and Wednesday. Classes will be from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and 1:30 to 3:30 p.m.

The series consists of 10 lessons using the method and training materials of Eunice Farmer whose column is nationally syndicated under the name "Sew Simple." She is famous in the St. Louis area for her school which started with just a few friends and now has five full - time instructors and over 200 students.

Small classes allow individual attention and include demonstrations and practice sessions which help everyone learn the basics of fine sewing which includes bound buttonholes, gussets, fitting and other details.

Mrs. Paulson says, "Anyone who wants to take the time can learn to make a garment, which, for a fraction of the cost, has all the details and fine tailoring seen only on better garments. Any woman who has done even a minimum of sewing can join a class and discover for herself the excitement of creating a superior garment and wearing it with pride."

Mrs. Paulson can be reached at 636-1896 and will be glad to talk to anyone interested in having more information.

Patricia Garbee Becomes Bride of Sam Ellington

Patricia Ann Garbee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Garbee, Billings, Mo., became the bride of Sam R. Ellington, son of Mrs. Juanita Carmack, Cardweil, Mo., and Mr. Sam W. Ellington, Los Angeles, Calif., at 3 p.m., Jan. 15. The wedding was held at the Eastside Church of Christ, Colorado Springs. The Rev. Jerry Sanderson was the officiating clergyman.

The bride wore a gold two-piece suit and used white roses. Phyllis Lux, maid of honor, wore a beige suit and red roses. John Pinkston was the best man.

After a wedding trip to Aspen, the couple intends to settle in Colorado Springs.

The bride attended St. John's Hospital School of Nursing, Springfield, Mo. The bridegroom attended El Cimeno Reel, Gardena, Calif.

The bride attended Santa Cruz High School, The bridegroom went to Colorado Springs High School and Colorado University.

Gout Depends on Person

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

Q—I have gout. My wife is always telling me that's because I've lived too high, eaten and drunk too much. Is her "normal" attitude justified?

A—A new handbook published by The Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, entitled "Diet and Arthritis," written by this columnist, answers your question. The section on gout reads, "Gout has been traditionally associated with 'high living,' rich foods and drink. Modern research, however, has discovered that in most instances the basic cause is that persons with gout have a metabolic defect in the ability to metabolize purine—the proteins which form uric acid. An accumulation of uric acid in the system of such individuals may occur even on a diet normal in protein, and with normal kidney action. However, gouty attacks may be triggered in susceptible people by dietary excesses and other situations such as excessive dieting or alcohol consumption, or emotional upset through the effect on the body chemistry.

"With a better understanding of the disease and with the newer drugs for the management of gout, blood, uric acid levels can be controlled without rigid dietary restrictions. Even so, most physicians recommend that people subject to gout not exceed this through overindulgence in fatty foods and alcohol, and through the elimination of such foods as liver, kidney, sweetbreads and beer. Coffee, tea and cocoa need not be restricted. Fluid intake should be liberal so that uric acid can be effectively eliminated."

Registrations Are Open for Y-Wives Classes

New Measles Vaccine To Be Available Soon

Condensed from a detailed report from the Medical and Pharmaceutical Information Bureau.

Introduction of a new one-shot measles vaccine is expected soon. Known as the Schwarz Strain, it could make possible the eradication of measles.

This vaccine is concerned solely with common measles and its complications, its incidence and prevention, and not at all with German measles. (German measles, or rubella, is a virus disease and is not the same as common measles. A mild disease, German measles is feared only by pregnant women for possible damage to the fetus.)

Common measles is also a virus disease, endemic and epidemic, and one of the most contagious. There is only one common measles — whether known as red measles, big measles or black measles. It is transmitted through coughing, sneezing, even talking. Signs and symptoms are runny nose, red and watery eyes, harsh cough, sore throat, temperature, and a later rash.

Every year millions of children all over the world will come down with this unnecessary disease popularly supposed to be innocuous and no reason for concern. In many cases of measles, however, there may be complications — hidden or overt. As a consequence, many children will die. Others will never be normal. Their bodies will be paralyzed or their brains permanently damaged.

Another group, some 50 per cent, may be so subtly injured that only abnormal brain waves may be a clue to slow learning or other difficulties. Polio is frightening, yet, measles kills six times as many as polio.

Potentially serious complications include pneumonia, bronchitis, ear infection, neurological disturbance, poor health, interference with school work, lung disorder, and heart damage.

Dr. Morten Andelman of the Chicago Board of Health says, "There is growing evidence that this disease, even in mild form, may play a significant role as a cause of mental retardation, learning difficulties, and personality or behavior changes."

These serious results may be eliminated with a new vaccine which promises to provide long-lasting immunity from a single injection with little or no after effects. This vaccine has been called the Schwarz - strain vaccine after Dr. Anton J. F. Schwarz of Pitman - Moore, division of the Dow Chemical Company, where six years were spent in development.

One of the most significant facts about this vaccine is its capability of providing immunity with a single shot without the need for gamma globulin to reduce incidence of fever and rash or other medicine to combat reaction.

McHam-James Nuptials Held in Santa Cruz Church

Pamela James, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. James, Santa Cruz, Calif., was married at 2 p.m., Jan. 10, to Robert C. McHam, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. McHam, 2642 E. Bijou St., at the First Presbyterian Church of Santa Cruz, Calif.

The Rev. Thomas D. Ewing performed the double ring ceremony. The bride was given away by her father.

She wore a white velvet floor-length gown with finger - tip veil attached to a maribu bow. She carried a rainbow Bible with white orchids and white stephanotis. The gown and veil were fashioned by the mother of the bride.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Charles E. Repsher. She wore sapphire blue velvet in sheath style with a sweetheart neckline, and carried a white rose bouquet.

The bridesmaids were: Mrs. William G. Forwood, sister of the bride, Sunnyvale, Calif.; Mrs. Ronald F. Payton, sister of the bride, Campbell, Calif.; Mrs. Michael Rops, San Francisco, and Miss Elizabeth Ann Forwood, Jr., niece of the bride, Sunnyvale. All bridesmaids wore sapphire blue velvet sheaths with sweetheart necklines. The junior bridesmaid wore a princess style dress with white lace trim.

Col. Frank M. Shapro was the best man. Ushers were: Mr. William G. Forwood, brother-in-law of the bride, Sunnyvale; Mr. Ronald F. Payton, brother-in-law of the bride, Campbell; and Mr. Eddie B. James, brother of the bride, Santa Cruz.

The bride's mother wore a green and blue embossed satin sheath suit with matching pill box hat and green accessories. Her flowers were white phaelanopsis. The bridegroom's mother wore a light green brocade sheath with black accessories and Cavender phaelanopsis.

A reception was held at the Harvey West Club House for 200 guests. Assisting were: Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Findley, aunt and uncle of the bride; Mrs. Manuel Vierra III, cousin of the bride, cake cutter; Miss Sarah Jane Findley, cousin of the bride, cake cutter; Miss Nancy Carol Gray, cousin of the bride, guest book; and Miss Susan James, cousin of the bride, guest book.

Guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. McHam, parents of the groom, Patti le Anne McHam, sister of the groom, Mrs. Lon Thigpen, aunt of the groom, all of Colorado Springs.

The bride wore a beige two-piece wool siut with a mink collar, beige accessories, and a sapphire blue hat for her going-away costume. Her corsage was of white orchids.

The wedding trip includes San Francisco and northern California. The newlyweds will return to Ft. Hood, Tex., until April and will then move to Ft. Benning, Ga., where the bridegroom will attend officers candidate school.

The bride attended Santa Cruz High School, The bridegroom went to Colorado Springs High School and Colorado University.

Gout Depends on Person

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

"Q—I have gout. My wife is always telling me that's because I've lived too high, eaten and drunk too much. Is her "normal" attitude justified?

A—A new handbook published by The Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, entitled "Diet and Arthritis," written by this columnist, answers your question. The section on gout reads, "Gout has been traditionally associated with 'high living,' rich foods and drink. Modern research, however, has discovered that in most instances the basic cause is that persons with gout have a metabolic defect in the ability to metabolize purine—the proteins which form uric acid. An accumulation of uric acid in the system of such individuals may occur even on a diet normal in protein, and with normal kidney action. However, gouty attacks may be triggered in susceptible people by dietary excesses and other situations such as excessive dieting or alcohol consumption, or emotional upset through the effect on the body chemistry.

"With a better understanding of the disease and with the newer drugs for the management of gout, blood, uric acid levels can be controlled without rigid dietary restrictions. Even so, most physicians recommend that people subject to gout not lower this through excessive indulgence in fatty foods and alcohol, and through the elimination of such foods as liver, kidney, sweetbreads and beer. Coffee, tea and cocoa need not be restricted. Fluid intake should be liberal so that uric acid can be effectively eliminated."

Registrations Are Open for Y-Wives Classes

Mrs. Shirley Berg, president of the Tuesday Y-Wives Club, announced today that class registration would be accepted 9 a.m. Tuesday at the YWCA building. Classes being offered this session are: knitting, oil painting, beginning and intermediate bridge, begining and intermediate sewing and candle making.

New Measles Vaccine To Be Available Soon

Condensed from a detailed report from the Medical and Pharmaceutical Information Bureau.

Introduction of a new one-shot measles vaccine is expected soon. Known as the Schwarz Strain, it could make possible the eradication of measles.

This vaccine is concerned solely with common measles and its complications, its incidence and prevention, and not at all with German measles. (German measles, or rubella, is a virus disease and is not the same as common measles. A mild disease, German measles is feared only by pregnant women for possible damage to the fetus.)

Common measles is also a virus disease, endemic and epidemic, and one of the most contagious. There is only one common measles — whether known as red measles, big measles or black measles. It is transmitted through coughing, sneezing, even talking. Signs and symptoms are runny nose, red and watery eyes, harsh cough, sore throat, temperature, and a later rash.

Every year millions of children all over the world will come down with this unnecessary disease popularly supposed to be innocuous and no reason for concern. In many cases of measles, however, there may be complications — hidden or overt. As a consequence, many children will die. Others will never be normal. Their bodies will be paralyzed or their brains permanently damaged.

Another group, some 50 per cent, may be so subtly injured that only abnormal brain waves may be a clue to slow learning or other difficulties. Polio is frightening, yet, measles kills six times as many as polio.

Potentially serious complications include pneumonia, bronchitis, ear infection, neurological disturbance, poor health, interference with school work, lung disorder, and heart damage.

Dr. Morten Andelman of the Chicago Board of Health says, "There is growing evidence that this disease, even in mild form, may play a significant role as a cause of mental retardation, learning difficulties, and personality or behavior changes."

These serious results may be eliminated with a new vaccine which promises to provide long-lasting immunity from a single injection with little or no after effects. This vaccine has been called the Schwarz - strain vaccine after Dr. Anton J. F. Schwarz of Pitman - Moore, division of the Dow Chemical Company, where six years were spent in development.

One of the most significant facts about this vaccine is its capability of providing immunity with a single shot without the need for gamma globulin to reduce incidence of fever and rash or other medicine to combat reaction.

Jewish Art to Be Subject Of Hadassah Meeting

Mrs. Elsa Reich, librarian of the Fine Arts Center, will demonstrate and speak on the topic "Is There a Jewish Art?" at the meeting of the Colorado Springs Chapter of Hadassah at 1 p.m. Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. Supperstein, 29 Alta Vista Rd. in commemoration of Jewish Art Month.

Mrs. Minnie Fleisher will be co-hostess. Opening prayer will be given by Mrs. David Supperstein.

Developing, nurturing the young, healing the sick and dedicated to the humanistic approach to creativity of the individual is the organization's goal.

"Jewish Art Month is significantly tied up with the celebration of Tu-B'Shvat, the Jewish Arbor Day the joyous festival referred to as the New Year of the Trees which welcomes spring in Israel. It is at this season that the countryside of Israel is ablaze with spring blossoms and bursting buds on the orange trees, as well as the apricot and almond trees. Thousands of school children crowned with spring flower wreaths and dressed in white, march toward the fields to plant trees. The young, the renewal of hope for the future is expressive of the creativity of art and nature.

"National Hadassah has designated this month also as Vocational Education Month which additionally ties in with these aspects. Initial success of Hadassah's recently inaugurated two - term course for training medical secretaries has been so great that plans are now being made for a second class in this newest type of vocational education in Israel. The training is given at Hadassah's Alice Seligsberg Vocational High School in Jerusalem."

This was announced recently by Mrs. Victor Goodstein, Vocational Education chairman of the Colorado Springs Chapter of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America. Hadassah's primary purpose — through its vocational education program — is to produce the kind of skilled personnel "so vitally needed" in various fields of Israeli life. Mrs. Goodstein added that the Alice Seligsberg Vocational High School trains young women in nutrition and homemaking, dressmaking, secretarial duties, crafts, and dental and laboratory assistants' work. The school is unique in that it combines vocational training with a full high school curriculum.

Mrs. Goodstein said that Hadassah also operates a fine mechanics and precision instruments workshop and a printing workshop as part of its Louis D. Brandeis Vocational Center. Hadassah's fine mechanics and precision instrument workshop offers a four - year course in mechanics, scientific subjects, precision instrument design and repair, and academic studies. She said that the latest addition to this workshop is a tool and die - making department, the first in Israel. Mrs. Goodstein noted that "graduates from this workshop are literally snapped up by industry and the armed services. Orders from governmental and private agencies and the Hebrew University Hadassah Medical School make the workshop partly self-supporting."

"Also part of Hadassah's vocational education program in Israel is the Hadassah Vocational Guidance Bureau in Jerusalem — the only non - public guidance center in the country offering individual counseling, group guidance and selection testing, recognized by the Israel Government. The bureau offers internships for Hebrew University teacher - counselor and psychology students. Its research staff developed or standardized most of its 100 psychological tests said Mrs. Goodstein.

"In another area, Hadassah maintains Neurim, the Rural Vocational Center at Kfar Vitkin, in cooperation with Youth Aliyah, international child welfare movement. This center offers short - term courses in agricultural skills and trades, including care and maintenance of farm machinery, plumbing, carpentry, house painting, cooking and child care. Early last year an electronics building was established at Neurim." Mrs. Goodstein added "newly-emerging African countries are using Neurim as a model for vocational instruction for their youth."

Jewish Art to Be Subject Of Hadassah Meeting

Mrs. Elsa Reich, librarian of the Fine Arts Center, will demonstrate and speak on the topic "Is There a Jewish Art?" at the meeting of the Colorado Springs Chapter of Hadassah at 1 p.m. Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. Supperstein, 29 Alta Vista Rd. in commemoration of Jewish Art Month.

Mrs. Minnie Fleisher will be co-hostess. Opening prayer will be given by Mrs. David Supperstein.

Developing, nurturing the young, healing the sick and dedicated to the humanistic approach to creativity of the individual is the organization's goal.

"Jewish Art Month is significantly tied up with the celebration of Tu-B'Shvat, the Jewish Arbor Day the joyous festival referred to as the New Year of the Trees which welcomes spring in Israel. It is at this season that the countryside of Israel is ablaze with spring blossoms and bursting buds on the orange trees, as well as the apricot and almond trees. Thousands of school children crowned with spring flower wreaths and dressed in white, march toward the fields to plant trees. The young, the renewal of hope for the future is expressive of the creativity of art and nature.

"National Hadassah has designated this month also as Vocational Education Month which additionally ties in with these aspects. Initial success of Hadassah's recently inaugurated two - term course for training medical secretaries has been so great that plans are now being made for a second class in this newest type of vocational education in Israel. The training is given at Hadassah's Alice Seligsberg Vocational High School in Jerusalem."

This was announced recently by Mrs. Victor Goodstein, Vocational Education chairman of the Colorado Springs Chapter of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America. Hadassah's primary purpose — through its vocational education program — is to produce the kind of skilled personnel "so vitally needed" in various fields of Israeli life. Mrs. Goodstein added that the Alice Seligsberg Vocational High School trains young women in nutrition and homemaking, dressmaking, secretarial duties, crafts, and dental and laboratory assistants' work. The school is unique in that it combines vocational training with a full high school curriculum.

Mrs. Goodstein said that Hadassah also operates a fine mechanics and precision instruments workshop and a printing workshop as part of its Louis D. Brandeis Vocational Center. Hadassah's fine mechanics and precision instrument workshop offers a four - year course in mechanics, scientific subjects, precision instrument design and repair, and academic studies. She said that the latest addition to this workshop is a tool and die - making department, the first in Israel. Mrs. Goodstein noted that "graduates from this workshop are literally snapped up by industry and the armed services. Orders from governmental and private agencies and the Hebrew University Hadassah Medical School make the workshop partly self-supporting."

"Also part of Hadassah's vocational education program in Israel is the Hadassah Vocational Guidance Bureau in Jerusalem — the only non - public guidance center in the country offering individual counseling, group guidance and selection testing, recognized by the Israel Government. The bureau offers internships for Hebrew University teacher - counselor and psychology students. Its research staff developed or standardized most of its 100 psychological tests said Mrs. Goodstein.

"In another area, Hadassah maintains Neurim, the Rural Vocational Center at Kfar Vitkin, in cooperation with Youth Aliyah, international child welfare movement. This center offers short - term courses in agricultural skills and trades, including care and maintenance of farm machinery, plumbing, carpentry, house painting, cooking and child care. Early last year an electronics building was established at Neurim." Mrs. Goodstein added "newly-emerging African countries are using Neurim as a model for vocational instruction for their youth."

Change of Pace

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

After holiday parties and feasting, plain food seems a particularly welcome change of pace. How does this recipe for cabbage with ham appeal to you? Or this steak stuffed with rice? They should please you after the week of rich food.

Dilled Cabbage with Ham
(6 to 10 servings)

2 lb. head cabbage, shredded
1 cup julienne smoked ham
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill
1 ¼ teaspoons salt
1-16 teaspoon ground ginger per
1-16 teaspoon ground giner

Place cabbage in a saucepan with 1-inch boiling salted water. Bring to boiling point and cook, uncovered, for 4 minutes. Cover and cook 2 minutes longer. Drain, if necessary. Add remaining ingredients and toss lightly.

Rice Stuffed Flank Steak
(4 to 6 servings)

1 flank steak about 1½ pounds)
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¼ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup cooked rice
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons shortening
1 can (10½ ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup water

Pound flank steak with meat hammer or edge of heavy saucer; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cook celery and onion in butter until tender; combine with rice and parsley; spread on steak. Roll steak as for jelly roll; fasten with skewers. In oven-proof skillet, brown rolled steak in shortening. Pour off drippings. Blend soup and water; pour over steak. Cover; bake in moderate oven (350 detender. Baste now and then. If desired, cover may be removed during last 15 minutes to thicken gravy.

MR. AND MRS. LARRY ALLEN SPORTSMAN

Sportsman-Bostwick Rites Held at Lutheran Church

Gretchen Sue Bostwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bostwick, Austin, Tex., was married to Larry Allen Sportsman, son of Mrs. Ola Sportsman, Colorado Springs, at 2 p.m., Dec. 13, in the Shepard of the Hills Lutheran Church. The Rev. Robert C. Jacobson performed the ceremony.

Blue, green, and white altar flowers decorated the church. Candelabra were tied with blue and green streamers.

Organist William Hulka played Handel's "Aria in F. Minor," as the processional, and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," recessional. Other music included "O Perfect Love," "Vesper Hour," "Love's Greeting," "Cantileno," and "Jesus Joy of Man's Desiring. Soloist Les Bailey sang "Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a brocaded satin A-line dress with a chapel train and a heart shaped neckline. The train was caught into a bustle held by a cabbage rose. Her jewelry was a silver bell with a rhinestone center, a gift from the bridegroom. The veil was chapel length. The bride carried one large white gardenia surrounded by holly leaves, on a white Bible.

Miss Stella Friddle, maid of honor, wore blue satin with blue accessories, and green leaves on a white muff. Her jewelry was a small gold cage filled with aurora borialis chips. Rita Mead, bridesmaid, wore blue with green accessories, with dress like Miss Friddles.

Ring bearers were Kevelyn Hansen, niece of the bride, and Joe Davis, nephew of the bridegroom. Melvin Fox was best man while ushers were Buddy Sportsman, brother of the bridegroom, Eric Bostwick, brother of the bride, and Colby Lively.

The reception was held in the church parlor. The cake was three-tiers with pink bells on top. Lime punch was served with red, green, and white mints in the shape of bells.

Mrs. Buddy Sportsman, attired in beige lace, attended the guest book. Mrs. Patti Hansen, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Richard Holms served the cake and punch. Both wore black, with corsages in the bride's colors.

The bride's traveling costume was of blue mohair tweed with a fur collar, blue patent shoes and included a corsage of gardenias. The wedding trip involved Denver, Golden, and other areas of Colorado. The couple is now residing in Colorado Springs.

Out - of - town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kallsen, aunt and uncle of the bride, Mr. and Mrs Kent Kallsen, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allabaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Postalwait, Pat Glassey and daughter, all of Denver. Others were Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Vincient, Vodie Vincient, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Holms, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lindsey, all of La Junta. Mary O'Neill and her fiance attended from Golden.

The bride attended Blair Business College.

Banquet to Be Held in Honor Of Officer

Monte Rosa Rebekah Lodge 4 will hold a special meeting at 7:45 p.m., Friday in the IOOF Hall, 128 N. Nevada. Mrs. Hazel Peterman, assembly president will make her official visit at this time. All members and visiting Rebekahs are cordially invited. Esther Buss, Noble Grand, will preside.

A banquet will precede the meeting at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $1.50.

Great Books Group Will Discuss Work of Fromm

The Wednesday evening Great Books group will meet from 8 to 10 p.m. at the home of Mrs. D. E. Newton, 24 Oak Ave., Broadmoor, for a discussion of Erich Fromm's "The Art of Loving."

The small book is available in paperback and the only requirement for participation in its discussion is the careful reading of the particular assignment for the evening. Charlene Sackchewsky will conduct the questioning and will base her directions on (1) what the author says, (2) how it may be interpreted by the reader, and (3) how the insights may be applied to the problems of today.

These meetings of the Great Books group are a part of the project in adult education which was begun at Chicago University, continued by the Great Books Foundation of Chicago, and, locally, sponsored by the public library.

Regular meetings are held on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month in the office of Marguerite Reid, librarian, 21 W. Kiowa St. Further information will be given to any interested person who telephones the coordinator, Myrtle Allen, 635-8540.

The bride's mother wore a beige brocade suit with matching accessories. The bridegroom's mother chose a three-piece blue suit. Both wore orchid corsages.

The reception was held after the ceremony in the church fellowship hall.

The couple honeymooned at Crystal Lake Lodge, at Pine, Colo. They are now residing in Ft. Collins, where the bridegroom is in his senior year at Colorado State University.

The bride is a graduate of Arvada Senior High School and attended the University of Colorado. The bridegroom is a graduate of Fountain High School and is majoring in mechanical engineering. He is a member of Pi Tau Sigma, Sigma Tau, and the American Society of Mechanical Engineers.

Change of Pace

By GAYNOR MADDOX
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

After holiday parties and feasting, plain food seems a particularly welcome change of pace. How does this recipe for cabbage with ham appeal to you? Or this steak stuffed with rice? They should please you after the week of rich food.

Dilled Cabbage with Ham
(6 to 10 servings)

2 lb. head cabbage, shredded
1 cup julienne smoked ham
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill
1 ¼ teaspoons salt
1-16 teaspoon ground ginger per
1-16 teaspoon ground giner

Place cabbage in a saucepan with 1-inch boiling salted water. Bring to boiling point and cook, uncovered, for 4 minutes. Cover and cook 2 minutes longer. Drain, if necessary. Add remaining ingredients and toss lightly.

Rice Stuffed Flank Steak
(4 to 6 servings)

1 flank steak about 1½ pounds)
½ teaspoon salt
Dash pepper
¼ cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1 cup cooked rice
1 tablespoon butter
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons shortening
1 can (10½ ounces) condensed cream of mushroom soup
¼ cup water

Pound flank steak with meat hammer or edge of heavy saucer; sprinkle with salt and pepper. Cook celery and onion in butter until tender; combine with rice and parsley; spread on steak. Roll steak as for jelly roll; fasten with skewers. In oven-proof skillet, brown rolled steak in shortening. Pour off drippings. Blend soup and water; pour over steak. Cover; bake in moderate oven (350 degrees) tender. Baste now and then. If desired, cover may be removed during last 15 minutes to thicken gravy.

Xi Upsilons to Meet With May McKendrick

XI Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will meet at 8 p.m. Monday. Miss May McKendrick will hostess at her home, 2205 Robin Dr. Mrs. Howard Miller will present the program after a short business meeting.

When you are forming pie dough into a ball before rolling out, gather up the dough with both palms; press firmly together. Don't pat the dough together, or you'll probably overwork it. Turn the dough as you press it so that you have a ball-shaped mass.

MR. AND MRS. LARRY ALLEN SPORTSMAN

Sportsman-Bostwick Rites Held at Lutheran Church

Gretchen Sue Bostwick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Bostwick, Austin, Tex., was married to Larry Allen Sportsman, son of Mrs. Ola Sportsman, Colorado Springs, at 2 p.m., Dec. 13, in the Shepard of the Hills Lutheran Church. The Rev. Robert C. Jacobson performed the ceremony.

Blue, green, and white altar flowers decorated the church. Candelabra were tied with blue and green streamers.

Organist William Hulka played Handel's "Aria in F. Minor," as the processional, and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," recessional. Other music included "O Perfect Love," "Vesper Hour," "Love's Greeting," "Cantileno," and "Jesus Joy of Man's Desiring. Soloist Les Bailey sang "Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a brocaded satin A-line dress with a chapel train and a heart shaped neckline. The train was caught into a bustle held by a cabbage rose. Her jewelry was a silver bell with a rhinestone center, a gift from the bridegroom. The veil was chapel length. The bride carried one large white gardenia surrounded by holly leaves, on a white Bible.

Miss Stella Friddle, maid of honor, wore blue satin with blue accessories, and green leaves on a white muff. Her jewelry was a small gold cage filled with aurora borialis chips. Rita Mead, bridesmaid, wore blue with green accessories, with dress like Miss Friddles.

Ring bearers were Kevelyn Hansen, niece of the bride, and Joe Davis, nephew of the bridegroom. Melvin Fox was best man while ushers were Buddy Sportsman, brother of the bridegroom, Eric Bostwick, brother of the bride, and Colby Lively.

The reception was held in the church parlor. The cake was three-tiers with pink bells on top. Lime punch was served with red, green, and white mints in the shape of bells.

Mrs. Buddy Sportsman, attired in beige lace, attended the guest book. Mrs. Patti Hansen, sister of the bride, and Mrs. Richard Holms served the cake and punch. Both wore black, with corsages in the bride's colors.

The bride's traveling costume was of blue mohair tweed with a fur collar, blue patent shoes and included a corsage of gardenias. The wedding trip involved Denver, Golden, and other areas of Colorado. The couple is now residing in Colorado Springs.

Out - of - town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Kallsen, aunt and uncle of the bride, Mr. and Mrs Kent Kallsen, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Allabaugh, Mr. and Mrs. Glen Postalwait, Pat Glassey and daughter, all of Denver. Others were Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Vincient, Vodie Vincient, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Holms, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lindsey, all of La Junta. Mary O'Neill and her fiance attended from Golden.

The bride attended Blair Business College.

Banquet to Be Held in Honor Of Officer

Monte Rosa Rebekah Lodge 4 will hold a special meeting at 7:45 p.m., Friday in the IOOF Hall, 128 N. Nevada. Mrs. Hazel Peterman, assembly president will make her official visit at this time. All members and visiting Rebekahs are cordially invited. Esther Buss, Noble Grand, will preside.

A banquet will precede the meeting at 6:30 p.m. Tickets are $1.50.

Great Books Group Will Discuss Work of Fromm

The Wednesday evening Great Books group will meet from 8 to 10 p.m. at the home of Mrs. D. E. Newton, 24 Oak Ave., Broadmoor, for a discussion of Erich Fromm's "The Art of Loving."

The small book is available in paperback and the only requirement for participation in its discussion is the careful reading of the particular assignment for the evening. Charlene Sackchewsky will conduct the questioning and will base her directions on (1) what the author says, (2) how it may be interpreted by the reader, and (3) how the insights may be applied to the problems of today.

These meetings of the Great Books group are a part of the project in adult education which was begun at Chicago University, continued by the Great Books Foundation of Chicago, and, locally, sponsored by the public library.

Regular meetings are held on the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month in the office of Marguerite Reid, librarian, 21 W. Kiowa St. Further information will be given to any interested person who telephones the coordinator, Myrtle Allen, 635-8546.

The Mature Parent

No Excessive Sympathy

By Mrs. Muriel Lawrence
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

DEAR MRS. LAWRENCE: My boy, 8, is the child of my ex-husband. Within the past four years he has had to adjust to my divorce as well as my marriage to his stepfather. I am expecting another child and am worried about his adjustment to this. He will feel extreme jealousy of the baby, I am sure, because of these other insecurities of his life and his uncertainty of his place in his home with his stepfather and me. . .

ANSWER: You have a right to this coming baby. At least, it seems so to me. And your sympathy with your son's prospective jealousy is fine. It would be even finer to make some room in yourself for your feelings of pleasure about this new baby. Otherwise, you may lose them in your sympathy for your son.

And you'll find yourself treating him so apologetically that you'll confirm his jealousy's conviction that you've done him great wrong by having another child. Your excessive sympathy will say to him, "You're entitled to feel badly used. I think you are badly used, too."

Jealousy is fear that we are a disappointment to another person. It becomes destructive in us or in children when this fear is confirmed by our experience.

If, as time passes, your son discovers that you and his stepfather are as interested in him as you are in the baby, his fear that he is disappointing to you will begin to dissolve. As the baby ceases to threaten him with painful comparsions between your interest in it and your interest in him, he may begin to like it. He may emerge from his struggle with jealousy surer of his own worth than he was when he entered it.

This baby's arrival does not necessarily mean disaster for him. It can be the very opportunity he needs to outgrow these "insecurities" you speak of. It can be the crisis that forces him to see the "bad" things which have happened with new eyes and new acceptance.

Learning that the baby has deprived him of nothing valuable may be exactly what he needs to realize that he has not been defeated by his other problems, either.

It will be your own unworried joy in this new baby that will insist that brotherhood is not going to be a cruel and unjust experience.

MR. AND MRS. JAMES F. DAVIS
* * * * * *

James F. Davis Weds Loeda Faye Grundeitz

Loeda Faye Grundeitz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grundeitz, 806 E. Cache La Poudre, was married at 3 p.m. Dec. 27, to James F. Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Davis, 528 W. Bijou. The ceremony was performed by Dr. Ben F. Lehmberg at Lehmberg Chapel.

The church was decorated with winter greens and carnation flower arrangements. Music included "Because" and "Wither Thou Goest," played by Margo Deitrich.

The bride, dressed in a white satin floor-length gown, was given in marriage by her father. The dress had a lace bodice with a scallop neckline and a pointed waist line with pleats. Her veil was attached to a crown of lace and pearls. She wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom, and carried a handkerchief carried by the bridegroom's mother and sister at their weddings. The bride's flowers were white carnations and a white orchid on a white Bible.

Maid of honor was Eva Ann Grundeitz, sister of the bride, attired in light green satin, with pearls, and carrying carnations and ivy. Other attendants included Mrs. Ray Fuller, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Ronald Pavey.

Ring bearer Danny Cooper carried the rings on a pillow of lace and satin presented by Mrs. Grace Matteson, cousin of the bride. Flower girl Terry McGann, niece of the bride, wore pale green satin and carried a basket of carnations.

Lt. Ray Fuller, brother-in-law of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Dale Banister and Wayne Rollf, cousins to the families. Sally McGann sat at the guest book.

The bride's mother wore a green suit with a yellow rose corsage. The groom's mother was dressed in brown and followed the yellow rose theme.

Out-of-town guests include Lt. and Mrs. Ray Fuller, Cibolo, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. John Mathews and family, Clever, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cross and family, Denver, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hoch and Kent, Wichita, Kan.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rollf and Wayne, Alta Vista, Kan.; Alice Clem, Baldwin, Kan.; Mr. Harry Hoch, Junction City, Kan.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sengbeil, Calhan, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ullom and Connie, Calhan, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. James Hays and family, Calhan, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kelley, Denver, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Pavey, Falcon, Colo.; and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Falter, Alta Vista, Kan.

The bride attended Alta Vista High School at Calhan, and Southwestern College, Winfield, Kan. The bridegroom went to Colorado Springs High School and the Wichita Technical Institute. He is employed at KKTV.

Col. Price Will Address Couples Club at Church

The Bethany Lutheran Church Couples Club will meet Wednesday at the church parlor to hear Col. Price lecture and to see his films of Germany.

Col. Price is currently deputy for the 4606th Air Base Wing with Headquarters Air Defense Command. Col. Price's efforts to further German-American understanding took him to Germany as a guest of the Federal Republic in 1963 and again in 1964. In 1963 the Order of Merit, First Class of the Federal Republic of Germany was conferred upon Col. Price for his service in the interest of Germany and the United States.

Col. Price's German work included giving illustrated lectures and talks to German military and civilian audiences.

MR. AND MRS. STEVEN KENT HATHAWAY
* * * * * *

Phyllis Lynn Fowler Is Bride of Steven Hathaway

The marriage of Miss Phyllis Lynn Fowler and Steven Kent Hathaway took place at 2:30 p.m., Dec. 13, at the First Methodist Church, Greeley. The Rev. Laird Loveland officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson H. Fowler, 3030 Wood Ave. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace K. Barth, Littleton.

The bride was given in marraige by her father. She wore a two-piece suit of white brocade satin with matching accessories. She carried a colonial bouquet of red roses on a white Bible.

Miss Joan Elaine Bishop was maid of honor. She wore a street-length dress of rose brocade satin with matching halo hat and veil.

Kenneth A. Dickson was best man. James Quirk, Denver, served as usher. Robert Loveland, organist, played a medley of love songs and the wedding march.

A reception was held in the church parlor following the ceremony. Miss Judy Jeffers, Billings, Mont., served punch. Miss Barbara Whipple, Denver, presided at the guest book.

The bride's mother, wearing an olive green suit with contrasting accessories, received the guests. Her corsage consisted of gold roses. The bridegroom's mother chose a light blue knit suit with pink accessories and gold roses.

Save by Learning to Mend

Buttons are high fashion this season. It seems never before have so many been used, and by top designers too. Buttons are smart, but sometimes they do pull off and snare the fabric.

Illustration (A) shows how you place a tiny piece of fabric under the tear. (AA) shows wrong side. By stitching back and forth over the stay piece, you make the fabric secure so that the button can be sewn directly over the tear, and thus conceal the repair stitching.

Illustration (B) shows how to bind a frayed edge, usually a cuff. Simply cover the edge with bias binding in a color to match, and stitch neatly.

With shift dresses being so popular, many of them have princess darts that pull along the stitching and are ugly — see (C). Illustration (D) shows how the seam looks on the wrong side after a row of stitching has been added to take in the pulled part.

After you have stitched inside the frayed edges, and beyond all the separated threads on the wrong side of your garment, press the seam open. Place, as in (E), a strip of seam binding over the pressed-open seam and catch it with short uneven basting to each side of the seam, but free of the dress. The seam binding strengthens the seam, helps to keep it from pulling again and provides a real protection.

Snares and holes: Often in a sheet or pillow case, sometimes in play clothes, an L-shaped tear occurs. Place the tear over a piece of tissue. See (F). Baste all four sides. Stitch back and forth across the tear. Use a short stitch and rows about ⅛ inch apart. The tissue washes away and your mend is secure.

So often a cigarette burns a good tablecloth or place mat. Try to get a light-weight piece of fabric of the same color. Place this back of the hole. Baste to place see (G). Trim away the least amount possible to remove the brown. Then handdarn back and forth, turn and darn across your first stitches. Do this as neatly as possible, but make the mend secure.

I've heard women say they wish that towel manufacturers would make the selvage of terry towels stronger so they could not tear on the edges. Unfortunately, towels do tear and need mending.

A simple way is to stitch back and forth along the selvage as shown in (H). If the tear extends beyond the selvage, then stitch in as far as necessary. Use a short stitch and matching color thread.

Wash cloths, as well as bath towles, can be mended this way, and if you use terry dish towels, repair them when necessary to prolong their time of service.

There's nothing truer than a "stitch in time saves nine." Mend before washing whenever possible.

Nylon lace edging is a good mending aid for lingerie. Stitch or zigzag it on frayed edges. Such lace freshens as well as mends and gives a new look to worn items, especially slips, nighties and panties.

The next meeting will be Feb. 11 at the home of Mrs. Glen Shrum.

Temperature Varies

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—A child's temperature can vary from hour to hour and there are wide individual variations from the normal 98.6 degree mark, so mothers should not become unduly excited every time a child has a fever.

So say two New Orleans pediatricians writing in "Postgraduate Medicine." Many normal children have oral temperatures of 99 to 100 degrees F. daily, and even higher readings after exercise or emotional excitement, Dr. G. James Fruthaler and Dr. Thomas Tilden of the Ochsner Clinic Department of Pediatrics point out.

The church was decorated with winter greens and carnation flower arrangements. Music included "Because" and "Wither Thou Goest," played by Margo Deitrich.

The bride, dressed in a white satin floor-length gown, was given in marriage by her father. The dress had a lace bodice with a scallop neckline and a pointed waist line with pleats. Her veil was attached to a crown of lace and pearls. She wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom, and carried a handkerchief carried by the bridegroom's mother and sister at their weddings. The bride's flowers were white carnations and a white orchid on a white Bible.

Maid of honor was Eva Ann Grundeitz, sister of the bride, attired in light green satin, with pearls, and carrying carnations and ivy. Other attendants included Mrs. Ray Fuller, sister of the bridegroom, and Mrs. Ronald Pavey.

Ring bearer Danny Cooper carried the rings on a pillow of lace and satin presented by Mrs. Grace Matteson, cousin of the bride. Flower girl Terry McGann, niece of the bride, wore pale green satin and carried a basket of carnations.

Lt. Ray Fuller, brother-in-law of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Dale Banister and Wayne Rollf, cousins to the families. Sally McGann sat at the guest book.

The bride's mother wore a green suit with a yellow rose corsage. The groom's mother was dressed in brown and followed the yellow rose theme.

The bride wore a peacock blue dress with black accessories and a white orchid corsage for the Denver wedding trip. The couple will reside in Colorado Springs.

Out-of-town guests include Lt. and Mrs. Ray Fuller, Cibolo, Tex.; Mr. and Mrs. John Mathews and family, Clever, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cross and family, Denver, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hoch and Kent, Wichita, Kan.; Mr. and Mrs. Harold Rollf and Wayne, Alta Vista, Kan.; Alice Clem, Baldwin, Kan.; Mr. Harry Hoch, Junction City, Kan.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sengbeil, Calhan, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ullom and Connie, Calhan, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. James Hays and family, Calhan, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kelley, Denver, Colo.; Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Pavey, Falcon, Colo.; and Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Falter, Alta Vista, Kan.

The bride attended Alta Vista High School at Calhan, and Southwestern College, Winfield, Kan. The bridegroom went to Colorado Springs High School and the Wichita Technical Institute. He is employed at KKTV.

Col. Price Will Address Couples Club at Church

The Bethany Lutheran Church Couples Club will meet Wednesday at the church parlor to hear Col. Price lecture and to see his films of Germany.

Col. Price is currently deputy for the 4080th Air Base Wing with Headquarters Air Defense Command. Col. Price's efforts to further German-American understanding took him to Germany as a guest of the Federal Republic in 1962 and again in 1964. In 1963 the Order of Merit, First Class of the Federal Republic of Germany was conferred upon Col. Price for his service in the interest of Germany and the United States.

Col. Price's German work included giving illustrated lectures and talks to German military and civilian audiences.

MR. AND MRS. STEVEN KENT HATHAWAY

* * * * * *

Phyllis Lynn Fowler Is Bride of Steven Hathaway

The marriage of Miss Phyllis Lynn Fowler and Steven Kent Hathaway took place at 2:30 p.m., Dec. 13, at the First Methodist Church, Greeley. The Rev. Laird Loveland officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson H. Fowler, 3030 Wood Ave. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace K. Barth, Littleton.

The bride was given in marraige by her father. She wore a two-piece suit of white brocade satin with matching accessories. She carried a colonial bouquet of red roses on a white Bible.

Miss Joan Elaine Bishop was maid of honor. She wore a street-length dress of rose brocade satin with matching halo hat and veil.

Kenneth A. Dickson was best man. James Quirk, Denver, served as usher. Robert Loveland, organist, played a medley of love songs and the wedding march.

A reception was held in the church parlor following the ceremony. Miss Judy Jeffers, Billings, Mont., served punch. Miss Barbara Whipple, Denver, presided at the guest book.

The bride's mother, wearing an olive green suit with contrasting accessories, received the guests. Her corsage consisted of gold roses. The bridegroom's mother chose a light blue knit suit with pink accessories and gold roses.

Save by Learning to Mend

Buttons are high fashion this season. It seems never before have so many been used, and by top designers too. Buttons are smart, but sometimes they do pull off and snare the fabric.

Illustration (A) shows how you place a tiny piece of fabric under the tear. (AA) shows wrong side. By stitching back and forth over the stay piece, you make the fabric secure so that the button can be sewn directly over the tear, and thus conceal the repair stitching.

Illustration (B) shows how to bind a frayed edge, usually a cuff. Simply cover the edge with bias binding in a color to match, and stitch neatly.

With shift dresses being so popular, many of them have princess darts that pull along the stitching and are ugly — see (C). Illustration (D) shows how the seam looks on the wrong side after a row of stitching has been added to take in the pulled part.

After you have stitched inside the frayed edges, and beyond all the separated threads on the wrong side of your garment, press the seam open. Place, as in (E), a strip of seam binding over the pressed-open seam and catch it with short uneven basting to each side of the seam, but free of the dress. The seam binding strengthens the seam, helps to keep it from pulling again and provides a real protection.

Snares and holes: Often in a sheet or pillow case, sometimes in play clothes, an L-shaped tear occurs. Place the tear over a piece of tissue. See (F). Baste all four sides. Stitch back and forth across the tear. Use a short stitch and rows about ⅛ inch apart. The tissue washes away and your mend is secure.

So often a cigarette burns a good tablecloth or place mat. Try to get a light-weight piece of fabric of the same color. Place this back of the hole. Baste to place see (G). Trim away the least amount possible to remove the brown. Then handdarn back and forth, turn and darn across your first stitches. Do this as neatly as possible, but make the mend secure.

I've heard women say they wish that towel manufacturers would make the selvage of terry towe's stronger so they could not tear on the edges. Unfortunately, towels do tear and need mending.

A simple way is to stitch back and forth along the selvage as shown in (H). If the tear extends beyond the selvage, then stitch in as far as necessary. Use a short stitch and matching color thread.

Wash cloths, as well as bath towels, can be mended this way, and if you use terry dish towels, repair them when necessary to prolong their time of service.

There's nothing truer than a "stitch in time saves nine." Mend before washing whenever possible.

Nylon lace edging is a good mending aid for lingerie. Stitch or zigzag it on frayed edges. Such lace freshens as well as mends and gives a new look to worn items, especially slips, nighties and panties.

Temperature Varies

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—A child's temperature can vary from hour to hour and there are wide individual variations from the normal 98.6 degree mark, so mothers should not become unduly excited every time a child has a fever.

So say two New Orleans pediatricians writing in "Postgraduate Medicine." Many normal children have oral temperatures of 99 to 100 degrees F. daily, and even higher readings after exercise or emotional excitement, Dr. G. James Fruthaler and Dr. Thomas Tilden of the Ochsner Clinic Department of Pediatrics point out.

Dear Abby--

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Speak Up, but . . .

DEAR ABBY: Our church dinners begin promptly at 6:30 and could be over by 8:00 PM, but after the meal, we are a captive audience for amateur singers, dancers, magicians an long - winded speakers. The chairs provided for us are the wooden folding type, which are utter agony after the first two hours.

Most people would prefer to move about after dinner to visit with friends, or make an early evening of it and go home. Last week we were pinned to those chairs from 6:30 until 11:00 PM while various speakers droned on. All I heard around me was, "My back is killing me! How much longer can this go on? My feet are going to sleep." And, "Would it be awful if I sneaked out?" Print this, Abby. The guilty ones will know who they are. Or maybe I should write an anonymous letter to the people who plan the "entertainment"? —HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Why an anonymous letter? Yours is a legitimate complaint, so write to the chairman of the program committee and sign your name. But don't be surprised if YOU are offered the job next year.

DEAR ABBY: I recently read that a group of parents, teachers and clergymen in a midwestern city drew up a code of teen-age behavior which tells teen-agers of all ages what time to be home from dates, where they may and may not go (drive-ins are out for couples under 17), how they should dress, wear their hair, and conduct themselves generally. What is your opinion of such a code? —ANXIOUS PARENT

DEAR PARENT: You rattled the right cage. I am, in principle, opposed to teen codes and I made such a statement to some 1500 students in Louisville, Kentucky, last year. The following morning I was invited to amplify my statement at breakfast with 12 Louisville clergymen. I said: "The rules of dating, dress and conduct of teen-agers should be the responsibility of their parents. (Perhaps some parents have even a stricter code.) In my opinion, the 'code' is the second line of defense for parents whose children have stopped listening to them long ago. Those are the parents who, when they first said NO, got the argument, 'Well, everyone else can,' and didn't have the courage to say, 'We don't care what "everyone else" can do. YOU are our responsibility. And YOU may not. Period!' How much more sense it would make simply to say to your teenagers, 'You may not go to the Prom breakfast because we don't want you riding in an automobile driven by a boy who hasn't slept in 24 hours,' than to say, 'You can't go because on page four in the Teen Code it says, "Prom breakfasts should be forbidden," so, because no one else is doing it, you can't either.'

"Why humiliate the 'good' teen-agers in a community by imposing on them a code of behavior? Those who will obey the code don't need it. And those who need it, won't pay any attention to it.

"I have no right to set up rules and regulations for the children of others, and no one has the right to impose their rules on my children. Let each parent assume the responsibility of rearing and disciplining his own child."

HINTS FROM Heloise

By HELOISE CRUSE

Dear Folks:

Here is another new idea . . . I can't tell you why or how this works . . . but it does!

When we clean our ovens and broilers, no matter what method we use, there is always that little wiggly rack-holder gadget along the sides of it. How do we get the grease spatters off?

Some of these sides cannot be removed and soaked in your bathtub with electric dishwasher compounds like the grates and other removable parts. Soap-filled pads just do not get completely up into these grooves, do they?

I have learned, after testing many, many times, a new way to do this!

Buy some electric dishwasher compound that is ordinarily used to wash dishes in an electric dishwasher.

Wet a paper napkin or paper towel under your water faucet and shake off the water. Sprinkle the paper napkin with that wonderful new dishwasher compound you bought! Sprinkle it just as if you were using salt. The granules will adhere to the wet paper napkin or towel.

Now, the secret is to take this wet, sprinkled paper napkin and, holding it against the sides of those grooves, press the sprinkled side into the grooves with your fingers.

Within twenty minutes (and if you leave it there two hours it doesn't make any difference, so long as the paper napkin does not dry out), you can remove that paper napkin, and it will be black as tar!

All accumulated carbon in these little grooves will be dissolved.

Do not waste this napkin you have treated. After you remove it, use it to wipe those little, dirty grooves.

Use this same napkin and turn it over to the other side to rub-a-dub-dub until you get most of the soil off. And it will come off, you better believe it, gals.

Then, before using any kind of rinse water, just take a soap-filled pad and wipe the grooves. You will be as amazed as I was. Naturally, you can rinse this later with a slight vinegar-water solution.

Gals, this is the only way I know of to get 'em "really" clean!

Aren't ovens awful when it comes time to clean? But aren't they wonderful when it comes time to cook?

Happy cleaning and good cookin'. —Heloise

Dear Heloise:

Include drinking straws in your children's lunch kit. No spills from pouring; no dirty caps to replace on thermos; and best of all, a clean face to show the teacher the rest of the day. —Mrs. T. Antunez

Dear Heloise:

Veal Has German Flavor

By GAYNOR MADDOX

Herr Albert Mueller, member of an exclusive gourmet society of leading chefs, was manager of the Lowenbrau Gardens at New York's World's Fair last seaon. Wearing the gold chain of the "Confrerie de la Chaine des Rotisseurs de Paris," our German host entertained us in the 18th century Bavarian garden.

Yes, of course there was beer. But the main course was an amazing platter of veal rib, garnished with glazed apricots and spiced crabapples.

Geroestete Kalbsrippe Mit Fruechten Garniert
Roast Rib of Veal with candied fruits
(6 to 8 servings)

1 five-pound whole rib of veal
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 teaspoon thyme
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
Salt and pepper to taste
Glazed apricots
Spiced crab apples

Preheat oven to 300 degrees. Combine olive oil, lemon juice, thyme and garlic with salt and pepper. Rub the mixture into the meat. Place roast, with fat side up, on a rack in a shallow open pan. Roast about three hours and twenty minutes, or 30 to 35 minutes per pound. When meat is done, remove to heated platter. Garnish with apricots, crab apples and parsley.

Braune Sosse
Brown Sauce
(6 to 8 servings)

2 cups warm water
¼ cup heavy cream
¼ cup flour
2 tablespoons butter
¼ teaspoon lemon juice
2 tablespoons brandy (optional)
Salt and pepper to taste

Pour off clear fat in roasting pan. Add 1 cup warm water to remaining drippings and stir until all brown bits are loosened. Gradually add flour, stirring with large spoon, untio smooth and brown. Add remaining water, heavy cream, butter, lemon juice, brandy and salt and pepper to taste. Bring mixture to boiling point over medium heat; cook, stirring well, until slightly thickened.

Here is another new idea . . . I can't tell you why or how this works . . . but it does!

When we clean our ovens and broilers, no matter what method we use, there is always that little wiggly rack-holder gadget along the sides of it. How do we get the grease spatters off?

Some of these sides cannot be removed and soaked in your bathtub with electric dishwasher compounds like the grates and other removable parts. Soap-filled pads just do not get completely up into these grooves, do they?

I have learned, after testing many, many times, a new way to do this!

Buy some electric dishwasher compound that is ordinarily used to wash dishes in an electric dishwasher.

Wet a paper napkin or paper towel under your water faucet and shake off the water. Sprinkle the paper napkin with that wonderful new dishwasher compound you bought! Sprinkle it just as if you were using salt. The granules will adhere to the wet paper napkin or towel.

Now, the secret is to take this wet, sprinkled paper napkin and, holding it against the sides of those grooves, press the sprinkled side into the grooves with your fingers.

Within twenty minutes (and if you have it there two hours it doesn't make any difference, so long as the paper napkin does not dry out), you can remove that paper napkin, and it will be black as tar!

All accumulated carbon in those little grooves will be dissolved.

Do not waste this napkin you have treated. After you remove it, use it to wipe those little, dirty grooves.

Use this same napkin and turn it over to the other side to rub-a-dub-dub until you get most of the soil off. And it will come off, you better believe it, gals.

Then, before using any kind of soapy water, just take a soap-filled pad and wipe the grooves. You will be as amazed as I was. Naturally, you can rinse this later with a slight vinegar-water solution.

Gals, this is the only way I know of to get 'em "really" clean!

Aren't ovens awful when it comes time to clean? But aren't they wonderful when it comes time to cook?

Happy cleaning and good cookin'. —Heloise

Fourth Arrest Made In Shooting of Cop

DENVER (AP)—Police made their fourth arrest Friday in connection with the fatal shooting of Denver Patrolman Paul L. Major.

Lee Vigil, 22, of Denver, was jailed after admitting that before the shooting he was with two of three youths now being held by police.

At the time, the suspects were obtaining help to push the stolen car later chased by Major and his patrol partner.

Police said Vigil has refused to identify a third person believed to have been in the auto.

Police arrested three persons Wednesday night, when the policeman was slain.

They wee Juan Robet Lucero, 19, Daniel P.F. Luceo, 18, and Phillip Demesio Gonzales, 24.

Bill Would Allow Payment for Car

DENVER (AP) — A bill was introduced in the Colorado Legislature Friday to pay $700 to a Pueblo woman whose car was wrecked in an escape by two convicts from the Colorado Honor Farm near Pueblo.

Rep. Betty Kirk West, D-Pueblo, the sponsor, said the escapees tried to kidnap Mrs. Leslie J. Carter last April 29. She escaped, but one took her car. He wrecked it and was killed in the accident. The other man was recaptured.

Mrs. Carter had no collision insurance on the car, and the $700 would be used to replace it.

U.S. Economy Continues Strong, Survey Shows

By JACK LEFLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Evidence piled up this week that the economy, approaching the start of its fifth year of upturn, continues strong.

The government released statistics showing gains in December in three important indicators — housing starts, orders for durable goods and personal income.

At the same time, the stock market rose to a historic high, as measured by the popular averages.

About the only major dark spot was the Maine-to-Texas dock strike which made its effects felt as it entered its second week.

The Department of Commerce reported an 8 per cent increase in new housing starts. This was considered significant because it followed an 11 per cent decline in November.

Housing starts in December ran at an annual rate of 1,541,000, about 8 per cent higher than November but 2 per cent below December 1963.

For 1964, starts totaled 1,543,000, about 4 per cent under the 1963 total of 1,609,200.

Most of the gain in December was in the South and Northeast sections, with a decline in the north central states and only a slight increase in the West.

New orders for durable goods totaled $20.3 billion, up 13 per cent from December 1963. Shipments were a record total of $20.4 billion and unfilled orders amounted to $53.5 billion, $6.8 billion higher than a year earlier.

Personal income in December climbed to an annual rate of $505.7 billion, up $3.5 billion from November.

In all of 1964 personal income set a record of $491.5 billion, a gain of $27 billion above the previous high of 1963.

Big factors in the increase in personal income in December were a $2-billion gain in wages and salaries and a $750-million increase in corporate dividends.

The stock market on Tuesday capped a strong January rally by attaining an all-time peak. The widely followed Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose to 896.27, just short of the 900-mark. The next day it backed away.

Brokers attributed the market's fine showing to dividend increases, good corporate earnings reports, lessened worry about the international monetary situation, and hopes that President Johnson will be able to avoid labor troubles.

Despite these good signs, some economists had some doubts about the future.

Tilford C. Gaines, vice president of the First National Bank of Chicago, said a mild recession before the end of the year is a good possibility.

"It is my judgment," he added, "that the economy will grow weary as the year progresses and that a sidewise movement or a much reduced rate of growth may be the best we should expect in the last two quarters."

The dock strike had idled 60,000 men and 343 ships. The cost to the economy was estimated at $67 million a day.

Colorado Milling & Elevator Co., with its warehouses bulging, curtailed flour production in all eight of its mills east of the Rocky Mountains.

Mohawk Rubber Co. of Akron trimmed production of tires destined for foreign markets because its warehouses were stuffed with tires that couldn't be shipped.

The Erie Lackawanna Railroad furloughed 400 workers in its marine division. Truck lines in New York laid off 3,500 divers.

However, the automobile and steel industries operated at near capacity.

Passenger car output this week was estimated at 209,200, up slightly from 207,074 last week and 17 per cent above the 178,471 turned out a year ago.

General Motors worked Saturday at 16 of its assembly plants, and Ford operated 14 plants the extra day.

SAVES A MILLION DOLLARS — Major Ralph L. LeFevre, Director of Supply and Services, Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel at the 9th Aerospace Defense Division (ADC), was recently awarded the Air Force Cost Reduction Certificate by Major General Horace A. Hanes (right) Division Commander. As the 9th Division Cost Reduction Officer during fiscal year 1964, Major LeFevre conducted indoctrination programs and offered individual assistance to Division personnel which resulted in a validated savings of over one million dollars being submitted to Air Defense

VIDEO VIOLENCE

ELIZABETH, N.J. (AP) — "The violence on TV is misleading and confusing," a surgeon told a group of schoolchildren in a talk here, as he cautioned them against copying in real life the physical brutality they see on the screen.

Dr. Joseph Y. Bloom, attending oral surgeon at Alexian Brothers Hospital, pointed out that in the movies the good guy gets up and dusts himself off after a blow on the head with a rifle butt. In real life, he warned, such a blow could damage the brain and brain tissues and perhaps leave the victim paralyzed for life.

As a World War II Army officer, Herbert Brodkin, executive producer of "The Defenders," supervised production of hundreds of U.S.O. shows.

MAN VS. WILDLIFE

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (AP)—A wildlife ecologist in the School of Forestry at Pennsylvania State University is making a survey of how the presence of man has influenced wildlife on the Antarctic Continent, the the request of the National Science Foundation.

In particular, the ecologist, Dr. John L. George, will try to determine whether the Antarctic continent has been polluted inadvertently by radioactive or chemical contamination. For the study, he will concentrate on bird and mammalian carnivores, or meat eaters, as the highest links in the ecological chain that begins with one-celled plants. Samples representing as many carnivore species as possible will be collected, frozen, and returned to Penn State for detailed chemical analysis.
